BIG WELCOME AT ALTOONA

DIAZ AND JACQUES ARRIVE

Coolidge Also in Kansas City for Convention Opening Today—Beatty on the Way.

Special to The New York Times.

ON BOARD MARSHAL FOCH'S SPECIAL TRAIN, EN ROUTE TO KANSAS CITY, PITTSBURGH, Oct. 30.—While his train rocked at dizzy speed around the bends of the Autumn tinted Alleghanies this afternoon, Marshal Foch dictated the following telegram to the American Legion convention that will begin tomorrow at Kansas City, where he will arrive tomorrow night:

> To My Brave Comrades of the American Legion:
> Today you are assembling in your third annual convention. I send you greetings that come from the heart of one soldier to another as you begin your deliberations.
>
> My prayers go up not only for all men and women who did their duty in the World War, but for those men who, having returned to pursuits of peace, have banded themselves together to preserve those traditions of liberty, truth and justice for which we fought. It will be an inexpressible pleasure soon to be with you.
>
> FOCH.

General Pershing, who is accompanying Marshal Foch on the 1,600-mile trip to Kansas City from Washington, the longest train ride the Marshal has taken, sent this message:

> Greetings to the American Legion on the opening day of its convention and congratulations upon its spirit, which is to stand always for those things for which we fought.
> PERSHING.

Marshal Foch appeared to enjoy himself thoroughly on the all-day run between Washington and Pittsburgh. No matter how small the Pennsylvania towns along the route were, little groups of people, waving American and French flags, gathered at the stations hopeful of catching a glimpse of the allied military leader as his train rushed by. These evidences of the regard of country folk seemed to touch the Marshal as much as the cheers of the thousands at cities where the Foch train stopped—York, Harrisburg, Altoona and Pittsburgh. Seated in the window of the rear platform of his car, Marshal Foch, with his reading glasses on his nose, alternated between preparing his Kansas City speech and looking at the scenery, much of which resembles the rugged hills of Southwestern France.

Delighted With Washington Visit.

The Marshal arose at 6:30 o'clock this morning and left Washington at 9:30.

"I am delighted with the splendid feeling I found in all circles in Washington," he said just before his departure. "The nation's Capital has overwhelmed me with kindness. This tour of the United States is one of the most enjoyable of my life, and I am overjoyed that the American Legion should be acting as my host, because the Legion is composed of fighters, of comrades, and we are brothers among ourselves."

Marshal Foch wore the same horizon blue whipcord uniform and high-laced boots that he has worn since he arrived in this country. He had discarded the Medaille Militaire and the American Distinguished Service Medal, and the only decoration he wore was the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor. Attached to his tunic were three ribbons representing the Medaille Militaire, the Croix de Guerre and the American Legion Ceremonial Badge.

At York the train stopped a minute for water, and 500 people sent up a great cheer as Marshal Foch appeared on the platform. General Pershing received a hearty greeting when he, too, stood in the doorway.

"Speech," cried the crowd to Pershing.

"No," he replied, "the Marshal is going to do all the talking on this trip."

Marshal Foch stood with his thumbs in his Sam Browne belt and smiled back at the crowd.

"Every one seems to be young in this village," he commented to General Pershing, who translated the remark to the people.

Big Greetings at Harrisburg.

Harrisburg gave Foch and Pershing a greeting that came straight from the heart. The tracks were lined with legionaries in uniform, and two little girls, born in France and dressed in tricolor, gave the Marshal a bouquet. Marshal Foch leaned over the platform and kissed each of them.

"I am deeply touched with this reception," he said while Francis E. Drake, commander of the Paris Legion Post, translated, "and I am happy to cross such a magnificent State. I regret that I cannot stay longer, for I would like to see more of you. I want to thank your local Legion post for its splendid greeting. I extend to you my affection as a former leader."

While he was speaking the train moved backward a few inches. "Oh, oh, oh!" exclaimed the Marshal, anxiously leaning forward. The crowd understood his warning and fell back.

That only 5,000 persons were at the station at Altoona was because there was no more room. Men and boys

Berlin Hears Reparations Will Come Up at Washington

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—It is reported here that the recent visit of Rudolf Havenstein, President of the Richsbank, to London was for the purpose of obtaining a postponement of the next reparations payment, as well as to negotiate credits for Germany.

According to statements made in well-informed circles, President Havenstein was told in London that the question of reparations would be submitted to the Washington Conference on Limitation of Armament.

CHINESE WELCOMED FOR ARMS MEETING

OFFICIAL HONORS ARE PAID

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Nearly one hundred members of the Chinese official contingent to the conference on the Far East and Pacific questions arrived in Washington tonight and had a rousing reception.

In spite of uncertainty as to the time when the special train bearing the party would arrive, several thousand people gathered in and around Union Station, some of whom waited for several hours. They were more enthusiastic than Washington crowds usually are and let the Chinese visitors know they were welcome.

None of the principal delegates was in the contingent which arrived. The group was headed by M. T. Liang, whose Chinese name is Liang Ju-Hao. He is the principal adviser of the delegation. One of the first Chinese students to be educated in the United States, he speaks English with great fluency. In China he is looked upon as one of the foremost men in the republican movement.

The other leading figures in the contingent which reached Washington were Vice Admiral Tsai Ting-Kan and Lo Wen-Kan, associate advisers, and Chung Mun-Yow, counselor of the delegation. Admiral Tsai and Mr. Chung were educated in the United States. Mr. Lo studied law at Oxford and is a member of the Inner Temple.

At the station the Chinese were greeted by a number of American civil officials and officers of the army and navy. Robert Woods Bliss, Third Assistant Secretary of State, extended the formal welcome in behalf of the State Department. With him were Charles Lee Cooke, Richard Southgate and Hugh Millard of the State Department; Rear Admiral C. S. Williams, Acting Chief of Naval Operations; Captain Hugh McNamee, Chief of the Office of Naval Intelligence; Commander Galbraith, Brig. Gen. Brewster, special liaison officer between the War Department and conference delegations, and Major Eichelberger. The Chinese delegation was accompanied from San Francisco by Colonel John B. McDonald of the army and Lieut. Commander W. D. Taylor of the navy.

Among those at the station to greet the Chinese visitors were Dr. John C. Ferguson, adviser to the President of China, and Dr. Paul S. Reinsch, former Minister to China. One of the first to greet Mr. Liang was Mrs. Yung Kwai, an American, who is the wife of the counselor of the Chinese Legation in Washington.

Escorted From the Station.

When Assistant Secretary Bliss and his associates had extended greetings, the Chinese were escorted to the east entrance of Union Station. There the entire party halted while a military band played the Chinese national anthem and "The Star-Spangled Banner." As the Chinese left the station in army motor cars, troops of the Third Cavalry from Fort Myer, Virginia, saluted and then galloped after the leading cars. A large number of pupils of a Chinese school in Washington, carrying Chinese and American flags, cheered, while there was considerable applause from the big crowd that was in the station plaza.

The procession of motor cars went rapidly to the Chinese Legation, where Mr. Liang will reside during the conference, and then proceeded to the residence of Mrs. F. Berger Moran at 2,315 Massachusetts Avenue, which has been taken over by the Chinese Government and where Admiral Tsai will stay. From the Moran house the rest of the

BELGRADE, Oct. 30.—The Hungarian situation is by no means completely settled by the failure of Charles Hapsburg's attempt to regain his throne, and it is not impossible that it may be more serious next week than last. The prevention of a Hapsburg restoration is matter in which the great powers are interested equally with the Little Entente, but the ultimatum of the latter to Hungary, which, according to the best information obtainable here, is likely to be dispatched Monday, deals with matters as to which Hungary may perhaps count on some indifference on the part of the major allies.

The members of the Little Entente have not yet completely agreed on the terms, and it is possible that they will be modified, but the sentiment here is that what Jugoslavia has demanded is necessary for the future safety of Czechoslovakia, Jugoslavia and Rumania.

The ultimatum will have a forty-eight-hour time limit, and opinion here at least is strong for the use of force if it is not accepted. Military measures are still envisaged as possible, although everybody here expects and hopes for a peaceful settlement. These hopes, however, are based only on the theory that Horthy will accept the ultimatum.

Rumania is understood to favor moderating the terms, but the demand is insistent for complete guarantees of future security.

I am convinced that the Jugoslav Government is not at all desirous of trouble, but unless Hungary accepts the ultimatum trouble is certain. The Little Entente means business, and peace or war may depend on the attitude of the big Entente toward Hungary.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 30.—Ex-Emperor Charles has again refused to sign his abdication. Government plenipotentiaries who went to Tihany, where Charles was interned, have reported his refusal to Admiral Horthy, the Regent, who has called a meeting of the Cabinet.

Reports that Jugoslavia and Czechoslovakia are making war preparations against Hungary have been received here with evidences of indigestion. It was asserted in Government circles today that the Government had been loyal in its attitude toward the Allies.

Thus far, it was said, no ultimatum had been received from the Little Entente.

Count Sigray and other political prisoners are being detained in comfortable cells, which are being inspected daily by representatives of the Allies. The imprisoned monarchists are permitted to see their wives.

Representatives of the powers handed to Foreign Minister Banffy a note today from the Council of Ambassadors, expressing satisfaction at the Hungarian Government's firmness in preventing the entry of Charles into the capital and his restoration to the throne, which menaced Central Europe's peace a second time. The note invited the Hungarian Government to place Charles in the hands of the British squadron and recalled the urgency of the Government's proclaiming his dethronement.

Representatives of the Little Entente insisted in conversations with the Foreign Minister that the Government take immediate measures to eliminate the house of Hapsburg, saying that otherwise the gravest consequences might result for Hungary.

BERNE, Oct. 30.—A bailiff visited Hertenstein yesterday for the purpose of executing an attachment against property of ex-Emperor Charles for 50,000 francs in favor of the Swiss Airplane Company, in one of the planes of which Charles made his recent flight into Hungary.

It is said that the household of Charles during the last few months has main-

All Day Effort to Avert Milk Strike Fails, Drivers Meet Today for Final Action

In session almost continuously since 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning, union leaders and milk distributers failed to reach an agreement on the proposed new wage contract for the 11,000 milk wagon drivers and assistants in the metropolitan district and at 2:30 this morning the effort was abandoned. The present contract expires at midnight tonight, and unless an agreement is reached in the meantime, a strike, union leaders have said, will take place.

The drivers will meet in Madison Square Garden at 2 o'clock this afternoon to determine their course of action. The original purpose was to consider a proposal for arbitration, but since then the United States Conciliation Commissioner has brought about additional conferences, and the mass meeting this afternoon will receive a report of these later negotiations.

Word came from Yonkers last night that the officials of the Borden Milk Company had asked for police protection in that city in the event of a strike.

J. J. Fitzpatrick, sales manager of Borden's Farm Products Company, said last night that if there is a strike the distributers will deliver milk to stores and depots, but no family deliveries will be made.

He said also that if the union men obtained an increase in wages the increase would be reflected immediately in the price of milk to the consumers.

I. Elkin Nathans, Secretary of the New York Milk Conference Board, said early last night that practically no progress had been made in the negotiations. Of the thirty-six articles proposed for a new agreement, only two had been acted upon. The first had to do with the jurisdiction of the union. It was decided, if an agreement should be entered into, that all labor in the industry would come under it. It also was decided that only union men are to be employed.

Gadski's Husband, Who Fled to Germany, Wants to Come Back and Be U. S. Citizen

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The State Department has asked the Department of Justice to rule upon the question of permitting the return to this country of Captain Hans Tauscher, late of the Imperial German Army, who left for Germany in February, 1917, with former Ambassador von Bernstorff, while under indictment in San Francisco for violation of American neutrality. Captain Tauscher is the husband of Gadski, the grand opera singer, who has returned to this country for a concert tour.

According to official advices from Berlin, Tauscher wishes to become an American citizen, as an example to his countrymen of the proper solution of Germany's future through the cultivation of good relations with this country. He is reported to have suggested that the Government drop the indictment still pending in San Francisco in order that he may transfer his allegiance.

Despite Tauscher's record of alleged connection with the activities of von Bernstorff, von Papen and other German agents during the anxious days immediately preceding America's entry into the war, the War and Navy Departments are understood to see no objection to his return. It is intimated that Tauscher is in possession of secret information which would be of value both to the Government and certain American industries.

Tauscher, according to intelligence agents, was concerned with widespread German intrigue in this country before America's declaration of war and was indicted in San Francisco with former German Military Attaché von Papen for violation of neutrality laws in connection with the so-called Hindu plot to ship arms and ammunition to India. After reaching Germany, however, it is declared, he evinced a friendly attitude toward this country and used his influence in behalf of American prisoners of war.

Beyond stating that the matter was under advisement, Department of Justice officials declined to discuss the case.

HAVANA TERRORISTS THREATEN CROWDER

DISORDER IN PHILADELPHIA

HAVANA, Oct. 30.—Threats against Maj. Gen. Enoch H. Crowder and the United States legation in Havana are contained in proclamations distributed her in connection with the Sacco-Vanzetti case. The posters denounce General Crowder as a "representative of the American bourgeoisie" and threaten "the dagger of vengeance" against the Americans.

The police, however, are taking prompt action. Last night they arrested ten persons at the headquarters of a Syndicalist Labor organization. A number of terrorist proclamations were found on the premises. Other arrests are expected.

The prisoners will be given preliminary hearings tomorrow in a special court which is investigating the terrorist agitation.

ROME, Oct. 30.—Various radical organizations have renewed their agitation in behalf of the Italians Sacco and Vanzetti, under conviction for murder in the United States. Large posters with the photographs of the condemned men are being displayed on billboards.

A committee, headed by the Communist Deputy Bombacci, was received last night by the Marquis della Torretta, Foreign Minister, who said everything was being done to see that the condemned men receive justice.

Police End Philadelphia Protest.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 30.—A mass meeting of Italians here to pledge moral and financial support to Niccola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti was raided this afternoon by the police after speakers declared that the Italians of this country would tear down the jail if the men were not given justice and that if the men died in the electric chair a number of prominent men would also pay the price.

More than a hundred policemen under the command of Captain Graham and several agents of the Department of Justice took part in the raid. No arrests were made and the speaker who made the violent remarks escaped through a rear door and was taken away in an automobile.

The first speaker outlined the case of the two condemned men and charged that their sentence of death was due to capitalism. The speaker told how capital had harassed the Italians and shouted that now was the time for the Italians to take the matter into their hands.

Constantio Pongari of Philadelphia, the third speaker, said:

"Those men in that jail awaiting execution are innocent men," he shouted, "and they shall be freed because the Italians of this country are going to storm that jail, tear the doors off, tear the building down and liberate them. We will show the American people a sample of justice."

Then Pongari attacked the Government, continuing on this topic for about two minutes, when a whistle sounded and a husky young man arose from a seat in the centre of the room and advanced toward the stage.

"Hey, wait a minute," the young man said. "You cut that stuff out, or I'm coming up there and knock you off that stage."

Pongari stopped in the middle of a gesture and advanced threateningly.

"Who are you who would slam me in the jaw?" he inquired.

"My name," the man said, "is Angelo Curcio, district detective. If you open your mouth again I'm going to flatten you out."

"They try to shut me up. They can't. I have been in jail twelve times and am willing to go again. If those two men die in the electric chair, prominent men will pay the price."

The applause that followed was deafening. Then the police entered and cleared the hall.

Appeal for Sacco and Vanzetti.

BOSTON, Oct. 30.—A statement asking the public to judge the guilt or innocence of Niccola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti "on the basis of evidence introduced in the courtroom and not on the basis of newspaper fabrications about the two men and their friends," was issued by the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee today. The committee, formed soon after the arrest of the two

WORTH $300,000, SHE DIES A RECLUSE

$50,000 GEMS IN A BUREAU

Widow Locked Herself From World When Husband Died Six Years Ago—Dust Cloaks Home.

Six years ago when her husband, an official of a Manhattan insurance company, died, Mrs. Margaret Easton drew down the shades in the three-story frame dwelling at 90 Putnam Avenue, Brooklyn, and never after stepped outside the house. Food, what there was of it, came through a cautiously raised window in the basement, and dust settled thick and undisturbed in the home, for no one ever called.

Out of all the mystery there came, of course, the neighborhood conviction that Mrs. Easton was rich. But it was not until midnight Saturday, when Mrs. Easton was found dead in the rocking chair, that the neighborhood knew how rich. Investigators rummaging through the house found bankbooks showing deposits of $250,000, old-fashioned, heavy-stoned jewelry worth $50,000, and in one drawer $1,570 in cash, including twenty-seven $50 notes.

Detectives Seek Relatives.

One of the bankbooks showed that the first deposit in a Brooklyn commercial bank was made forty-five years ago, the date being early in 1876.

Last night the police were searching for relatives and, as no will was found, heirs to the $300,000. For hours Detectives Eugene Daly and Joseph Donlon of the Classon Avenue Station went from house to house in the vicinity of Putnam Avenue and Ormonde Place endeavoring to find kin or friends of the dead woman, and late last night they came to Manhattan to try to locate two nieces, reported to be living here.

The discovery that Mrs. Easton had died was made by Otto Spita, proprietor of a delicatessen and grocery at 107 Putnam Avenue, diagonally across from the Easton home. Ever since the death of Mr. Easton the grocer had called at the basement window several times a week and delivered the small quantities of food which the solitary dweller required.

He called at the house a week ago last Saturday and left some groceries. Last Wednesday he again rapped on the window, but when it was raised he was informed that "nothing is needed." Knowing that the food stock of the elderly woman must be very low, he returned on Thursday, and when he again was told to go away he sent his wife, Mrs. Anna Spita, over to inquire what was wrong.

Refused to Take Medicine.

Enforcing her rule not to permit anybody in the house, Mrs. Easton talked to the grocer's wife through the grated window of the basement, and Mrs. Spita learned that for about ten days Mrs. Easton had been undergoing treatment from Dr. J. S. Baldwin of 493 Classon Avenue.

"But I am not taking the medicine," the grocer's wife quoted the old woman as saying. "I take the prescriptions, but I do not get them filled."

"Don't you want some food?" she was asked.

"No, I have no desire for food," Mrs. Easton replied. "I am not eating; my stomach won't let me."

Last Saturday night when he was closing up his shop, Spita, who had been thinking about the aged woman in the lonely house across the street, decided to make a last effort to get food to her. He said he was positive no food had entered the house since a week ago last Saturday.

"I went across the street," he said, "and looked in the window. There was no lamp burning, as there usually was at night, but I saw Mrs. Easton sitting in the rocking chair she always used. I rapped on the window repeatedly, and when I got no answer I raised the window and got in. She as sitting in the chair with her eyes closed. I thought she was merely asleep or weak from lack of food. But when I touched her hand and forehead I found them very cold."

Spita notified Dr. Baldwin, who said Mrs. Easton was dead. In his report to the police he certified that death was due to "natural causes." He could not be reached last night to verify a report, inspired by Spita's statements and

AUTO RIPS IRON RAIL IN 30-FOOT PLUNGE; 2 DEAD, 2 DYING

SPECTATOR FALLS TO DEATH

AUTOS KILL TWO OTHERS

One man was killed and a man and a woman were removed in a dying condition to Fordham Hospital last night when an automobile crashed through the iron railing of the Grand Concourse and fell thirty feet to the trolley tracks at East Burnside Avenue, the Bronx. Another man, a spectator after the crash, fell or was pushed into the trolley cut and was killed by the fall. Two other persons were killed and six injured in a series of automobile accidents in the city and near by yesterday.

Returning from an afternoon in the country, Isadore Isner, a tinsmith, of 702 East 156th Street, was driving his automobile south on the Grand Concourse. A number of streets with car tracks pass underneath the concourse. With Isner in the car were Seymour Skolnik, 30 years old, of 763 Tinton Avenue, the Bronx, a member of the general merchandise firm of J. Silberman & Skolnik of 492 East 140th Street, and Miss Marion Halbfinger, 24 years old, of 2,016 Jerome Avenue. Miss Halbfinger, according to the police, is a violinist, having appeared in recitals in Aeolian Hall.

She had an engagement to play last night and in order to take a shorter route to her home Isner swung his car to drive down the roadway leading from the Concourse to the East Burnside Avenue transverse road.

Isner lost control of the car. It jumped to the sidewalk and tore through the iron railing. The car and its three occupants then plunged to the tracks. The fall was witnessed by a number of passing motorists and by Lieutenant Charles Troy of the East 126th Street Station and Detective James Fitzpatrick of the West 100th Street Station, both on their way home.

Victims Underneath Auto.

Led by Troy and Fitzpatrick a score of men ran down into the cut. They found that the falling automobile had barely missed a westbound Burnside Avenue car. The automobile was bottom up and when the rescuers lifted it they found that Skolnik had been crushed to death. Isner and Miss Halbfinger were both unconscious. Surgeons from Fordham Hospital in a preliminary examination found that Isner's skull had been fractured and both lungs punctured by fragments of glass from the windshield. The violinist had six ribs broken, her lungs punctured and other internal injuries.

Meanwhile, on the Concourse, above, the throng of watchers had increased. A number of Elks from a near by lodge had joined the several hundred persons standing at the edge of the highway where the iron fence was torn apart. Among the members of the fraternal order was Herman Neuferr, 48 years old, of 1,818 Washington Avenue, the Bronx, manager of the Mason Manufacturing Company, a plumbers' supply business, at 71 Beekman Street.

Neuferr was in the front row and in some way toppled through the broken fence. Head downward he pitched straight to the tracks, striking a few feet from where Lieutenant Troy was standing. While Dr. White of Fordham Hospital hurried the injured man and girl into the ambulance, Dr. Sabbatino, also of Fordham, turned to give aid to Neuferr. He found that the man had been killed instantly.

Assistant District Attorney Albert Henderson of the Bronx, who investigated the accident, found that the car which Isner had been driving was listed as owned by Herman Balet of 1,996 Belmont Avenue, the Bronx. The police reported that it had been borrowed by Isner for the day.

Cab Skids, Hits a Car.

One woman was mortally injured and four other persons suffered lacerations and contusions yesterday afternoon, when a taxicab skidded in First Avenue at Nineteenth Street and struck the rear end of a surface car, throwing three passengers in the automobile against a pillar of the elevated railway.

Although rushed to Bellevue Hospital, Mrs. Annie Miklus, 23 years old, of 156 Wythe Avenue, Brooklyn, wife of the driver, died a short time later. Max Woytowich, 40 years old, 114 Grand Street, and Stephen Miklus, 19 years old, both in the automobile, were taken to Bellevue suffering from lacerations and contusions. Miklus is a son of the chauffeur.

Two of the four passengers in the surface car also were injured. They were George Teich, 15 years old, 726 East Sixth Street, and Sam Saffer, 28 years old, 120 Lewis Street. They were treated at Bellevue for shock and bruises and left for their homes.

Just before this accident, William Stenios, 40 years old, of 1,929 Madison Avenue, was struck by a taxicab at Third Avenue and 123d Street. He died in an ambulance on the way to Harlem Hospital. The driver failed to stop, but a bystander gave the license number to Policeman Lahey of the East 126th Street Station.

Adolph Kornblum, a real estate dealer, who lives at 22 Mount Morris Park West, was arrested last night on a charge of failing to report to the police after, it was alleged, his automobile had run down Morris Maylander, 4 years

Wilson Rallies After Attack, But Remains in Bed All Day

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Former President Wilson, who was unable to receive Marshal Foch yesterday because of illness, continues to improve, according to reports tonight. Mr. Wilson was confined to his bed all day, but is in no serious condition.

Mr. Wilson is suffering from a slight attack of indigestion, which occurs frequently by reason of the fact that he is unable to take any exercise. Reports that he had another attack of apoplexy were denied, and his physician, Rear Admiral Grayson, said that the ex-President would be able to take his customary drives shortly and attend the burying of the unknown American hero at Arlington on Nov. 11.

NORTH DAKOTA VOTE OUSTS LEAGUE RULE

Independents Elect State Officials and Carry Important Revision Laws.

LEAGUE PLANS A CONTEST

Initiated Measures Will Close Bank, Limit Bond Issues and Change Industrial Commission.

Special to The New York Times.

FARGO, N. D., Oct. 30.—The measures to revise the State Government have been passed at the State-wide recall election, which repudiated the Non-Partisan League, and now the future opens with what the people believe are bright prospects. They feel that they are through with Socialists and radical rule.

Returns collected at Fargo last night from all except 240 precincts of 2,086 in the State gave the following vote on Governor:

R. A. Nestos, Independent, 106,148; Lynn J. Frazier, Non-Partisan, 96,866. Nestos's majority, 9,282.

The early Nestos lead of 27,000 had been cut down by belated returns from the Western "slope" counties, the Non-Partisan League strongholds, but the swing away from Townleyism was apparent. Even in the West victory was assured not only for Mr. Nestos but his two associates on the Independent ticket. Initiated measures, backed by the Independents, curbing the financiering of the League Administration, also seemed certain to carry.

Results of the Election.

The election results may be stated briefly as follows:

Governor Lynn J. Frazier, Attorney General William Lemke and John N. Hagan, Commissioner of Agriculture and Labor—the "Big Three" of the all-powerful Industrial Commission—are ousted from office.

R. A. Nestos is elected Governor; Sveinbjorn Johnson, Attorney General, and Joseph A. Kitchen, Commissioner of Agriculture and Labor.

Important initiated laws appear to have carried, carrying out part of the new program announced by the Independents.

These laws, if passed, will wind up the Bank of North Dakota; establish a State rural credits system like that of South Dakota; limit State bond issues to $7,500,000, except as secured by real estate mortgages; restore the old law for depositories of public funds, and change the membership of the Industrial Commission. The new commission is to consist of State Treasurer John Steen, Secretary of State; Thomas Hall and Joseph A. Kitchen, the new Commissioner of Agriculture and Labor—all Independents.

Arthur C. Townley, founder of the league, is back today in Fargo, the scene of his political triumphs of 1916, 1918 and 1920. But times have changed for the former "boss." The powerful political machine he built up has gone to smash, and he is in Fargo only to straighten out some of his business affairs before going to serve three months in the county jail at Jackson, Minn., for violating Minnesota's wartime laws.

Townley declined to comment on the result. Though he launched the league, and still heads the national organization, he has been sidetracked for a year or more in North Dakota, and the ruling power in the league now is "Bishop" Lemke.

Contest proceedings are contemplated, it is known. The league organization has been gathering material for some time. It alleges that many duplications appear in the petitions for the recall, and that when the surplus names have been stricken out there will not be the 69,000 names left which the law required.

Independents assert that they had plenty of names, and that, anyway, it is too late to knock out the election after the votes have been cast and counted.

Partial returns have shown independent gains almost everywhere in the State, including Fargo, where a "labor vote" switch had been expected to help the league. But the league made gains in the City of Bismarck, and appears to have carried it by about 300, though that city went for the Independents last year.

Blow to McCumber Seen.

In this upset is seen the hand of Alex McKenzie and other friends of Senator P. J. McCumber, who held "neutral" in the fight, but has been condemned by the Independents and charged with secretly helping the league. The McCumber influence was regarded as against the recall.

Mr. Nestos said in the campaign that, if elected, he would appoint a commission of high-grade men to study the State mill and elevator project and recommend what course to take. The State has more than $1,000,000 sunk in the mill and elevator plant at Grand Forks, on which work was suspended nearly a year ago. The new administration plans to complete the plant and to operate it or dispose of it by sale or lease so as to salvage its value for the taxpayers.

The new administration has a big job of salvage on its hands. It has millions of public money to "thaw out," many excessive farm loans to realize on, an expensive mill and elevator plant to complete and utilize in some way, the Home Builders' Association contracts to clean up and the bond sales to investigate and untangle.

The new officials have promised to "open up the books," let the public know the secret dealings of the Bank of North Dakota, and to bring criminal prosecutions.

CURRAN DENOUNCES MILLER TRANSIT LAW; WILL SEEK REPEAL

Says He Is For 5-Cent Fare, but Denies That It Is a Campaign Issue.

OUTLINES HIS PROGRAM

HOME RULE COMES FIRST

Proposes, if Elected, to Introduce Bill Restoring to City the Control Over Transit Contracts.

Denial of the claim of Mayor Hylan and his adherents that the five-cent fare was an issue in this campaign was made yesterday by Henry H. Curran, Coalition candidate for Mayor, in a statement issued at his headquarters in the Murray Hill Hotel.

Mr. Curran pledged himself in his second declaration of the campaign on traction to oppose an increased fare if elected, to fight the constitutionality of the law creating the Transit Commission and to seek to obtain its repeal. He summarized his traction program as follows:

"First, home rule or local control for our local properties. Second, the five-cent fare, which is the keystone of the city's development. Third, develop our rapid transit facilities until all the people of all the boroughs can have an equal share in their benefits.

Mr. Curran said that the stage had not been reached where details of the procedure to accomplish his program could be worked out and that he welcomed the plan of the Transit Commission as a suggestion, which would be followed by others. He declared that he was unalterably opposed to the "sliding scale or barometer fare," proposed by the commission, and said that in any plan the valuation of the roads must be right with every drop of water squeezed out.

As a method of improving the service Mr. Curran repeated his suggestion of a sort of a belt line connecting the ends of the present rapid transit system, or, as he phrased it, putting "the rim on the spokes of the wheel."

Mr. Curran's Statement.

The statement follows:

"This statement nails the latest lie from Mayor Hearst and his Man-Friday Hylan. They say that they, alone, of all the people in New York, are five-cent fare officials. Do they think we are so simple as to be fooled by that? They will find out on election day.

"They will find out another thing, and that is that we are sick and tired of having Hearst govern New York with a pull of his purse string from California while his Hylan manikin dances in our City Hall. I say that we are done with that. This campaign is a fight to a finish to find out whether Hearst rules New York or whether we, the people of New York, still enjoy self-government. We are going to win that fight.

"Now let us get back to the five-cent fare. Nobody has a patent on it and nobody is against it. How to get better transit for a five-cent fare is one of the most vital problems our city faces today. The next Administration must study this problem and do its part to work out a solution. We must have relief from the present intolerable crowding of our transit cars, and the imposition upon our people of ten and fifteen cent fares, in place of five-cent fares, through the loss of transfers. It will be no easy task, but will require all the devotion to duty your new Board of Estimate can possibly bring to the work.

"Hylan has given us no help. He has no plan, no thought. His only constructive effort was the secret dicker with Shonts of the Interborough, which, according to sworn testimony, included the seven-cent fare. He has talked five cents to camouflage seven cents, as well as other blunders of his Administration, and, while he has been talking, our people, men, women and children, have been jammed and crowded into the suffocating cars of our transit lines, there to read The Subway Sun or The Elevated Express pleading for an increased fare. Hylan's impotence has been just as bad as the Interborough's impudence. Hylan's politics have gone hand in hand with the company's greed.

Outlines His Program.

"I outline now for your earnest consideration the transit program that I pledge myself to follow when I am Mayor. To carry it out, I must have your wholehearted support. The Transit Problem in New York City today has come to assume three distinct aspects, all of them different and yet each one of them interlocked with the others. They are: (1) the question of home rule, (2) the retention of the 5-cent fare, and (3) improved and extended service.

"The first side of this question is home rule. On this I took my stand ten years ago, and have never changed my position. I have repeated over and over again my firm conviction that this city is entitled to control its own local affairs, free from outside domination.

"Last Winter, the transit law was enacted at Albany. I opposed that law as soon as it was drafted, stating my views clearly and frankly, not only to all the legislators, but also to the Governor. I said it was wrong and unjust and takes from us our control over contracts made by us in good faith, and executed by the expediture of millions of dollars of our own money. I disagreed with members of my own party and I still disagree with them. Home rule in this respect is right, and I say that right comes ahead of party. Right comes first. What happened? The bill passed and became a law. I am still opposed to that law.

"When I am elected Mayor I propose not only to test the constitutionality of the transit law, but to fight with all the strength and energy I possess to have it amended. I am going to have a bill drafted and introduced at Albany restoring to our city the control over our transit contracts that this law took away from us. I shall do everything in my power to pass that bill. If necessary, I shall go to Albany in its behalf, and shall make the fight for it there.

What a New Measure Would Mean.

"Do you realize what it means if we can secure the passage of such a measure? It means that we, the people of this city, who have built and paid for our own subways, will have the final word in what is done, not only with these subways but with our entire transportation system. It means that the city will participate, with power and authority, in the development of any transit plan that may be adopted.

"I believe that the welfare of the city is bound up in this question of home rule. Let us keep power close to the people. That is one of the fundamentals of American Government.

"When we get this control back, we shall have the power to keep the 5-cent fare. That brings me to the second aspect of this transit situation.

"This is a 5-cent fare town. Our people will not stand for a higher fare, and neither will I. Nobody is ever going to be able to build up a transportation system here that charges more than a nickel. I know that in New York a nickel is enough. The 5-cent fare is the keystone on which must rest the future transit development of our city. It must be retained, and as long as I am Mayor I shall fight to keep it. We have built this city, every one of the five boroughs, upon this proposition of a 5-cent fare. It should not be taken from us. It will not be, without a fight.

"Feeling as I do, I am ready to stump this town in opposition to any effort by anybody to charge more than a nickel. I can and will carry the fight throughout the length and breadth of every one of the five boroughs, from Tottenville to the Westchester line, and from the Hudson River to the Rockaways. With the whole city a unit in this opposition, there is nobody who can put over an increased fare.

"Now, let us turn to the third aspect of our transit problem, which I have included in my program and which I believe means much to our city. It is the question of extended and improved service, not only as regards the present facilities, but also as to the completion of the dual subway system and the development of additional rapid transit lines in all the boroughs.

Attacks Administration.

"The present Administration has done nothing, planned nothing, in this respect. Hylan has refused to build subways. It apparently matters little to him, riding to and fro in his limousine, that most of us have to struggle daily for a strap in the subway. How could he, racing through the streets, where policemen clear the traffic from his path, appreciate the fact that in many of our boroughs there are communities which have inadequate rapid transit service or no rapid transit at all?

"Greater New York began developing in Manhattan from the Battery northward, and the trend went steadily up through the length of this long, thin island and into the Bronx, and then the other boroughs were added by consolidation. Our transit arteries for years were north and south lines, and the great preponderance of our roads and tubes today run north and south. Added to this, we have all the lines radiating from lower Manhattan, on one side of the East River, to Brooklyn and Queens on the other.

"The result is a transportation system that consists of the hub of a wheel—that is, lower Manhattan—with spokes radiating out in every direction from the hub, and ending in the air. There is no rim to this wheel; it is only hub and spokes. Here is a city plan that is fatal on its face to any comfortable transportation of our citizens. If you would go, say, from Corona to Jamaica, both in Queens, a distance of about five miles, you must begin at the outer end of one spoke, in Corona, go down into the hub in lower Manhattan, and then out another spoke through Brooklyn until you land at Jamaica, having traveled a distance of more than twenty miles.

"What we need is a rim to that wheel, a belt line, and then another interior belt line, between the rim and the hub, so that people going from Brooklyn to Queens may go directly over a crosstown line instead of having to struggle through the congested hub of the wheel in lower Manhattan. The same holds true between Brooklyn and Richmond.

Home Rule First.

"There is my program. First, home rule, or local control for our local properties. Second, the five-cent fare, which is the keystone of the city's development. Third, develop our rapid transit facilities until all the people of all the Boroughs have equal share in their benefits.

"Those three things are fundamental. We have not yet reached the stage where the different steps and details of the procedure toward these ends can be worked out. The Transit Commission has presented a preliminary outline of a plan, and suggestions from citizens, critical and otherwise, have followed the commission's prospectus. We need more such suggestions, so that the perfected plan may be the product of the will and the mind of all the people of the city. Before all else, the valuation of the roads must be right. Every drop of water must be squeezed out. If there is no earning power under the five-cent fare that is in the contract, I say there is no marketable value beyond what one man would pay another for such a property.

"Also, I am fundamentally and unalterably opposed to the 'sliding-scale or barometer' fare. I shall oppose any plan that does not render it impossible at any time in the future, or under any circumstances, to exact more than a five-cent fare; or any plan that alters or modifies the city's present contract right to insist upon a five-cent fare with free transfers between every part of the new system.

"These and other matters of tremendous importance must be worked out openly, carefully, and with fairness to all, but always with a jealous insistence that the city get every last right to which it is entitled. There is no advantage to the people in unraveling such intricate matters in the heat of a political campaign, and no man is wise enough to sit down by himself and say that this consideration is right and the other one is wrong, offhand and in a hurry. I shall not do that. I know how difficult and complex the problem is, and I would not be honest with myself if I presumed to pronounce the last word on it today.

"I shall co-operate with every citizen, official or commission, that offers help in working out this vital problem. I shall insist at every point that the 5-cent fare, with adequate free transfer facilities, be established—that the people of our city be given back the power to this end, that the transit law took away from us, and that we build subways and use every means to improve the service in the subways we already have. That is the road I shall travel while I am Mayor."

ATTACKS LOCKWOOD RECORD

Senator Aided in Killing Minimum Wage Bill, Says Labor Leader.

James P. Holland, President of the New York State Federation of Labor, yesterday characterized as false the statement of Senator Charles C. Lockwood, Coalition candidate for Controller, that the Federation's record of legislative votes, showing him in opposition to certain labor measures, was inaccurate. Mr. Holland made public a letter to him from J. M. O'Hanlon, Chairman of the Federation's Legislative Committee, to the effect that Senator Lockwood had been one of twenty-three Senators who voted against a motion to discharge the committee from consideration of the Cotillo minimum wage bill, which action killed the measure, and that re-examination of the record showed that the committee's original report had been correct.

"Senator Lockwood poses as the friend of the workingman, when, in fact, his legislative record proves the opposite," said Mr. Holland in announcing that he intended to take the stump for the re-election of Controller Charles L. Craig. "Senator Lockwood cannot alter the records of the Legislature. The records prove that Lockwood's denials and explanations, designed to attract workingmen to his support, are false."

CHARGES HYLAN BID FOR TEACHERS' VOTE

AGGREGATE TO BE $150,000

Wallis and Hirshfield Named—Mayor Afraid to Go Through With Program, Hyman Says.

The charge that Mayor Hylan's campaign managers had attempted to induce public school principals to work for the Democratic city ticket by a promise of an increase of $150,000 a year in their aggregate salaries was made yesterday by Samuel F. Hyman, an Independent Democrat and campaign manager for Vincent Gilroy, Coalition candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen.

Mr. Hyman asserted that this proposal, which he said was made by Frederick A. Wallis, Chairman of the Hylan Campaign Committee, and Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield, showed that the Democratic managers had been driven to desperation. "The people of New York," he said, "may expect a week of desperate tactics, coercion and misrepresentation on the part of the Hylan employes, who now realize that Hylan is defeated.

"Last Saturday afternoon a committee of school principals was brought to the Hylan League headquarters, 50 East Forty-second Street, and taken into a room where sat Mr. Wallis, the Hylan co-ordinator, and Mr. Hirschfield, the Hylan investigator.

"In as many words these principals were told that $150,000 was the price offered by the Hylan managers for a one-third split of the 25,000 school teachers vote, the $150,000 being a readjustment of a scale of principals, per schools and grades, which has hung fire for a long time. Mr. Hylan is much interested in this just now. When one teacher asked where the $150,000 would come from, Hirshfield assured him that it would be found in the budget somewhere.

"These principals were in that conference three hours, and Wallace adjourned the meeting and made an appointment with them to meet the Mayor in the City Hall on Friday afternoon. The news of this eleventh hour effort to lure 8,000 votes from the teachers of New York leaked out and Hylan was afraid to go through with the Wallis program.

"Picture this despicable deal and the insult offered to the principals of the schools of New York! Imagine Wallis and Hirshfield, a few days before election, in a last desperate chance to deceive the teachers of New York, promising the principals an increase of $150,000 for their influence in swinging votes to Hylan! This is the same Hylan who told the teachers they could quit if they didn't like their jobs. And this is the same Hylan who forced them to go to Albany for higher salaries, and then complains of mandatory legislation."

Mr. Hyman also declared that Deputy Dock Commissioner Michael Cosgrove, a Tammany Assembly District leader, had attempted to drive off the streets an old man carrying a Coalition placard attacking Mayor Hylan for insincerity on the five-cent fare, and referred to the demotion of a detective named Schalow for no other reason than that he favored Curran for Mayor and Edgar F. Hazleton, Republican nominee for Borough President of Queens, over Borough President Maurice E. Connolly.

Another instance of attempted coercion of city employes, he said, was found in the grilling of two men from whom Mr. Gilroy obtained information upon which he based his recent attack upon the administration of the Department of Correction by James A. Hamilton. These two men, whose names Mr. Gilroy gave to the Bronx Grand Jury, were brought before that body and questioned by two Tammany District Attorneys.

"I suppose," Mr. Hyman said, "that this was notice served on all the 75,000 city employes that, if they opened their mouths about their respective departments, they would be yanked before the Grand Jury. And I suppose in due time these men will feel the whip hand for daring to breathe a word about the negligence and incapacity of the Hylan administration."

BEAVERS PRAISE HYLAN.

Scattering Audience at Casino Hears City Is Vice-Free.

Under the auspices of The Beavers, an organization seeking the re-election of Mayor Hylan, a mass meeting was held last night at the Casino Theatre, Broadway and Thirty-ninth Street, with Herman A. Metz, former Controller, Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," Corporation Counsel John P. O'Brien and Assistant District Attorney Richard Gibbs as speakers. The latter spoke favoring the candidacy of Joab H. Banton for District Attorney.

The audience was scattering, not more than one-third of the seats being filled. Mayor Hylan was scheduled for an address, but it was explained that his many recent speeches necessitated his getting a night's rest. Barry McCormack presided.

Thomas Dixon characterized Curran as the "smallest peanut politician in the city" and declared that there is less vice here than ever before. He knew this, he said, from his observations in gathering material for his books.

Mr. Metz declared that the City Government was getting better all the time and stated that Mayor Hylan had "made good." Corporation Counsel O'Brien spoke particularly of the city's traction and gas fights and generally praised the record of the Administration.

O'BRIEN SPEAKS FOR HYLAN.

Mayor Unable to Attend Jewish Memorial Hospital Benefit.

John P. O'Brien, Corporation Counsel, spoke on behalf of Mayor Hylan last night to an audience that filled Times Square Theatre, where a benefit entertainment for the new Jewish Memorial Hospital was taking place. He said Jewish charities led all others in the effort to make New York a happier and healthier city.

He said that the Mayor, who had been scheduled to appear, had to remain away from all his meetings last night upon the advice of his physician, as the strain of the campaign was telling upon him. He said that he brought Hylan's congratulations for the successful culmination of the hospital's drive for funds.

$200,000,000 FOR SCHOOLS.

Needed by 1925 to Provide a Seat for Every Child, Says Board.

It would cost at least $200,000,000 to give a seat to every child in the public schools by 1925, an average expenditure of $50,000,000 a year for the next four years, according to the bulletin of the Public Education Association made public yesterday. The estimates were based on the official figures for Sept. 30, 1921.

"Can our next Mayor eliminate part time and congestion in New York City schools on the basis of a 'reserved seat for every child' which is the slogan of the present Administration?" the bulletin inquired. "Or is this 'reserve seat for every child' program an elusive mirage, the pursuit of which must be abandoned?"

HEALTH WORK UNDER HYLAN IS ASSAILED

Compulsory "Hospitalization" During Epidemics Denounced by Dr. John P. Davin.

Dr. John P. Davin, Executive Secretary of the New York Medical Association, attacks "Mayor Hylan's Department of Health" in the October bulletin of the association on the ground that its policy of "compulsory hospitalization" of such diseases as poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis), influenza and drug addiction is a peril to the city. This is the first serious attack upon the Health Department during the campaign.

"Only by the election of Henry H. Curran as Mayor over John F. Hylan," says Dr. Davin, "can we bring this problem to his attention for a solution. The open-mindedness, the intelligence and the honesty of purpose of Henry H. Curran eminently fit him to undo the evil vicariously inflicted by Mayor Hylan in his administration of the New York City Department of Health.

"At the present time," Dr. Davin says, "compulsory hospitalization has been the plan of control most favored by the health authorities of this city for these diseases. In the late poliomyelitis epidemic the attempt was made by the health authorities to use the power they possessed under the Sanitary Code to compel the care of these cases in institutions under their charge as far as possible.

"Children hopelessly ill were taken from their homes who might better have been allowed to die there. Parents were separated from their children and in many instances patients were taken away who did not have the disease at all."

Dr. Davin quotes official figures of the Department of Health to show that the death rate in New York City was 36 per cent. of the total cases, against 2¼ per cent. in the rest of the State. "It may be noted," he adds, "that outside the City of New York no attempt was made to compel hospitalization of these cases."

"A similar campaign of publicity was waged under Commissioner Copeland in the present Administration during the epidemic of influenza in this city," Dr. Davin says. "It this epidemic physicians generally protested against compulsory hospitalization, as many of them did during the epidemic of poliomyelitis and with more effect. The fact that many of the cases of influenza were of a pneumonia type meant that much danger was involved in their removal, not as is popularly supposed from the exposure involved, but from the strain on the heart from the shifting about of the patient.

"For years," Dr. Davin continued, "the Legislature of this State has refused to incorporate a clause in its drug laws compelling the registration of drug addicts on the ground that blackmail, oppression and extortion might result from this action. Notwithstanding this fact the registration of drug addicts was made compulsory in this city by the combined action of the late Narcotic Drug Commissioner and his deputies, Miss Sara Graham Mulhall, formerly identified with an advertised remedy for the drug habit, and the Health Commissioner of this city. Under this system a clinic was established where for the first time in medical history the victims of a disease were made the objects of public exposure to sightseeing occupants of rubber-neck wagons for their callous inspection.

"All this has been held on the best legal authority to be unlawful, yet it was allowed to proceed unchecked by the City Government. But even this atrocity failed of its purpose which was to round up drug addicts from all walks of life for purposes of alleged cure. Complaint was subsequently made by the Narcotic Drug Commissioner that the registration system had not enabled his department to reach the 'rich' drug addicts and bring them under his control."

Dr. Davin said that drug cure promoters wield a tremendous influence in New York State under all conditions of political control. "Up to this time and in this way," he adds, "Mayor Hylan's Health Commissioner has done more to further the ends of the drug cure promoters and the drug cure institutionalists than they have been able to do for themselves in all the years they have labored with the Legislature. What these ends are every politician, every well-informed man, and every New York newspaper knows full well. Tragedies innumerable have regularly followed the illegal rulings, the round-ups, the drives and the raids upon drug addicts. There are no records of the cures or the emoluments which have resulted from this form of political health service."

SAYS CURRAN MADE JOBS FOR 'HEELERS'

Hirshfield Asserts That 54 Unnecessary Snow Inspectors Were Put on City Payroll.

Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield complained that the Meyer Committee had not investigated the office of Borough President of Manhattan Henry H. Curran, Coalition candidate for Mayor, and said that, if it had, it would have disclosed that, although Mr. Curran permitted himself to be pictured in a cap and gown on a campaign poster to impress people that he was a college graduate, he had not risen above petty politics.

Mr. Hirshfield said that during a snowstorm in February, 1920, Mr. Curran did not permit employes of the Street Cleaning Department to open sewer manholes in Manhattan for the purpose of washing the snow into the sewers, as was done in Brooklyn and the Bronx, but appointed fifty-four so-called temporary inspectors at 75 cents per hour, ostensibly to supervise the dumping of snow, and certified their pay to the Department of Street Cleaning.

"The Commissioner of Street Cleaning had no alternative," Mr. Hirshfield continued, "and paid the Curran inspectors $10,554 out of the funds provided for snow removal. An examination of these fifty-four names and their addresses by any one familiar with Republican ward politics in Manhattan disclosed that these jobs were fairly well distributed among the heelers of the various Republican Assembly district organizations. If this had been paid to Democrats, the Republican politicians and the Republican press would have called it graft."

HYLAN RECEIVES A FLAG.

Presentation Made by Rabbi Geller at Brooklyn Meeting.

Mayor John F. Hylan spoke to a large audience at the Zichru Toros Mouche Talmud Torah, Vermont Street and Belmont Avenue, Brooklyn, last evening, and received an American flag, which was presented to him by Dr. Abraham Geller, the rabbi, a chaplain of the police reserves. The Mayor spoke of his struggles to gain an education, and said:

"I have been criticised by the press and the powerful interests as not being sufficiently cultured, but I have education enough not to be led into the plans of these interests, namely, to give them a higher traction fare."

The Mayor said he would never consent to taking $60,000,000 a year from the pockets of the people to put in the pockets of the "traction ring." "The gas company, owned by these same Rockefeller interests, is being sued by the city," he continued. "If we succeed in our action against it, about 10,000,000 of the people's money, which is impounded, will be returned to them."

John F. Dwyer, who retired yesterday as Police Inspector after twenty-five years' service, attacked the press, the Meyer Committee and William Travers Jerome, and said that the Meyer Committee in trying unfairly to besmirch him was attempting to hit at the Mayor.

Harold D. Turk Republican Leader.

Notice of the election of Harold D. Turk as Republican leader of the Eighth Brooklyn Assembly District to succeed the late Jacob Brenner, Commissioner of Jurors, has been filed with Jacob A. Livingston, Chairman of the Kings County Republican Committee, it was announced yesterday. Mr. Turk, a lawyer, will assume his duties on Nov. 15.

JUDICIARY CONTEST TO BE STATE GUIDE

ANDREWS MILLER'S FRIEND

His Election Also Would Give Syracuse Three Judges in the Court of Appeals.

Although obscured in popular interest in New York City by the municipal election, leaders of both the Republican and Democratic parties, it was said yesterday, are watching the contest for Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals, the only State-wide official to be elected this Fall, with a view to the indication it will give for the gubernatorial election next year, when, according to present indications, Governor Nathan L. Miller and ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith will again be opponents on the Republican and Democratic tickets.

The result will be considered to have the more significance, it was said, because Judge William S. Andrews, the Republican nominee, is a resident of Syracuse, the home of the Governor, and known to be his personal friend. Democratic expectation of the election of ex-Justice Townsend Scudder, the Democratic candidate, was said to be based largely upon the belief that New York City is antagonistic to Governor Miller and that Judge Scudder would receive a large enough plurality here to offset the plurality which Judge Andrews will undoubtedly receive up-State.

Herbert C. Pell Jr., Democratic State Chairman, said last night that he expected Judge Scudder to be elected, and predicted an increase in the Democratic vote up-State over that of last year. "It is unfortunate that Judge Scudder is not here to conduct his own campaign," he said, "but he was obliged to go abroad to fill an engagement made with a fraternal organization before his nomination."

On the Bench by Appointment.

Mr. Pell said that, although Judge Andrews was now sitting on the Court of Appeals bench, the Democratic Party had been under no obligation to indorse him because he was sitting by appointment and not by election, and the theory was confined to the indorsement of a good Judge who had served a full term, and did not contemplate the indorsement of a good Judge who had never been elected.

Referring to Judge Andrews's residence, Mr. Pell said he did not wish to raise the geographical question, but pointed out that Syracuse now had two elected Judges on the Court of Appeals besides Judge Andrews, sitting by appointment, and New York City only two. "It would seem," he said, "that, inasmuch as New York City furnishes two-thirds of the cases before the Court of Appeals, it would be better that New York City should have three Judges and Syracuse two, as it would if Mr. Scudder is elected, than for Syracuse to have three Judges and New York City two."

George A. Glynn, Republican State Chairman, has refused to admit that there is even a chance of the defeat of Judge Andrews. Reports to the Republican State organization were said to indicate the election of Judge Andrews by 200,000.

An Appeal for Andrews.

An appeal for the election of Judge Andrews was issued yesterday by the Andrews Judiciary Committee, which includes Samuel Untermyer, ex-Justice Clarence J. Shearn, William Travers Jerome, ex-Justice George L. Ingraham, Julius Henry Cohen, ex-Justice Francis M. Scott, ex-Justice Henry A. Gildersleeve, Edgar J. Nathan and I. Maurice Wormser among its Democratic members. The committee has prepared the following letter, which is being circulated in behalf of Judge Andrews:

"We believe in the principle that, regardless of political affiliations, judges who have proved their qualifications should be retained in office. This principle applies to Judge Andrews. He is now serving, and has served for four years, as an Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals. Prior to his service in the Court of Appeals he was for seventeen years a Justice of the Supreme Court in the Fifth Judicial District. During his long judicial career, his fine character and ability, outstanding courage and wide learning have been conspicuously demonstrated."

Others who joined in the appeal are ex-Governor Charles S. Whitman, former United States District Attorney Henry A. Wise, ex-Justice Francis K. Pendleton, former United States Attorney General George W. Wickersham, John G. Agar, Charles F. Brown, Robert W. Bonynge, Margaret M. Burnet, Alfred C. Coxe Jr., Henry W. Goddard, William D. Guthrie, Edward W. Hatch, Douglas Mathewson, Robert McC. Marsh, Cyrus C. Miller, Walter H. Pollak, Bertha Rembaugh and Charles Strauss.

CURRAN AND HYLAN START ON LAST LAP

Today's Schedules of Mayoralty Candidates Crowded With Speech Engagements.

The municipal campaign enters today upon its final week, and all the candidates for city offices will be busy speech-making until the curtain on that phase of the contest is rung down Saturday night.

Henry H. Curran, Coalition candidate for Mayor, will speak tonight at a meeting of the Park Community Council at Hunters College, Park Avenue and East Sixty-seventh Street; at Public School 163, Bevain and Seventeenth Avenues, Brooklyn; a meeting of the Marquette Club at the Hotel Commodore and at Public School 37, East 145th Street and Willis Avenue, the Bronx. He also will attend the ball of Greenwich Village Post of the American Legion at the Hotel Pennsylvania, and end with a visit to the Hallowe'en party of the Women's Regular Republican Club of the Sixth Assembly District, at 1,440 Williamsbridge Road, the Bronx.

Mayor Hylan will appear at the opening of the Children's Court, 111 Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. In the evening he will speak at meetings of the Polish-American Citizens' Association at Arlington Hall, St. Mark's Place; of the Citizens' Independent Union at the Hotel Vanderbilt, at Public School 17, 328 West Forty-eighth Street; at St. Joseph's Hall, West 127th Street and Convent Avenue; at the Audubon Ballroom Hall, West 166th Street and Broadway, and at a meeting of the George Washington High School League at Public School 52, Broadway and Academy Street, Inwood.

To Speak in School He Attended.

Ernest F. Eilert, Coalition candidate for Borough President of Manhattan, will speak tonight at Public School 13, 229 East Houston Street, from which he was graduated forty-one years ago. The meeting was arranged by parents of the pupils, friends of Mr. Eilert, who knew of his interest and knowledge of the school situation acquired while a member of the Board of Education.

COCKRAN CALLS THIS BEST-GOVERNED CITY

And Better Governed Now Than at Any Time in Its History, He Says.

TELLS OF HYLAN REFORMS

Whatever Is Enduring, Splendid or Useful Here Is a Monument to Tammany, He Asserts.

Using almost the identical language of the famous phrase with which Richard Croker lauded the administration of Van Wyck, W. Bourke Cockran at a great Tammany rally that crowded the Manhattan Opera House last night, exclaimed:

"And it is better governed now than at any time in its whole history."

After a eulogy on every department of the City Administration, including the Department of Markets and the Department of Docks Mr. Cockran praised the Mayor specifically for his "success in purifying the morals of the city" and for "his viligance in guarding its health." In a long catalogue of the reforms introduced by the Mayor, Mr. Cockran gave him particular credit for reducing the death rate. After alluding to the Mayor's vigilant guardianship of the city's health, the Congressman continued:

"Where is there in all the world a death rate so low as in this city of ours? It has not always been so. Years ago the death rate was among the highest in the world. Today it is the lowest."

Did Not Give Statistics.

Mr. Cockran did not indicate the statistics. Commissioner of Health Copeland, one of the other speakers from the same platform, issued a bulletin on the subject this month, indicating that New York stood fourth in its death rate among a partial list of large cities, and that London, Amsterdam and Birmingham had lower death rates than this city.

Mr. Cockran compared the constructive work of Tammany and Mayor Hylan in New York City to that of Sir Christopher Wren, who played a leading part in the rebuilding of London after the great fire of 1666.

"Whoever has visited London," exclaimed the orator, "must have observed at the front of St. Paul's Cathedral the noble tribute to Sir Christopher, its architect, which ends with the apostrophe, 'If you would see his monument, look around you.' We can say with equal—aye, with greater confidence—to whomsoever may ask what is Tammany Hall, what are its achievements, the fruits by which it is judged, 'Look around you.'"

Crediting Mayor Hylan with greater achievements than any of his Tammany predecessors, the speaker further said:

"Whatever you behold that is enduring, splendid, useful, important to the development of human well-being, the spread of human knowledge, encouragement of human effort, the prolongation of human life, there you see the monuments of Tammany in operation—there you behold the fruits of Tammany's civic efforts. This, too, is capable of demonstration. To begin with it must be obvious that the town which at the beginning of the nineteenth century was little more than a struggling village with a few thousand inhabitants, could not possibly have become in the twentieth century the greatest city the world has ever seen, if the dominant force in its civic life was corrupt or incapable."

Praises the Police.

Mr. Cockran gave Mayor Hylan large credit for the fire insurance rates, which he said were the lowest in the world. He praised the efficiency of the police in handling riots and public gatherings, for acts of benevolence by many individuals on the force and for general efficiency.

"Acts of violence by police officers," he continued, "are by no means unknown. Though infrequent considering the size of the force and the nature of its duties, they are not so rare as most of us in the world would like them to be. But this, I think, can be said without any fear of offending against the truth. Seldom if ever has a policeman been known to strike or do any violence whatsoever to a helpless tramp. When a uniformed man uses his club improperly, it is almost invariably on some one who can put up some kind of a fight in his own defense."

He said that the police had had "marvelous, almost unbelievable, success in banishing commercialized vice," and quoted the 1920 report of the Committee of Fourteen as one of his proofs, reading from the report the statement that "New York has less open vice than any of the world's largest cities."

The speaker asserted that no Administration had ever escaped with so clean a record from two years which, he said, had been filled with Grand Jury and other political investigations, intent on obtaining evidence of wrongdoing by the Hylan Administration.

"It is entirely safe to say," he said, "that no business enterprise employing a dozen persons, no family establishment embracing a couple of servants, could be subjected to such an examination and emerge so absolutely spotless, unsmirched, so completely vindicated by the failure of its bitterest foes to fashion a shadow of questionable conduct upon it. And now that this Administration comes before the people it has served with such conspicuous loyalty, with such untarnished fame, for the approval which loyalty and efficiency deserve, it is met by an opposition of unexampled fury, arising not because it lacked virtue in any respect, but because it possessed virtue to a degree that has proved highly inconvenient to persons of enormous wealth and extensive power, but lacking any sense or scruple whatsoever of conscience."

Ex-Mayor George B. McClellan praised the Administration of Mayor Hylan, asserting that the four years of Hylan government had been as good as any Administration the city had ever had. Health Commissioner Copeland lauded his chief enthusiastically.

"Vote for Mayor Hylan because he was a barefooted farmer boy.

"Vote for him because he was a hard-working carpenter's apprentice.

"Vote for him because he was an engineer on the rapid transit road.

"Vote for him because he was a Magistrate, because he was a Judge and because he was Mayor of New York.

HYLAN TALKS TO JEWS.

Is Speaker at Meeting to Raise Fund for Hungarian Relief.

Mayor Hylan spoke yesterday afternoon at a meeting of delegates from seventy-eight Hungarian-Jewish societies assembled in Cooper Union to begin a campaign to raise a fund of half a million dollars for Hungarian relief.

The Mayor spoke of the great need for relief work in Central Europe, and said he hoped the Federated Jewish Societies would be able to raise the fund.

"America," he said, "as in the past, will not be found wanting, for if there is one outstanding characteristic of the American people it is their sincere sympathy for the sufferings of their fellow creatures, and this city is always in the vanguard.

"We boast about 60,000 Hungarian Jews in this city. They are an element in our population to which we justly point with pride. Personally I have a keen appreciation of their sterling worth and was glad of the opportunity to appoint four of them to places of importance in my administration."

LEAGUE WOULD DEFEAT CITY ASSEMBLYWOMAN

The Women's Trade Union League announced yesterday that it would try to defeat Miss Marguerite L. Smith, Republican, of the Nineteenth District, the only woman member of the Assembly from New York City, for re-election. A statement issued by the league declared that Miss Smith had introduced bills inimical to the interests of wage-earning women, that she favored the repeal of legislation which it had taken women twenty years to have enacted, that she has always voted against the workers on measures affecting them, that she is "anti-public," and that she voted for the Lusk school bills.

"The workers of the league are fighting Miss Smith as a machine politician and an enemy to working women," said Miss Rose Schneiderman, President of the league. "Miss Smith knows nothing of conditions among wage-earning women and, though she has voted consistently with the machine against such measures as the Living Wage and Forty-eight-hour Week bills, she has never attended one hearing on these bills when working women presented arguments for and against the measures. Moreover, she introduced a bill repealing the present fifty-four-hour a week law for women and minors, for which women of the State worked twenty years."

The statement charged Miss Smith with being "anti-public" because of her vote against the Merrigan bill, which authorized the State to develop and distribute electric light, heat and power at cost to consumers in homes, on farms and in workshops. "It is a disgrace," the statement continued, "that a woman entering politics so soon after the granting of suffrage does not think and act for herself, but submits to the dictum of party politicians as the weaker of the men legislators have done for generations."

ASKS HYLAN IF IT'S RIGHT TO STEAL AN ELECTION

Brooklyn Pastor Attacks Tammany Aldermen for Refusal to Seat Socialists.

Taking as his text the commandment "Thou Shalt Not Steal," the Rev. J. H. Lockwood, pastor of the South Third Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, directed his sermon last night at the administration of Mayor Hylan. He discussed the refusal of the Board of Aldermen to seat the Socialists, Lee and Cassidy.

"God does not specify what we shall not steal," he said. "'Thou shalt not steal a watch or an automobile' is no more binding than 'Thou shalt not steal an election.'

"Lee and Cassidy were elected to the Board of Aldermen two years ago. Tammany Aldermen in the board seated two Tammany men in the places to which the votes of the people had elected Lee and Cassidy. Now, for about two years, by contemptible, characteristic Tammany tactics, these men have been deprived of their places and the people of their respective Aldermanic districts have been deprived of that representation in the Board of Aldermen which their constitutional rights entitled them to.

"This great moral question should supersede all other issues. The housing question is important, so are the school question and the transit problem; but first of all comes the question of whether or not Tammany is going to be permitted to make a hideous mockery of the great sacrament of democracy, the casting of their ballots by the people.

"And Mayor Hylan—honest Mayor Hylan—has he just stood quietly by and let the political stench continue, or has he, as the great champion of the rights of the 'dear pee-pul,' demanded that this gross injustice should be righted. Let's ask him."

Mr. Lockwood said he had put the question by telegraph to the Mayor, Controller Craig, Murray Hulbert and Borough President Riegelman. He had received no reply. Then he had addressed a letter to the Mayor, asking ten questions on the subject and daring him to answer them at once "in the straightforward way an honest man, such as you claim to be, should answer them."

A telegram to Joab H. Banton, Chief Assistant District Attorney of Manhattan and Tammany candidate for District Attorney, also asked:

"As the people's prosecuting officer, do you intend to take official action against these offenders?"

The pastor then cited sections of the Penal Code under which such action, he said, might be taken.

5,000 WOMEN AID LOCKWOOD

Many School Teachers Campaigning for the Senator.

Five thousand women, many of them public school teachers, have been conducting a personal campaign for Senator Charles C. Lockwood, Coalition candidate for Controller, it was learned yesterday, and in many neighborhoods a series of house to house canvasses have been made in an attempt to get votes for him.

This enlistment of women in the ranks of Senator Lockwood's supporters is independent of the efforts that have been made to get women's votes by the Coalition Committee, and has disclosed a difference between Senator Lockwood's campaign managers and the members of the Coalition Committee regarding the best methods to be used. One of Senator Lockwood's adherents said yesterday that Senator Lockwood was placing more reliance upon personal appeals to women voters than on meetings in parlors and hotels, which frequently were also of the nature of social events. With 447,000 women registered the division of their vote is considered particularly important, and it was said to have been the desire of Senator Lockwood's managers to reach the women in the more modest homes and in the offices and factories rather than those of the more wealthy class.

Samuel Untermyer, who made his first speech for Senator Lockwood last Friday night, will make his second speech tonight at Public School 84, Glenmore Avenue and Watkins Street, Brooklyn. Henry F. Cochrane, a Democrat, will preside, and the other speakers will be F. H. LaGuardia, Mrs. Mae M. Gooderson, Dr. Henry Moscowitz and Senator Lockwood.

TAFT CALLS FOR FUNDS.

Says Dollar Contributions Show Widespread Coalition Sentiment.

Expressing satisfaction over the large number of small subscriptions, Henry W. Taft, chairman of the Coalition Campaign Committee, issued a statement asking for more funds for the legitimate expenses of the campaign. Mr. Taft said:

"Dollar subscriptions pour in upon us every day. They are making up for the meagre contributions of those able to subscribe larger amounts but who, to a surprising extent, have been unwilling to do so.

"Our campaign must of necessity be conducted on a most economical basis. But if we can secure funds for the unavoidable expenses I do not want more; and a campaign without waste and foolish expenditures will be an object lesson and will be salutary in future campaigns.

"The idea of the dollar subscriptions has been a great success. It has awakened interest in thousands of people. The evidence is clear of an underlying and widespreading sentiment among the mass of people for Curran, Lockwood and Gilroy."

PASTORS CRITICISE CONTROL OF SCHOOLS

HYLAN ASSAILED IN SERMON

Rev. G. C. Hunter Declares the Mayor Has Not Done His Duty by the Schools.

The Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland, rector of St. George's Episcopal Church, yesterday morning preached on "Politics and the Public Schools." Henry J. Curran, Coalition candidate for Mayor, and Mrs. Curran are members of St. George's, but Mr. Curran was not in attendance yesterday.

A week ago yesterday Dr. Reiland gave reasons why he thought Mr. Curran should be elected, and his sermon yesterday, while dealing only in generalities, was taken to be a second boost for Mr. Curran.

The Rev. Graham C. Hunter, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, 310 East Forty-second Street, also preached a sermon on "New York's Public Schools," in which he said Mayor Hylan had not done his duty by the schools.

Dr. Reiland said:

"When you think of it, it is not surprising that our officials may neglect the public schools. It is not often that they are taken to task about them.

"The parents of most of the public school children have neither time nor talent to make intelligent demands upon the authorities. The children are trustfully sent to school and quite often as trustfully taken out and sent to work as soon as they get their working papers or are graduated, all of which is too soon and too brief."

Dr. Reiland criticised politicians who were the slaves of the machines rather than the servants of the people.

"Now our politicians care mostly for what the powerful and wealthy think of them," he said. "Constituted authority does not give much consideration to the mass of people except around election time. And then it lies to them with insistent regularity."

The rector argued that a better generation than the present is not likely to come until there is provided a better training for the young. "To neglect the schools today is to damage the next generation," Dr. Reiland said. He added that what the young first get they never entirely forget.

Dr. Reiland refuted the idea that politics have no place for discussion in a church.

"Politics is that branch of science which treats of the principles of civic government," said Dr. Reiland. "Government is of the people, by the people and for the people. And whatever involves people involves character, and what involves character involves religion.

"Now, our politicians in office call themselves servants, and they have chosen a large word for a small meaning. Most of them continue to behave not as servants of the whole people but as servants of the expectant machinery which makes them, moves them and sometimes mauls them at the expense of the rightful destiny of a long-suffering public. But political office is a sacred trust, quite as sacred as the priesthood; and with greater obligations today because it has greater power.

"Give us in office men sincerely devoted to the welfare of their fellowmen, not actuated by self-seeking, but by self-surrender to the problems and prospects of the public good, not given to pocket-books or bank books, but to the plain man's purse.

"Our officials should not be chosen parasites of a party, nor should they cringe in obsequious sycophancy under the influence of bosses—the interests of the dollar sign."

Dr. Hunter declared that although New York was the richest city in the world it was "heartless" toward its children. "It has millions to make Fifth Avenue the most beautiful street in the world, but starves its school," he said.

"More than 120,000 children are on part time," he continued. "We are so short of seats in our schools that 195,000 more have to attend on a double-session plan, sharing desks with some one.

"The reason for the defeat of Mayor Mitchel was opposition to the Gary plan, but the present overcrowding has the evils of the Gary plan without its advantages.

"Six hundred thousand children more are in oversized classes. No Western city in the United States would treat its children so. We spent thousands to gild the babies on the ceiling in the Public Library, but neglected the living ones who will control America tomorrow.

"One hundred thousand immigrants every year have their first contact with American democracy in the schools of New York, and we underequip the schools.

"The Hylan Administration has not done its duty. The Mayor has failed in his obligation to the schools. The city has not done its part."

GERMANS WILL WORK IN POLISH SILESIA

Big Companies Decide to Run Properties at Highest State of Efficiency.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—German properties in the districts of Koenigshuette and Laurahuette, in Upper Silesia, will be conducted at the finest state of efficiency, although the region where they are located has been awarded to Poland. Officials of Silesian mining and smelting companies met here yesterday, and decided that the action of the Council of the League of Nations should not interfere with the conduct of business.

"We Upper Silesians," said Dr. Hilger, General Director of the Laurahuette Company, "will not lose our spirit, but will continue our work as long as we honorably can. The managements of all the companies have made plans to this end."

600 RESERVE CHAPLAINS.

Most of Those in the Corps Have Had War Experience.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Members of the clergy, the great majority with war experience and graduates of army chaplain schools at home or in France, are well represented in the officers' corps of the army. About 600 commissions as reserve army chaplains have been issued. They include five Majors, sixty Captains and the others First Lieutenants.

By denominations the distribution is: Roman Catholic, 165; Methodist, 115; Baptist, 91; Presbyterian, 71; Episcopal, 54; Disciples of Christ, 31; Congregational, 23; other sects, 12.

There are now 181 Chaplains in the regular army, including 41 Methodist, 39 Roman Catholic and 26 Baptist clergy in the larger denominations groups.

WOMAN FOUND DEAD OF GAS.

Two Jets Turned On, but Cousin Takes Issue With Suicide Theory.

Miss Sophie Oetes, 56 years old, was found dead yesterday afternoon in the third floor apartment of a house at 811 First Avenue, which she had owned until six months ago. Two gas jets were open. The smell of the escaping gas attracted the attention of William Rohe, a tenant, who found Miss Oetes lying dead in bed.

On a table in the room were several business papers addressed to Martha Strippell of 220 Bay View Avenue, Jersey City. Walter H. Tiebt, a cousin, took issue with the belief of the police that Miss Oetes had committed suicide. He said death was due to a recurrence of a paralytic stroke. Miss Oetes was said to be well to do.

CLARK, IN OPEN TILT, BOMBARDS BANTON

REPLIES TO HALF RETURNED

Conduct of Office, Declares Mr. Clark, Has Been "Incompetent and Fundamentally Dishonest."

John Kirkland Clark, Coalition candidate for District Attorney jousted in the political tourney last night with his Democratic opponent, Joab Banton. In fifteen minutes, and speaking so rapidly that the stenographers were left floundering astern, Mr. Clark hurled thirty-eight specific accusations at the Acting District Attorney, who sat restlessly awaiting his fifteen minute opportunity to reply. The Institutional Synagogue auditorium, 37-43 West 116th Street, was jammed to the guards with 1,000 listeners whose excitement frequently vented itself in forbidden applause. The conduct of the District Attorney's office for the past six years was described by Mr. Clark as "incompetent, inefficient and fundamentally dishonest to a degree unknown in the office since the days when Asa Bird Gardiner was removed."

It was the first debate of the campaign. Mr. Clark shot his questions crisply and rapidly, and he demanded an answer to each one. Mr. Banton, visibly surprised by the torrent of queries, accused his opponent of unfairness in not furnishing him with a copy of the questions in advance. In the fifteen minutes alloted him he managed to answer half the list of questions. Each side then had ten minutes for refutation.

At the outset Mr. Clark asked whether Mr. Banton was willing to defend the conduct of the District Attorney's office through Mr. Swann's term or only during the current year since Mr. Banton has been a member of the staff.

Not Responsible for Swann.

Mr. Banton's answer, taken by his opponent as a disavowal of the administration of Mr. Swann, was that he would undertake only the responsibility for the detailed management of the office since Jan. 1, 1921, the date of his entrance.

Mr. Clark wanted to know whether it was not a fact that when Mr. Swann entered office there were 550 indictments pending and that there are now pending 2,250 indictments for felonies on the bail calendar alone. Mr. Banton said there were 2,200 indictments for felonies pending. He did not know how many there were when Mr. Swann took office.

Mr. Banton admitted the charge of his opponent that no reports of the work of the District Attorney's office have been made public since 1917. He laid the blame for this condition on the high cost of print paper, due to the war. The increase of crimes he laid to the war, and said there were 14,000 untried felony cases in the Federal courts.

He admitted the charge that a man out on bail for a felony might not be tried for a year, during which time, according to Mr. Clark, the man might steal enough to engage a sharp lawyer who could "lick the political hacks" in the District Attorney's office. Mr. Banton denied that this condition had anything to do with the District Attorney's office.

Men on bail for alleged crimes, said Mr. Banton, had committed other crimes, but the law permitted them to be freed except for capital crimes, and the District Attorney merely had an advisory capacity in bail matters, bail being fixed by the Judge. The number of convictions in 1920 were lower than they should have been, admitted Mr. Banton in reply to the accusation of Mr. Clark, who said that the number of convictions for 1920 was lower than for any other previous year. He declared that since his assumption of the District Attorney's office there has been a gain of 44 per cent. in convictions.

Appointments for Merit Only.

Mr. Banton disavowed knowledge of the workings of the District Attorney's office before he entered it, saying that all the appointments he himself had made were on merit and for efficient work. He denied the charge that employes of the District Attorney's office seeking an increase in pay or an extension of vacation or a special assignment made the request to their Tammany district leaders. He denied that Grand Juries had asked the Assistant District Attorneys assigned to them to leave the room "so they could work without being annoyed and hampered."

In the period of refutation Mr. Banton told of his early life, of the death of his father when he was 4 years old, so that he had to go to work at the age of 8 and of his struggle for an education. He read what he said was a record of Mr. Clark's career in the District Attorney's office for five years, saying that Mr. Clark was supposed to have tried fifty-nine cases, that he actually tried seventeen, of which six were convictions, eleven acquittals and that twenty-eight pleas of guilty were entered, while thirteen defendants were discharged on their own recognizance and one was discharged on bail.

Mr. Clark was angry when he began his refutation and declared that the supposed record of five years' work outlined by his opponent was merely the work of six weeks one Summer when he relieved another man in one of the minor courts. To explain what he did in five years he piled up two feet of legal records on the speaker's table in front of him and said they represented two years' work on the Carnegie Trust Company and Northern Bank cases, which he carried up on appeal to the highest courts, winning a victory in each case. The first year of his term he worked with the Grand Jury in the presentation of fraudulent financial cases. Subsequently he was in charge of the prosecutions of grafting police officers indicted as a result of the work of Alderman Curran's Committee.

Charges a Side Step.

"My opponent would not dare to say that he would fire the incompetent men in the District Attorney's office if he were elected," said Mr. Clark. "He [illegible] see to it that all the [illegible] were competent. [illegible] the career of Mr. [illegible] notice the side step [illegible] a hit on the dance floor. He did not mention that the District Attorney's office handled less business in [illegible] than ever before, in spite of his statement that there was an increase in crime due to the war."

Among the questions not touched by Mr. Banton were:

"Is it not a fact that, over and over again, [illegible] which have been heralded with great headlines at the start have, [illegible] indictments were found, then been permitted to sleep unnoticed for years?

"Is it not a fact that the so-called [illegible] Slush Fund cases, which arose nearly four years ago, have not yet been brought on for trial?

"Is it not a fact that twelve persons indicted for violation of the laws against election frauds last year have not yet been brought on for trial?

"Is it not a fact that indictments found against prominent State officials a year ago, after being allowed to sleep for a year by your office, have been dismissed by a Judge elected to the bench by the Democrats, on the ground that the indictments never should have been found?

"Is it not a fact that during this current month a Deputy Police Commissioner has publicly announced that the District Attorney's office has failed in its duty in preventing the release on bail of men accused time and again of crime and who are under successive indictments?

Washington Insurance Company.

"Is it not a fact that when a group of financial pirates gained stock control of the assets of the Washington Insurance Company and of the Pittsburgh [illegible] Trust Company, complaints were lodged with your office years ago, but that no one was ever brought to trial here, and that people interested in punishing the wrongdoers had to go to Pittsburgh, Pa., in order to procure their punishment?

"Is it not a fact that the Governors of the State, during the last five and one-half years, have taken matters of criminal prosecution out of the hands of the District Attorney and placed them in the hands of the Attorney General in a larger number of cases than ever before in a similar period?

"Is it not a fact that when you took office you abolished the Bureau of Commercial Frauds, and that one who now makes a charge that he has been swindled out of money through a stock-jobbing deal is forced to go around to the Magistrate's Court and consult with the lowest paid members of your staff on duty there, who have no aid in the way of stenographers or investigators to follow up the complaints?

"Is it not a fact that larger numbers of automobiles are being stolen daily today than ever before, and that no efficient aid either to stop such thefts or to punish them has been rendered to the police by your office?

"Is it not a fact that in the last five years thousands of children have been killed on the streets by automobiles and that in many cases drivers have been criminally reckless, but that practically none of them have been successfully prosecuted criminally by your office?

"Is it not a fact that there is a larger number of unsolved killings in New York County on your record for the past year, and for the past five years, than ever before for the same length of time?

"Is it not a fact that tens of millions of dollars have been paid over by foreign-born residents of New York City for transmission to relatives and friends in Russia and Germany, Poland and Czechoslovakia and in Austria-Hungary and in Italy, and that millions and millions of it have never been forwarded, and that no efficient prosecution for such criminality has been conducted by your office?

"Is it not a fact that weeks ago evidence was placed in your hands showing extortion on the part of an employe of the Markets Department who, on the publication of the evidence, was immediately suspended, and that this evidence has never been presented to any court?

"Is it not a fact that for months the evidence against Hettrick and Brindell was in your office, but that no action was taken?"

HURLEY SAYS OUR SHIPS CAN GIVE GOOD SERVICE

90 Per Cent., He Asserts, Are Oil Burners and 25 Per Cent. More Efficient Than Coal Burners.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Edward N. Hurley, former Chairman of the Shipping Board, is in Washington to confer with Chairman Lasker in regard to the future of the American Merchant Marine. Mr. Hurley believes that much of the recent criticism of the condition of the Shipping Board's fleet was unwarranted and that the United States should retain a place as one of the great maritime nations.

"I have every confidence in Mr. Lasker and his efforts to upbuild an American merchant marine," said Mr. Hurley. "I think what he is doing is absolutely right in tying up the ships, but we ought to get behind the millions of tons of steel shipping that we have and impress the country that they are fine vessels.

"There is no fleet in the world 100 per cent. balanced, and our fleet is no exception; we have about 10,000,000 tons of steel ships, 90 per cent. of which are oil burners, which gives them a decided advantage over all foreign flag ships, and as James A. Farrell, President of the United States Steel Corporation, said in his address before the National Trade Council in Cleveland in May, 'the steel ships built by the Shipping Board during the war and since will average up with all other ships built in foreign countries.'

"The Shipping Board can give service to American manufacturers as good as any foreign ships can, and I am sure that Mr. Lasker and his associates are particularly anxious to render that service to American shippers into the ports of the world.

"It is fortunate that Mr. Lasker induced Mr. Powell to join him as President of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. He speaks the language of shipping and, as he has built a large number of ships for the Emergency Fleet Corporation, he knows that we have millions of tons of fine ships that should be patronized by American shippers. There are only 5 per cent. of all of the other ships of the world oil burners, and coal burners have 25 per cent. less efficiency."

Zionist Secretary Announces American Quota for Keren Hayesod.

Louis Lipsky, General Secretary of the Zionist Organization of America, announced at a conference of the National Executive Committee at the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society Building, Lafayette and Seventh Streets, that America is expected to contribute $15,000,000 to the Keren Hayesod for the fiscal year. This sum was decided upon, Lipsky said, at the Carlsbad congress, where he headed the American delegation.

The campaign for this amount will be launched at a dinner at the Hotel Astor on Nov. 13, two days after the arrival here of the European delegation, which will include Nahum Sokolow, President of the World Zionist Executive Committee; Professor Otto Warburg and Chaim Nachum Bialik, a Hebrew poet, reported killed last year by the Bolsheviki.

The local organization has received authority to open a branch of the Jewish Colonial Trust here, through which all financial transactions bearing on the Keren Hayesod will be transacted.

STOLEN CAR SOLD TO MAYOR

Youth Held in Jersey Victimized Residents of Two Maine Cities.

WESTBROOK, Me., Oct. 30.—Mayor John Lawrence of this city and ten other residents have discovered that they unwittingly bought automobiles alleged to have been stolen. Recently a young man visited the city and offered cars at bargain prices. He sold eleven here and three in Freeport. The youth is now under arrest in New Jersey, charged with the theft of automobiles.

The fact that the cars sold in Freeport had been stolen has been established and the purchasers have been compelled to give them up.

The Mayor and other buyers in this city have retained counsel to make a legal contest to enable them to keep their automobiles.

old, in front of the boy's home at 112 West 117th Street. The boy was taken to Knickerbocker Hospital suffering from a fractured skull.

Witnesses said, according to the police, that when his car struck the boy Kornblum drove away, disregarding the shouts of several persons. Max Rubin of 307 Scholes Street, Brooklyn, and Henry Weinberg of 127 West 117th Street, told the police that they had jumped on the running board of Kornblum's car when traffic forced him to halt at Lenox Avenue and 116th Street. Policeman Mahoney of the West 123d Street Station arrested Kornblum after the two men had called him from his post.

A dense fog near Trenton, N. J., caused injuries to three men who were driving a motor truck near Penns Neck. Unable to see the road, Stanley Knosky of 114 Durand Street, Trenton, drove into a car ahead. Knosky was removed to a Trenton hospital suffering from a fractured skull. Because of broken ribs, the occupants of the car ahead, Frank Stevens of 28 Elm Street and Louis Mancher of 37 Pierce Avenue, Trenton, were taken to the same hospital.

ENGLISH SPOKEN WIDELY IN MOSCOW

Is Predominating Language in Government Departments and the City Generally.

REDS FROM HERE CONVERTED

Cease Denouncing This Country as "Exploited," and Some Speak of It With Affection.

MOSCOW, Oct. 8 (Associated Press).—English has become the predominating foreign language in the Bolshevist Foreign Office and in all Government departments and in Moscow generally.

Fourteen thousand Russians, or naturalized Americans of Russian origin, came to Russia when the revolution opened up the doors for them. They streamed across Siberia for months and found their way to their old homes in the land of revolution.

The number of English-speaking persons has been swelled by deportations from America and by emigrants from England and its colonies who were interested in the experiments which the Soviets were working out.

Through their training abroad, most of these English-speaking persons were better equipped for Government work than native Russians and have made their way into important places with the Government in both Asiatic and European Russia.

Three years ago most of the Russians returned from America were extremely bitter in their denunciation of the United States, but they have modified their views. Their experience in helping to run a Government has taught them it is not as easy as it looks. They have changed as the entire Soviet Government has changed, and it is not unusual to hear them speak with affection for America. They look toward America for help. Most of them insist that America is the only country which is broad enough in gauge to develop a country the size of Russia.

Almost without exception, the Russians who have been in America believe the American child-feeding is an initial step toward recognition. They have ceased denouncing America as an "exploited" land. The floods of abuse are now poured out on France, Poland and Rumania. After the United States, England seems to be most in favor, with Germany a close third.

Language schools in Moscow have great demand for English lessons and second-hand book stalls in the markets find a ready sale for English books.

SOVIET RUBLE OUTPUT IS 5,750,000,000,000

Reported Opening of American Bank in Manchuria With $10,000,000 Capital.

MOSCOW, Oct. 30 (Associated Press).—Paper money reaching the enormous total of 5,750,000,000,000 rubles has been issued by the Soviet Government, the latest output being 750,000,000,000 rubles in new money for the opening of the national bank.

The city Soviet has published an order permitting newspapers to publish advertisements, which have been absent from the columns of journals here for four years. Advertisements have been taxed heavily.

WARSAW, Oct. 29 (Associated Press).—The Soviet Legation here announced today that there has been a new invasion of the Ukraine under the direction of General Petlura, the anti-Bolshevist leader, from Polish territory. The towns of Gusatin and Grodek have been taken by the Petlura troops and a battle is raging at Kamenetz-Podolsk.

The legation says that fresh detachments of Petlura troops are crossing the frontier with the full co-operation of the Polish military and railroad authorities.

The Soviet authorities here have demanded an explanation from the Polish Foreign Office.

SEE RUSSIA HEADED FOR NEW REGIME

DEBT OFFER SIGNIFICANT

But It Is Held Both Here and in London to Be Wholly Inadequate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Although the State Department declines to comment on the proposal of the Government of Soviet Russia for a resumption of relations with the powers, it is apparent that the proposal is regarded as inadequate. The official text has not been received by this Government, and comment will be withheld until it has been delivered and opportunity given to examine it.

The Soviet Government's proposal that it should recognize only those foreign obligations which existed prior to the war is looked upon here as a mere feeler intended to initiate negotiations.

The very fact that such a proposal is reported, however, increases the feeling inspired by recent accounts of changes in the economic system of Russia that the Moscow authorities are prepared, if not wholly to surrender Bolshevist tenets, yet so to modify them as to assure the reinstitution of the capitalistic system.

Some observers see in the proposal a distinct rift in the Russian cloud, believing that it foretells the beginning of negotiations with the Western powers, but on a different basis from that which the Soviet describes. It is a question whether France, for instance, would consent to treaty with Lenin, Trotzky and Tchitcherin, and she might insist upon the retirement altogether of those officials from the Russian Government as a condition precedent to the opening of negotiations.

Confessions of failure lately made by Lenin and Trotzky make it appear that they realize the impossibility of establishing Bolshevist rule and that they might, with guarantees of personal safety and security for their property, resign the Government to a coalition which would include representatives from all the stronger Russian parties, with probably a Cadet or Constitutional Democrat as Premier.

British View of Proposal.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—It is pointed out here that the Soviet Government's offer regarding recognition of Russia's debts is both conditional and limited.

It is conditional upon the signing of general peace treaties between Soviet Russia and the powers, and it is limited to recognition of State loans contracted by the Czarist Government before 1914. The limitation rules out not only the huge war debts but also large pre-war foreign borrowings of Russian municipalities and foreign capital subscribed to Russian State-fostered companies which the Soviet Government confiscated.

Russia's pre-war debt has been variously estimated at from £700,000,000 to £1,040,000,000, while on Jan. 1, 1917, the total State debt was placed at £3,358,000,000. Advances made to Russia by the Allies during the war aggregated between £400,000,000 and £800,000,000. British advances totaled approximately £568,000,000.

During the difficult negotiations on the subject of the trading agreement between this country and Russia, the question of these debts arose because it could not be understood that the British Government would enter into an agreement of this kind if the Soviet were to repudiate these debts. The British contention was that if the British Government were to admit that the Russian Government could repudiate past debts it might be a precedent for the next Russian Government to follow suit.

There is also the anxiety of the French Government. France has many millions invested in Russia. Before the war it used to be said that France had invested at least £400,000,000 in the Russian debt.

The Daily Chronicle says the Soviet's offer can scarcely remain in its present form. "Moscow," it adds, "had better remember that even when it acknowledges its debts it will have a hard task to reawaken in the Western investor any confidence in Russian investments, and its only chance of getting around the obstacle at all is to make its recognition as full and frank as it can."

FELICITATES PRESIDENT OF CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Minister Crane at Independence Day Reception Congratulates Him on Restored Health.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PRAGUE, Oct. 30.—Like a breath of fresh air through the close mobilization atmosphere was the speech delivered by Richard Crane, the American Minister, who was the central diplomatic figure at the gala reception given by President Masaryk on the republic's third Independence Day.

Mr. Crane, addressing the President on behalf of the entire diplomatic corps, said:

"We have neither hesitation nor mental reservations when we give expression of our personal high opinion of you, Mr. President, as a thinker and statesman with whom, just as with your Government, our relations have been ever so agreeable and useful. Great is our feeling of relief and joy over your complete cure and return to complete health, thanks to which you remain the leader of your people along the path of peace which is your ideal.

"On the eve of this day events and reactions have transpired which could darken the horizon of Central Europe. One can, however, hope that this peace to which your Government and country have zealously consecrated themselves will be preserved in accord with the laws of nations and rights of peoples.

"It is a great personal satisfaction, on the eve of my departure from Prague, to have the opportunity of expressing my sincere wish that the Czechoslovak public under your wise leadership and God's protection may continue on the path of prosperity and continue to exert its moral and material influence for the cause of peace and harmony among nations."

SIMONS ADVISES GERMANY.

Should Stay Out of League Till America Joins, Ex-Minister Says.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—Germany would make a "grave mistake" if she should enter the League of Nations while the United States and Russia stand outside that organization, declared Dr. Walter Simons, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, in an interview with the Gazette of Gelsenkirchen, Westphalia, yesterday.

He added he expected the United States would help Germany, but declared he did not know the form this assistance would take. He suggested the possibility, however, that America might use Germany as a middleman in an effort to secure Russian trade.

Dr. Simons asserted that the expectation that anti-French propaganda would gain ground in American was a fallacy.

ROME, Oct. 29.—The Pope received in private audience today Mother Maurice, Superior of the Order of Daughters of Charity, who is going to look after the distribution in Rome of milk on behalf of the Free Milk for Italy Movement. His Holiness took great interest in the arrangements and gave exact instructions for converting three rooms in the Santa Marta Convent into a suitable dispensary. He also gave orders that the doctors at the Santa Marta Hospital should attend the dispensary, giving the babies free attention.

Commendatore Segante, Chamberlain of the Vatican household, will be in charge of the distribution throughout Italy under the Pope's direct supervision. The Vatican workmen are already busy preparing the dispensary, which it is hoped to have ready before Christmas. An order for the first hundred cases of milk has already been wired to America. The Pope has dictated a letter blessing the enterprise, thanking the American people for their generous help and imparting the apostolic benediction to all contributors.

REUNION DINNERS CLASH.

Local Aviators Perplexed by Two Armistice Night Invitations.

Local aviators who hold an annual reunion dinner are in a dilemma as a result of two such gatherings announced for Armistice night—one by the Aero Club of America, at the Hotel Pennsylvania, and another by Laurence La Tourette Driggs, founder of the American Flying Club, which merged with the Aero Club last year. In a circular sent out to flyers, Driggs accuses the Aero Club of using the term "third Armistice dinner" without authority, and declares that "preparations are under way to organize an aviators' club in New York City."

Harold H. Hartney, Managing Director of the Aero Club, in a letter pointed out that the Aero Club handled the dinner last year, and offered to use his influence with the directors of the club towards having the proceeds of the dinner applied on the debts of the old American Flying Club.

URGE WIDE REFORMS IN VETERANS' BUREAU

Senate Committee Finds Only 5,050 Ex-Service Men Have Been Rehabilitated.

HOSPITAL CONDITIONS BAD

Appropriation of $16,400,000 for Sick and Increasing of Insurance to $10,000 Recommended.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Sweeping recommendations, designed to increase the efficiency of the Veterans' Bureau, were made in a report published today by the special Senate committee which is investigating Government activities for the relief of former service men. The report was the second compiled by the committee, which has not yet completed its task.

The bureau should "broaden its interpretation and widen the scope of application of existing laws," the report said, adding that additional legislation would be sought to meet deficiencies shown by its hearings. Among the specific recommendations made were:

Appropriation of $16,400,000 for hospitals; transfer of all Government hospitals, including soldier homes not needed by the army or navy, to the bureau; creation of a chaplain corps for service in hospitals and training centres; provision of cemeteries at soldier hospitals for interment of veteran dead; standardization of training, permitting the applicant to select so far as possible his own vocation; extension of existing insurance to $10,000 for each policyholder if he wants it, and extension of insurance and compensation privilege to Americans who served in allied forces.

Cancellation of contracts with State, municipal and private hospitals which were not in existence April 1, 1917, and with all similar institutions which after inspection are found unsuitable, was recommended as one administrative reform, others under this head including:

Issuance of rules and regulations for the maintenance of order and discipline; frequent and thorough inspection of hospitals and training centres; elimination of politics from appointments and the establishment of additional vocational centres at institutions where mental and tubercular patients are under treatment.

To July 1, 1921, there had been 388,000 applications for vocational training, the committee found, adding that "although we are approaching the third anniversary of the armistice," only 5,050 have been rehabilitated. "It is with deep regret," the committee said, "that we report this melancholy fact."

Only 12,000 men have accepted training without pay out of a total of 98,913 eligibles, and only 96,000 with pay out of 139,300 eligibles, the report said, the committee finding that "a vast majority" of those eligible "are unable or unwilling to train because of their inability to support themselves without pay." About one-half of those training are in schools, colleges or universities, "many receiving better educational opportunities than they otherwise could have obtained."

Many veterans, the committee charged, delay rehabilitation "because usually the sum of the maintenance pay and the wage considerably exceeds the wage they could earn upon rehabilitation."

Special reference was made to conditions which the committee found at the Pascagoula, Miss., and the Nauvoo, Ill., training centres, but the report said a repetition of those "very unfortunate experiences" would be prevented by requiring the completion of training centres before the men are admitted for training.

Pointing out that only 1,200 of the 8,000 employes in the bureau in July last were former service men, the committee declared it was "unable to understand why the board thus discriminates against former service men," and suggested the "immediate cutting down of the large force of employes in Washington."

The committee said the Government had failed to obtain "results commensurate with the large expenditures" in rehabilitation work, and expressed belief "that knowledge of the Government's failure prevented men from seeking hospital treatment until too late, and a stream of dying patients beyond the possibility of cure is in part the result."

Location of hospitals upon improper sites was denounced, that at Fort McHenry, Md., being cited as an example.

"The time has come," the committee asserted, "to decrease the number of contract hospitals," which, it finds, were the cause of "just complaints." In many cases "contracts were sought by private agencies * * * inspired by the hope of large profits." "The peak of the load" in hospital needs will not be reached until 1927, the investigators believed.

"We feel it necessary to emphasize as strongly as possible the absolute necessity of expending money appropriated by Congress for the hospitalization of former service men without reference to insistent but ill-advised local demands, political interfering, aggrandizement of existing Government agencies or agitation of local groups of any kind whatsoever," the committee declared.

"Abominable conditions have existed in various hospitals which could have been avoided, and which should be avoided in the future. The need of new hospitals is too clear for argument."

The committee criticised the policy which dealt with compensation claims as "a purely medical problem," and states that many applicants have been unfairly and unjustly rated, others have had their compensation reduced without just cause, and some are receiving more compensation than they should. The system has been wholly unsatisfactory, unjust and unfair, the committee stated, "can not be too strongly condemned and should receive special attention by Congress." A careful re-examination of all disallowed claims is recommended.

The report showed about [illegible] policies of term insurance and [illegible] life insurance policies in effect on Aug. 1, 1921.

In discussing the question of maintaining proper discipline among trainees and patients, the committee declared that, while the men should not be compelled to submit to army discipline, proper rules should be enforced. The problem has not been solved, the report said, and in some places, like Johnson City, Tenn., "amazing conditions existed." A class of "unworthy beneficiaries," small in number but noisy, the committee asserted, "are doing great harm to their more worthy comrades." Such men, it was added, "pretend the need of hospitalization" "for the sake of the good living at the expense of the Government, and are constant trouble-makers." The committee urged their dismissal.

Italians on the murder charge of which they were later convicted, is now trying to obtain a new trial for them.

"In view of the persistence with which the press of the country has spread fantastic stories without the slightest foundation in fact," the statement said, "stories whose chief effect is to hurt the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti, the committee conducting the defense feels called upon to make an unequivocal statement. The dime-novel rumors and lies that have been swallowed by newspapers in Boston and elsewhere seem to us to have been 'planted' by those who want to embarrass and discredit the entirely legal and peaceable national defense.

"The lurid plots and threats attributed to mythical individuals referred to as 'Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers' are so thoroughly harmful to the effect being made to save the two men from the electric chair that they could not have originated in the minds of friends. Either they were planted by persons desirous of putting the cause of the two prisoners into disrepute or they are lies pure and simple.

Asks "Square Deal" for Men.

"We feel that the level-headed, intelligent and honest portion of the community accepts these accusations for what they are worth. Nevertheless, the incessant printing of alarmist headlines about fictitious plots and attacks, with not a scintilla of truth in the body of the articles to justify these headlines, is sure to create a state of public mind wherein the real issue—namely, whether Sacco and Vanzetti are guilty or not of the crime charged against them—will be lost sight of."

The statement asks that newspapers "should not sacrifice all the principles of justice and a square deal toward two men [illegible]. We make the plea in the certainty that millions of supporters of clean journalism, including the greater portion of journalists themselves, are with us on this proposition. We ask that the newspapers apply to rumors and far-fetched theories not alone the standard of news value, but also that of common sense and human decency.

"We earnestly appeal to the people to judge the guilt or innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti on the basis of evidence introduced in the courtroom, and not on the basis of newspaper fabrications about the two men and their friends."

REDS HERE ALSO PLAN MASS MEETINGS

Mass demonstrations in all parts of the United States, similar to those in European cities, to express indignation against the impending fate of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, the two Italian labor organizers whose murder appeal will be decided by the Appellate Court of Massachusetts on Dec. 1, are being planned by communists and other radical organizations.

Announcement of the plan was made last night by the Workers Defense Union, the Italian Committee for Defense of Political Prisoners, the American Labor Alliance and other organizations, after a conference at 201 West Thirteenth Street.

The conference, which was called by the Labor Alliance, was said to have drafted plans for protests equalling those in Paris, Rome and other cities, causing great disorders. The announcement said that the climax of the campaign would come on Nov. 20, when meetings probably would be held in Madison Square Garden and similar centres in other parts of the country. Frank P. Walsh will be invited to address the Garden meeting. The committee added that invitations were being extended to the American Federation of Labor and independent labor bodies, the Italian Chamber of Labor, the Industrial Workers of the World and the Socialist Party to participate.

"This fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti is one of the most urgent tasks before the organized labor movement," said Art Shields at the Workers' Defense Union last night. "The Sacco and Vanzetti case not only puts American justice on trial; it represents a savage attack on the labor movement. They can be saved only by united action on the part of labor.

"It is significant that the newspapers crying for their execution say very little [illegible]

[illegible] organized labor as represented by the American Federation of Labor said that they would have no part in the plan. They pointed out that the American Labor Alliance was advocating a communist form of government for the United States and had openly declared its intention to wreck the American Federation of Labor by "boring from within."

The announcement of the demonstrations was believed to have been a result of the demonstration held in Rutgers Square on Saturday. Radical publications have begun to make their appearance on the lower East Side containing appeals to the workers to arise in behalf of Sacco and Vanzetti. Describing the demonstrations of European workers, one of these publications said:

"In the meantime, the workers of one country vigorously resent the brutal prosecution of workers in another country. There is something brewing, masters of America." The paper adds that "we do not believe that the slaying of American Ambassadors in foreign countries will secure the release of our unfortunate Italian fellow-workers."

Dozens of other pamphlets and publications are being put in circulation throughout the country. Speakers are delivering addresses almost every night on the east side appealing for help.

DR. GRANT WANTS PRESS 'CLEANSED'

Invokes Church Influence Against 'Bias,' Citing the Sacco-Vanzetti Case.

Citing the Sacco-Vanzetti case as an example of the American press obscuring the facts, the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, in a sermon on "Labor and the Press" at the Church of the Ascension last night, urged that the church use its influence with the press to "cleanse it of its biased attitude and make it educational, a purveyor of facts."

"What we want is a press," he said, "that will throw a great ray of light on all these problems of labor.

"We must ask, in the interest of peace and of co-operation, that the press of the country shall not be a partisan capitalistic press, making out a case of one side at a time, but we should demand that it get at the truth and present the truth.

"This would promote a bigger understanding and clearer intelligent thought, and we want to know the real economic [illegible] of the day. We don't want to be fooled, deceived or obscured about a thing."

Reading from accounts in Paris newspapers about the Sacco-Vanzetti case, Dr. Grant said that "by reading the New York newspapers I would never have known these two men were Italian labor leaders, but would have believed them radicals, communists, who were trying to stir up revolution against the Government."

He deplored, he said, that "editors did not write what they think in editorials, but always what they were told to—a regrettable and dangerous thing."

NORTHCLIFFE STIRS COMMOTION IN EAST

BASIS FOR OUTLET IN CHINA

Copyright, 1921, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

TOKIO, Oct. 30.—Lord Northcliffe has exploded another bombshell in the Far East by a cabled statement to The London Times that the Peking Government is a pro-Japanese clique, and, therefore, Tokio is sufficiently strong to prevent China from making a case at Washington. Behind this lies something which Japanese newspapers dare not even hint, but which is revealed by a recent statement that Japan agrees to regard immigration as a domestic problem.

Viewed by American and Australian eyes, this appears to waive all questions in those countries, but it has deeper significance. If America and Great Britain accept this view, then Japan, which covets colonization of territory in Asia, can say as to Manchuria that this is a domestic subject solely between Japan and China. If the Northcliffe allegation is true, the Peking Government might be wheedled into a discussion covering this point.

Japan is determined not to recede from Manchuria and is insisting on its twenty-one demands and on replacing its Liaotung lease, expiring in 1923, with a 99-year lease covering the same territory. Japan insists her islands are overcrowded and must expand to Asia despite the possibilities of Hokkaido, Formosa, &c. The American Military Intelligence Bureau in Washington has a chart which shows that Japan already has room for its surplus population without additional territory.

Japan maintains large forces in Asia, all affording cover for a fast increasing Japanese settlement and economic penetration. It has two divisions in Vladivostok and half a division in Saghalien. In Manchuria it has one occupational division with 6,000 other troops as a railroad guard. In Shantung it has a brigade. In Tientsin it has a brigade and a like force at Hankow. A smaller force in Amoy is called police. It also has two divisions in Korea and half a division in Formosa.

It is impossible to obtain reliable statistics regarding the Japanese population of occupied territory. But it is growing rapidly, particularly in Siberia and in parts of Manchuria. In Korea are 350,000 Japanese, of whom 200,000 antedate annexation. In Formosa are 143,000 against 3,300,000 Chinese and 100,000 natives.

If Northcliffe speaks truly and Peking yields to Japan, there is little likelihood of Manchuria being thrown open to Japanese colonization, as that region affords Old China an excellent outlet for its own surplus. For instance, 200,000 migrate annually to Manchuria from Shantung alone, of whom 175,000 remain permanently. Likewise, there is a large Chinese migration to Inner Mongolia and Maritime Siberia.

Japan controls its Asiatic spheres of influence largely by dominating ports and means of transportation and also getting a firm grip on the economic features. It is quite willing to pay handsomely for produce while selling imports low. This enables it to obtain control through the economic channel, in addition to which though money is tight Japanese money may be had freely in the spheres mentioned for financing trade [illegible] expansion element.

CHINESE FERMENT OVER JAPAN

Copyright, 1921, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

TOKIO, Oct. 30.—It seems settled beyond a doubt that the entire Chinese problem will come before the Washington conference in spite of subterranean efforts by interested powers to keep the subject out. The Chinese see in any settlement of the Shantung issue direct with Japan the impossibility of avoiding some of the even more serious conditions imposed in the twenty-one demands which under some cloak or other surely would have come before a meeting between the Chinese and the Japanese.

Japan was certain to have used the British possession of Hongkong as a counter argument against the actual giving up of Shantung, as Viscount Kato [illegible] stated in a speech to the Kenseikai party. The Chinese feel that Great Britain seeks only a favorable opportunity to offer to return Wei-hai-wei in exchange for mineral rights in Kwantung, which are much coveted.

So there comes about that unanimity of sentiment throughout China against any negotiations whatever with Japan. Men who for years had been out of politics in China emerged from obscurity to voice their opposition, and students, trade bodies and other organizations entered their protests, which still re-echo.

There came to the front on the opposite side Kang Yu Wei, called "the modern sage of China," who since the failure of the monarchical coup has been living in almost utter seclusion near Lake Sihu, in Hang-chow. Opposite Mr. Kang is Liang Chi Chao, another old-time leader now living quietly in Tien-tsin, who addressed an open letter of protest against dealings with Japan to Foreign Minister Yen.

Student bodies everywhere demanded an absolute avoidance of any chance for direct negotiations, while a largely attended meeting of Shantung business men held in Tsi-nan-fu resolved to refuse to pay taxes if the Government did not heed the wishes of the Shantung people and refuse negotiations. Trade guilds in nearly every province wired protests to Peking and the boycott of Japanese goods took on new life.

On top of it all came the threatened strike of the compradores. A compradore may not be a term well known in the United States, but as an individual he is a vital link in the relations between the foreign business houses and Chinese traders. For the compradore is the middle man.

The compradores have their guild, just as nearly every other line of activity in China has its organization. When the compradores went on record against negotiating with Japan and insisting that the conference in Washington support China things began to happen. They demanded that their firms telegraph that their Governments give China a square deal at the conference or they would hand in their resignations en bloc and foreign trade could go hang.

Since the foreign firms are helpless without compradores, and since the union is an airtight one, the cables across the Pacific began to be burdened with messages.

SAYS JAPANESE FEAR FREED PHILIPPINES

Copyright, 1921, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

S. S. ST. ALBANS, En Route to Yokohama, Oct. 30 (Wireless via Manila).—"Japan fears Filipino independence; it wants the Philippines opened to Japanese capital and to Japanese landholders, but it hopes the United States will keep the islands," declared [illegible] Japanese Consul General at Manila, today. [illegible] is returning to Japan after several years' service in Manila.

"Our reasons for opposing independence are not due to any lack of sympathy for Filipino aspirations, but frankly are selfish," he said. "We have enough irons in the fire now and do not want any more. Independence of the Philippines unprotected by the United States would be just one more disturbing element in the Far Eastern situation, which cannot bear much more disturbance.

"The Filipinos can keep out immigrants with impunity as long as the United States is back of them, but should American protection be withdrawn it is difficult to see how the country would keep the islands for themselves. They have enough land to support many times the present population. The Chinese especially might demand full rights of residence.

"We would be unlikely to send settlers as our development is in other directions, but we might legitimately ask greater opportunities for investment in lands and minerals. In other words, pressure on the Philippines might be too strong for Filipinos to resist. The situation would be fraught with danger for all concerned.

"If the United States grants independence with protection, well and good. We would be delighted to trade with the islands and help with the expense of defending them and maintaining order."

SAYS ISSUE IS ARMS LIMIT OR WORLD RUIN

SEES DANGER IN SCIENCE

War Service "A Revelation of Unimaginable Horror" to the Rev. Dr. John Kelman.

"It may be said without fear of exaggeration that the alternative is now between some sort of arrangement for limiting national armaments and the utter ruin of every nation upon earth," declared the Rev. Dr. John Kelman, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, in his sermon yesterday morning. Dr. Kelman, who came here from Edinburgh, Scotland, two years ago, preached on "The Disarmament Conference," which he said was based on conclusions drawn from having spent last Summer in China and the previous Summer in Japan.

"In modern warfare the victor pays his desperate penalties as truly as the vanquished," continued Dr. Kelman. "This applies not only to the actual depletion of the best blood in the land, but to the economic and financial situation as well."

Dr. Kelman laid particular stress upon what he called "the inevitable and necessary interdependence of the nations." The welfare of one meant the welfare of all, he said.

Dr. Kelman told his audience he was born at the time of the Civil War and recalled innumerable wars fought since then. He said he could remember vividly the events of the Franco-Prussian and the Boer wars, and touched on his own service in the field during the World War. He asserted that while he had not changed his opinion one iota as to the absolute duty laid upon those who resisted the aggression of the Central Powers, nevertheless the effect of the World War upon him had been "a revelation of unimaginable horror."

"I believe that is the impression it has made upon the world, and there is no doubt that if war were to break out again upon a large scale it would be even more terrible than before. Science is daily adding to the possibilities of horror and destruction in case of any widespread clash of arms. The problems of war and peace have accordingly reached a most critical and ominous stage."

Dr. Kelman used as his text Psalm lxxvi., 10: "Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee; the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain." He said he believed both China and Japan have the capacity for world service if they were wisely directed by their leaders and encouraged by the right approach from other nations at the present time.

ITALIAN MINISTERS OBJECT.

Dr. Charles Fama of 247 Bedford Park Boulevard, the Bronx, Secretary of the Italian Protestant Ministerial Association of New York, made public yesterday a letter to General Armando Diaz protesting on sectarian grounds against the official honors to be paid to the memory of an unknown Italian soldier at St. Patrick's Cathedral on Nov. 4. The letter said:

"The Italian Ministerial Association of New York City, representing forty Italian Protestant churches of various denominations, solemnly protests against the [illegible] sectarian spirit which is manifest in the commemoration of the glorious unknown Italian soldier in the Roman Catholic Cathedral of St. Patrick on Nov. 4."

The letter declares that the Italian army was composed not only of members of the Roman Catholic Church, but of men of many beliefs. The letter further charges that the Catholic Church has been unfriendly to the present Italian Government. It is urged that the Italian soldier be honored with civil and military ceremonies held in a public place.

MISSION TO ASK AID OF AMERICAN POLES

ONE A NEW YORK DOCTOR

Went Over With Polish Forces Raised in This Country and Was Hit by 102 Pieces of Shrapnel.

The former American liner New York returned yesterday from her first round trip to Danzig under her new owners, the Polish Navigation Company, with seventeen first and thirty-eight third class passengers and ten stowaways. The latter were all aliens with the exception of [illegible] who stowed away on the liner when she left New York in September. He was permitted to land. The other nine will be deported.

Among the passengers in the first cabin were four Polish officials from Upper Silesia seeking financial support from Poles here for sufferers at home. The mission is headed by Captain Charles Grzaik, an artillery officer in the German Army until the armistice, who later commanded the revolutionists in Upper Silesia.

The others were Lieutenant Mavian Kenig, Lieutenant Louis [illegible] and Captain Adam Gozdawa [illegible], who practiced medicine in New York for some years before the outbreak of the war. [illegible] the left hand.

Captain Grzaik, the first man to arrive in this country [illegible] his mission had nothing to do with the conference in Washington so far as he knew at present.

The Captain said that the crops in Upper Silesia were good and that the people were all at work.

"We intend to visit the Polish colonies," he continued. "[illegible] to them to come forward with contributions and give their moral support to the suffering people in Upper Silesia, where help is badly needed."

O'RYAN CALLS WAR MURDER.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Oct. 30.—Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan, speaking on disarmament in the First Congregational Church here tonight, declared that "complete disarmament is a dream" and that that "partial disarmament is a means to an end."

"A remarkable circumstance has arisen out of the war in the apparent apathy of the people relative to future wars," he said. "War is an organized institution, intrenched by tradition and fortified by the vanity and ambition of men. It is a general belief that man is a fighting animal and that nothing can prevent him from fighting occasionally.

"The old adage, 'in time of peace prepare for war,' should be changed to 'in time of peace prepare to keep peace.'

Chinese contingent went to the Hotel Cairo on Q Street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth Streets, where the remainder of the Chinese official party will have quarters.

Guests of the hotel and friends of members of the contingent were waiting in the lobby. They made much of little Mrs. Ty Chen, wife of one of the attachés of the delegation, who wore a fur coat and carried a huge bunch of roses. The official list of the members of the Chinese party which arrived tonight contains ninety-two names, but some not included brought the total up to at least a hundred.

Cordiality Impresses Visitors.

The warm reception given the delegation by the American people would serve to cement the bonds of friendship between China and the United States, Dr. Liang said after he arrived at the Legation. Every member of the delegation had been touched by the greeting given, he said.

"There was no class of persons so favored and respected in China as the American colony," Dr. Liang continued. "We are glad to have them with us, and extend to them every courtesy," he said. "Such visits as that of the delegation to America and of Americans to China preserve that good feeling which has existed between the two countries for so many years."

Dr. Liang was reluctant to speak of the part which China would play in the coming conference.

"China feels," he said, "that in order to establish permanent peace in the Orient all frictional subjects must be eradicated. We are hoping that at the conference full justice will be given to China."

Speaking of the civil strife in China, Dr. Liang said that reports of the trouble were much exaggerated in this country. There were really no fundamental differences between the two sections, the North and the South, he held. Trade relations between the two sections were carried on as in normal times and communications were maintained.

India Propagandist Arrives.

The advance guard of the propagandists representing nationalities which emerged from the Paris conference dissatisfied with the terms of the Versailles Treaty arrived here today in the person of Sailendra Nath Ghose, as the spokesman of the Ghandi movement in India.

Mr. Ghose gave out a statement soon after his arrival telling of the movement to establish a republic in India. This statement is of great length and filled with historical data tracing the revolutionary movement in India from 1857. The agitation which the Ghandi followers have been making in India has apparently been transferred to the United States, in the hope of enlisting sympathy and lessening the influence of the representatives of Great Britain in the conference.

BIG PARLEY CHIEFS OF CELTIC ORIGIN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 30.—While so many prophets are foretelling what the Anglo-Saxons will do at the Washington conference, it might be pointed out that whatever is done at Washington will not be shaped by Anglo-Saxons at all.

David Lloyd George is a Celt and boasts of it. Secretary Hughes's father was named David, which, with his last name, indicates his Celtic origin. But that is not all. Aristide Briand is a Breton and so he is a Celt, too, as he so often loves to tell.

It is a little too much to expect the Japanese chief delegate to trace his ancestry Celtward, but the Celtic countenance of some of the principal figures of the conference is enough to justify speculation as to what Saint David will do to the giant god of war.

Wireless messages from the steamship Lafayette say that M. Briand expects to arrive in New York on Sunday and land the next morning.

CROWDS HAIL FOCH SPEEDING TO WEST

perched on roofs and dangled from iron railings. For a distance of a mile thousands of others were gathered on the streets that lined the tracks. A flat car was shunted to the rear of the train, and there Foch and Pershing stood at salute while a Pennsylvania National Guard band, wearing the red Keystone insignia of the Thirty-eighth Division, A. E. F., played the national anthems of the two countries.

Then the band struck up "Over There," Pershing's favorite. Pershing flapped his feet on the car floor in an agile "buck and wing," while Marshal Foch laughed and applauded.

While the train rounded the Horseshoe Bend, Marshal Foch and General Pershing stood on the rear platform. The Marshal's eyes caught sight of a huge "57" in whitewashed stone on the hillside.

"Que est ce, que c'est?" he queried of Pershing.

"That? Oh, er, les cinquante-sept variétés des, des—what's French for pickles?" General Pershing asked in desperation of Mr. Drake, and then added, triumphantly, "Pessie."

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 30.—The special train bearing Marshal Foch and General Pershing to Kansas City arrived here at 8 o'clock tonight and departed at 8:10 after a change of engines was made.

Government agents refused to allow a large gathering of people to enter the train shed. Among these was Dr. Aime Leteve, local French Consular Agent. When he established his identity he was permitted to enter, but as the train was then starting he was obliged to run along the plank walk while greeting the French generalissimo standing on the rear platform of his private car.

Foch and Staff at Church.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Before leaving Washington this morning, Marshal Foch, with his staff and several members of the French Embassy, attended mass at St. Matthew's Church.

The coming of the distinguished visitor was known to the rector, Mgr. Thomas S. Lee. A curate met the party at the main door and led the way to St. Anthony's Chapel, where the Rev. Jules Balanee, late chaplain in the French Army, but now on duty in Baltimore, officiated.

LEGION GREETS DIAZ, JACQUES AND COOLIDGE

All of These and Beatty Will Make Addresses at Convention's Opening Today.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 30.—Greeted in the Station Plaza by the cheers of thousands, General Armando Diaz of Italy and General Baron Jacques of Belgium arrived here today to attend the national convention of the American Legion, which opens tomorrow.

Escorted by a guard of honor through lanes of men, women and children, they were hurried to motor cars and whirled off to the homes of the Kansas City men whose guests they will be. Shouts of welcome followed them until the cars were out of sight.

At his own request no program of social entertainment was arranged for General Jacques. This afternoon he attended the Legion's aerial derby, and he spent a quiet evening.

General Diaz had a more strenuous day. The local colony of 13,000 Italians took him in charge in the afternoon. With his personal staff he occupied a box and heard Titta Ruffo, who came here especially for the purpose, hail him as Italy's hero with stirring martial music of Italian opera. Tonight he was the guest of the local Italian colony at dinner and later a jeweled sword was presented to him.

Vice President Coolidge also arrived today and received a warm greeting.

Three outstanding points engaged the attention of the Legion—the choice of the next National Commander and of the next convention city and a fight to remove the permanent headquarters from Indianapolis. There seemed to be a general understanding that a man from the South or West would be the next National Commander. The Eastern States thus far have not lined up behind any candidate. New York announced that it was not favoring any one, but would vote for the best man.

A resolution voicing a demand for immediate action by Congress on the Federal bonus proposal will be one of the principal issues taken up by the convention, it was said. The Resolutions Committee began work in executive session today.

The Credentials Committee certified the total convention voting strength at 1,060. New York holds the most votes with a total of 80. Pennsylvania comes next with 65 and Illinois third with 62.

Delegates from Alaska, Africa, China, the British Isles, Canada, the Panama Canal Zone, China, Cuba, France, Guatemala, Hawaii, Japan, Mexico, Peru, Porto Rico and Turkey will be seated. The alternates will swell the number on the floor more than two-fold.

About 500 delegates will attend the first national convention of the Women's Auxiliary, beginning Tuesday, at which the organization will be perfected and possibly a new name adopted. A point which leaders plan to bring up is eligibility, now limited to mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of Legion members or service men who gave their lives during the war.

The Legion convention will get under way early tomorrow morning with the call to order by National Commander John G. Emery of Grand Rapids, Mich. Welcoming speeches will be made in behalf of Kansas City and Missouri, and reports of committees and national officers will be heard.

Vice President Coolidge is to be the chief speaker of the morning. At noon memorial services will be held for Colonel Frederick W. Galbraith Jr., National Commander, who was killed in a motor car accident at Indianapolis last June while on Legion business.

General Diaz, General Jacques and Major Gen. John A. Lejeune of the Marine Corps will deliver messages to the veterans in the afternoon, and in the evening Admiral Beatty will address them.

Red tape in dealing with disabled service men has not been sufficiently done away with despite the Government's policy of decentralization of bureaus dealing with compensation of wounded veterans, the National Executive Committee of the Legion asserted at a meeting here today. The Executive Committee refused to adopt the report of the National Hospitalization Committee, which some members thought might have been construed as an endorsement of the Government's decentralization plan, and several committeemen said they were not satisfied that decentralization had been fully carried out.

The activities of the bureau were sharply criticised by some members, the principal complaint being that the red tape by which awards to disabled men have been subject to revision by officials in Washington had not been completely unwound. The Executive Committee returned the report to the Hospitalization Committee for revision.

A number of other issues which will take a leading part in the deliberations of the Legion convention were taken up by the Executive Committee. The question of endorsement of legislation restoring the sale of light wines and beer under conditions that would prevent the return of the saloon was brought before the committee by a delegation from the Labor Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, but the committee decided it was not properly within its jurisdiction.

The Orientals Committee's report, advocating rigorous laws to insure the practical exclusion of Japanese from the United States and declaring Japanese immigration to be a problem for national rather than State action, was referred by the Executive Committee without action.

D. J. Markey of the District of Columbia presented a report on the question of preference for war veterans in Federal Civil Service, which declared that recent orders by Cabinet officers granted many of the preferential rights for which the Legion has been waging a fight. The committee adopted a vote of thanks to Postmaster General Hays for an order giving veterans the preference in holding positions in the Post Office Department when reductions in the postal force are made.

Strict maintenance of a policy of national defense, the establishment of one main naval base on each coast and the re-establishment of a system of reserves and merchant marine cooperation with the regular naval forces were recommended in a report submitted by the Military and Naval Affairs Committee.

FOCH ACCLAIM PLEASES PARIS.

But We Also Hailed Carpentier Superlatively, Pertinax Says.

PARIS, Oct. 30.—The entire French press, with the exception of the Socialist and communist newspapers, today devotes much space to the reception in the United States of Marshal Foch, expressing great satisfaction over the warmth of the greetings accorded him in New York and Washington.

"There is not a single Frenchman who has not been moved by the triumphant welcome given Foch in New York and Washington," says a dispatch to the Temps. "Let us thank our American friends and tell them of our delight."

"In the eyes of our American friends," says the Intransigeant, "Foch is the greatest star in the world."

La Liberté declares that the American press is unanimous in greeting the allied Commander-in-Chief as the man who led the troops to victory.

"Pertinax," the political writer of the Echo de Paris, in a dispatch describing the enthusiastic welcome of Foch, says:

"It is hoped that the visit of the Marshal across seas will awaken the American nation from the torpor which a high Government official deplored to me today and mark a resumption of the traditional friendship for France. Americans are welcoming Foch superlatively. But so they did Carpentier."

BEATTY GUEST IN CHICAGO.

Admiral Again Expresses Hope for Armament Conference.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—Admiral Beatty, First Sea Lord of the British Admiralty, arrived here today, accompanied by Admiral Rodman of the United States Navy and a staff of aids. He received an enthusiastic welcome from Chicagoans and American Legion delegates en route to their national convention and was escorted to the Chicago Club, where he is making his headquarters during his brief visit.

Lady Beatty, formerly Ethel Field, daughter of Marshall Field of Chicago, remained in Washington, postponing her visit here several days.

Lord Beatty, who is to be chief naval adviser of the British delegation at the Conference on Limitation of Armament, expressed high hopes for the success of that meeting.

"We are sanguine that great good will result from the conference," he said, "otherwise we would not have come. President Harding is deserving of the gratitude of the whole world for arranging such a gathering.

"The present deplorable economic conditions throughout the world demand that something be done to reduce the heavy burden of taxation created by the costs of armaments. Surely some formula can be devised to this end and if the nations of the earth cling together in support of such a move, it cannot but succeed."

MEN OF THE 30TH TO RALLY.

Pershing to Address Big Reunion at Nashville Friday.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 30.—Many notables, including General John J. Pershing and a number of other high military officials, Governors and former Governors from several States, will take part in the Thirtieth Division reunion here Nov. 4 and 5, according to Frank B. Bowen, Secretary of the Thirtieth Division Association.

Mayor Felix Wilson of Nashville and Governor Alfred A. Taylor of Tennessee will deliver addresses Nov. 4, welcoming the visitors. Governor R. A. Cooper of South Carolina and Governor Morrison of North Carolina will respond. An address will then be delivered by General Pershing, whom Major General E. M. Lewis, commander of the Thirtieth Division overseas, will introduce.

Of the 78 Congressional Medals awarded for heroism during the World War, twelve were won by the Old Hickory Division. Eight of the winners are living, and will be entertained at this reunion as guests of the division.

CRISSINGER REPORTS BANK SYSTEM SOUND

But Resources of 30,815 Show Decrease of $3,390,269,000 Since June, 1920.

PUT NOW AT $49,688,839,000

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—A comparative statement of the condition of reporting banks as shown by the last bank call was made tonight by Controller of the Currency Crissinger. It shows that the banking system is sound although there has been a reduction of $3,390,269,000 in resources since June, 1920. The aggregate resources of the 30,815 reporting banks are $49,688,839,000.

The number of reporting banks include 8,154 national banks with resources, including rediscounts, of $20,517,862,000; 13,875 State banks with resources of $14,199,099,000; 623 mutual savings banks with resources of $6,040,121,000; 978 stock savings banks with resources of $557,910,000; 1,477 loan and trust companies with resources of $8,298,541,000, and 708 private banks with resources of $175,306,000.

"The total resources of the 8.154 national banks on June 30, 1921, including rediscounts amounting to $879,416,000, were $20,517,862,000, a reduction during the year of $2,893,391,000," the Controller reports. "Loans and discounts, which include paper rediscounted, acceptances and letters of credit, amounted to $12,242,802,000, compared with $14,085,056,000 on June 30, 1920. The investments of these banks amounted to $4,025,081,000, a decline during the year of $161,384,000. Of the total investments, $2,019,497,000 were United States securities, approximately $719,000,000 being old United States bonds deposited to secure circulation. Balances due these banks from other banks, bankers and trust companies on June 30, 1921, amounted to $1,344,519,000, a reduction during the year of $531,449,000. Due to a reduction in the deposits in national banks, their lawful reserve with Federal Reserve banks was reduced during the year $205,028,000, the amount of reserve on June 30, 1921, being $1,040,205,000. The cash in the vaults of these banks on June 30, 1921, was $374,349,000, or $76,002,000 less than the amount reported on June 30, 1920.

"Capital stock increased in the year from $1,224,166,000 to $1,273,880,000, while surplus and undivided profits, including amounts set aside as reserve for miscellaneous purposes, decreased from $1,533,172,000 on June 30, 1920, to $1,522,411,000 on June 30, 1921. Deposits to the credit of other banks and bankers were $693,009,000 less than on June 30, 1920, the aggregate on June 30, 1921, being $2,151,011,000. Individual deposits, including postal savings but exclusive of United States deposits to the amount of $249,039,000, were $12,742,281,000, or $1,393,332,000 less than the amount reported June 30, 1920. Rediscounts were reduced during the year from $1,214,516,000 to $879,416,000, and the liability on account of bills payable, including all other obligations representing borrowed money, was reduced from $991,552,000 to $592,563,000. National bank circulation outstanding increased during the year $15,969,000, the amount reported June 30, 1921, being $704,147,000.

"The number of banks under the supervision of the Banking Departments of the several States on June 30, 1921, was 22,661, an increase of 552 banks over the number reporting on June 30, 1920. The aggregate resources of these banks were $29,170,977,000, a reduction during the year of $496,878,000. Loans and discounts declined $469,185,000, the amount reported June 30, 1921, being $16,701,906,000. The investments of these banks increased during the year $158,193,000, or to $7,359,253,000. The amount on deposit with other banks to the credit of these banks (including lawful reserve and items in process of collection with Federal Reserve Banks of the 1,595 member banks of the Federal Reserve system amounting to $705,220,000) was $2,410,663,000, indicating a reduction in these balances of $301,377,000 during the year. Cash on hand aggregating $572,741,000 was $53,286,000 less than the amount reported June 30, 1920.

"Incident to the increase in the number of banks, capital stock was increased during the year $152,158,000, the amount reported June 30, 1921, being $1,630,631,000. Surplus and undivided profits amounted to $1,932,228,000, an increase of $78,973,000. Individual deposits decreased from $23,694,372,000 on June 30, 1920, to $22,730,282,000 on June 30, 1921; and all other deposits, exclusive of United States deposits amounting to $141,191,000, declined to the extent of $205,593,000, the amount reported June 30, 1921, being $658,689,000. Notes and bills rediscounted amounted to $392,268,000 compared with $284,746,000 on June 30, 1920; and bills payable were reduced to the extend of $9,718,000, the amount reported June 30, 1921, being $784,328,000.

"In connection with the liquidation in the assets and liabilities of all reporting banks in the United States island possessions during the past year, referred to in the preceding paragraphs, it is interesting to note the tremendous increase in the volume of the business of these banks as disclosed by their returns for June 30, 1921, and for June 30, 1914, a few months prior to the opening of the Federal Reserve banks.

"During this period the number of all reporting banks rose from 26,765 to 30815, and resources were increased 84.23 per cent., or from $26,971,398,000 to $49,688,839,000. The increase in the resources of national banks was $9,035,671,000, and of all other reporting banks $13,681,770,000. The increase in the loans and discounts of all of these banks was $12,656,351,000, or 89.33 per cent., the amount June 30, 1914, being $15,288,357,000, and on June 30, 1921, $28,944,708,000, which was nearly $2,000,000,000 in excess of the aggregate resources of all reporting banks (national and State) on June 30, 1914. Investments were increased more than 100 per cent., or from $5,584,925,000 on June 30, 1914, to $11,384,334,000 June 30, 1921. Balances due from banks, including lawful reserve with Federal Reserve Banks and other reserve agents, June 30, 1921, were $1,922,689,000 in excess of the amount reported June 30, 1914, namely, $2,872,698,000; while cash on hand decreased to the extent of $692,129,000, due to the fact that prior to the passage of the Federal Reserve act larger amounts of cash were held in the vaults of national banks and banks other than national than subsequent thereto, since the act of June 21, 1917, requires national banks and member State banks of the Federal Reserve system to maintain their entire lawful reserve with Federal Reserve Banks.

"Capital stock of the banks increased from $2,132,074,000 on June 30, 1914, to $2,904,511,000 on June 30, 1921. The increase in the capital stock of national banks during this period was $215,688,000, and in the State banks, $556,749,000. Surplus and undivided profits were increased $1,172,121,000; bank balances on the books of these banks to the credit of other banks and bankers were increased $104,624,000, and individual deposits increased $16,884,452,000, or from $18,588,111,000 on June 30, 1914, to $35,472,563,000 on June 30, 1921, $6,431,087,000 of this increase being in the deposits of national banks, while the increase in the State banks was $10,453,365,000. United States deposits increased to the extent of $323,575,000. Notes and bills rediscounted increased to the extent of $1,233,554,000, the amount of this paper on June 30, 1914, being only $38,130,000, against $1,271,684,000 on June 30, 1921. The liability for bills payable increased from $194,431,000, June 30, 1914, to $1,376,891,000, June 30, 1921. The liability of national banks on account of outstanding circulating notes was reduced between June 30, 1914, and June 30, 1921, $18,408,000, the amounts on the respective dates being $722,555,000 and $704,147,000.

"The percentage of loans and discounts of all reporting banks on June 30, 1914, to total deposits was 71.58, while the percentage of June 30, 1921, was 74.85."

MOVE NEARER STRIKE IN GARMENT TRADE

Manufacturers Say Threat Won't Halt Piecework System Nov. 14.

OPEN FACTORIES TO PUBLIC

Union Leader Says Referendum Going Out Tomorrow Will Favor Walkout, 100 to 1.

While officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union were perfecting plans yesterday for a general strike in the New York cloak and suit market, the Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Protective Association issued a statement attacking the union and ridiculing its threat to strike against the "piece-work system."

Manufacturers throughout the country will inaugurate the "piece-work" system Nov. 14 in defiance of the union's threat, the association's statement declared. Replying to charges by President Benjamin Schlesinger of the Garment Workers' Union that the manufacturers were attempting to re-establish the "sweatshop," the statement added that an open invitation would be extended to Mayor John Hylan, Major Curran, Judge Panken, members of the Board of Aldermen, other city officials and public-spirited citizens to inspect the manufacturing plants of the ladies' garment industry.

"The idea of the 'sweatshop' is preposterous," said the statement, "because there are no sweatshops to return to.

The buildings to be thrown open for inspection are located on Madison, Fifth and Seventh Avenues and on side streets from Twenty-second to Thirty-seventh Street.

President Schlesinger in a statement replying to that of the manufacturers said:

"This statement about public inspection of buildings is only 'bunk.' I want to ask them if they are going to open for inspection their hundreds of small shops in the slums of the east side and over in the Brownsville district in Brooklyn, where conditions are terrible, and where the bulk of their work is done.

"The manufacturers disregarded the provisions of their agreement with the union for a conference of both parties to discuss a new contract on Nov. 1, arbitrarily putting into effect the piecework system and other unacceptable conditions on Nov. 14."

The union leader said the 60,000 workers in the New York market would probably begin voting on the strike tomorrow and that the final result would be made public by Saturday.

VANDERLIP BANK PLAN EXPLAINED IN DETAIL

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—The Vienna correspondent of the London Times telegraphs the summary of the scheme put forward by Frank A. Vanderlip for the strengthening of demoralized Central European currencies. The scheme, which is published in the Neue Freie Presse, is to be submited to a conference at Porto Rose for consideration.

It suggests the organization in Europe of an international gold reserve bank which should issue dollars. The currency would form an uniform basis for new circulation in all those countries whose currencies are now seriously depreciated. This proposed bank would be organized in close analogy to the American Federal Reserve system. It would not be incorporated in any country, but operate as super-corporation, possibly organized under the aegis of the League of Nations.

It is proposed that countries where the bank has branches should grant territorial rights for bank buildings, guarantee the bank against all taxation and agree that no laws would be passed laying any disability against bank circulated notes. Capital would come from anywhere in the world whence gold would be obtained, but naturally in the main from America. The profits permitted to shareholders would be high enough to ensure the necessary subscriptions being secured but some limitation would be put upon the profits and above that limit surplus earnings could go to the different Governments.

There would be a central board of governors which would be in general control of the whole system and would appoint presiding officers and governors of each national branch. The bank would deal only with other banks and Governments and would issue notes in relation to the gold reserve, subject to the scrutiny of representatives of the central board of governors. Wherever a branch was, there would have to be national guarantees that no legislation would be enacted that could interfere with future contracts being made in the bank currency.

The currency would be legal tender and deposit accounts could be opened in it in local branches. It is thought that the notes of such a bank would be uniform throughout the countries where branches were located. They would replace the existing circulation which is rapidly becoming worthless and the panic conditions which are now manifest in respect of paper currency would be quelled.

PLANS CHICAGO CATHEDRAL

Bishop Gets Design for $6,000,000 Structure for the Episcopal Church.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—Alfred Granger, a Chicago architect, has designed and submitted to Bishop Charles P. Anderson, a suggested $6,000,000 Gothic combination cathedral and office building for the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Chicago, to be 260 feet high, on a site yet to be determined on the east side of upper Michigan Avenue, south of the Drake Hotel. It is designed to take the place of the burned Cathedral of Sts. Peter and Paul on the west side.

Chicago's oldest Jewish organization, which is also the first of its kind in the West, Kehilath Anshe Mayriv Congregation, has purchased the site for a great synagogue, to cost $800,000 and to seat 1,800 persons. Rabbi Tobias Schlaufarber has acquired a site at Drexel Boulevard and Fifteenth Street.

Work is expected to start in about two weeks with the idea of opening the temple in November, 1922, on the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the congregation.

WANT ROOSEVELT BRIDGE.

Aldermen to Get Resolution to Change Name of Williamsburg Span

The Board of Aldermen will be asked today to change the name of the Williamsburg Bridge to "Roosevelt Bridge," according to announcement yesterday by Julian Goldman, President of the People's Hospital and Chairman of the Roosevelt Memorial Committee, appointed to suggest a suitable municipal memorial. The resolution is to be introduced by Alderman J. Sullivan.

Hundreds of suggestions were received by the city memorial committee, which included Colonel William Boyce Thompson, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Supreme Court Justice James Cropsey, Lewis J. Clark, Samuel Greer, F. H. LaGuardia and Herman Hagedorn.

GREENWICH VILLAGE HONORS WAR DEAD

HYLAN AND CURRAN THERE

Ex-Governor Smith Makes Presentation Address—Big Parade Before Ceremony.

In the presence of more than one hundred gold star mothers and 20,000 spectators, Greenwich Village yesterday afternoon perpetuated the memory of its World War veterans by unveiling the bronze statue of a doughboy in Abingdon Square Park. Prior to the unveiling ceremony a parade of veteran, civic and religious organizations, in which Mayor Hylan and Borough President Henry Curran participated, marched down Eighth Avenue from Twenty-eighth Street to the Square.

Ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith made the presentation address and Mayor Hylan accepted the gift, designed by Philip Martiny, in behalf of the city. The Rev. Francis P. Duffy, chaplain of the 165th Regiment (the Sixty-ninth), delivered the eulogy. The Rev. Frank W. Lawson, chaplain of the 305th Machine Gun Battalion, made the invocation and Mgr. Joseph F. Smith pronounced the benediction.

The monument, representing a doughboy defending his regimental flag, is twenty feet high. The soldier is standing as in repulse attack, his body partly shielded by his colors, which he clutches with his left hand. At the base of the monument is a list of all the service men of the dtsirtct and the subscribers to the fund subscribed for the erection of the memorial.

Ex-Governor Smith extolled the sacrifices made by the gold star mothers. "We men think we made sacrifices," he said, "But how insignificant they seem when compared with the sacrifice of the gold star mother who gave to her country what she went down into the valley of death to produce. This silent monument speaks out the gratitude of the American people to those who served their country. Perpetuating the deeds of the living, it also stands as a memory for all time for those who did not come back."

Mayor Hylan, in a speech which he read, said: "In the name of the City of New York, I accept this statute so singularly expressive of the spirit of Abingdon Square. It symbolizes the most heroic hour of life. As we gaze upon this noble figure, it will ever remind us of the high purposes of a free nation and be a summons to follow the flag that gives to all beneath its protecting folds the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

"Of all who went forth at the call of their country, none brought more lustre to the shield of America than the men from this quarter of our city, of which Abingdon Square is the centre.

"With the name of Abingdon Square we have preserved the memory of the Fourth Earl of Abingdon, 'one of the most steady and intrepid asserters of liberty.' To the cause of the American colonists he ever remained an ardent supporter. This square is his one memorial.

"Memory and hope meet here today in a fervent prayer that the glorious flag of our Republic may always be borne by men as brave and true as those who went from Abingdon Square to fight for America."

During the exercises patriotic songs were sung by a group of school children and the Police Glee Club. At the conclusion a firing squad rendered final honors and taps were sounded. Mayor Hylan marched in parade just behind the Ninth Regiment. Mr. Curran, escorted by Captain Howard Humphrey, marched with the Greenwich Village Post of the American Legion, of which he is a member, and declined an invitation to sit in the grandstand.

Congressman Isaac Siegel at Thomas Jefferson Park yesterday pinned a Congressional Medal on Police Sergeant Sidney Hlavac of the East 126th Street Station. Hlavac was awarded the medal for heroism in which he rescued two boys from drowning in the East River on March 22.

INVENTOR NEAR DEATH IN TESTING SEA SAFE

Supposedly Watertight Invention Leaks When He Is Thrown Overboard in It.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 30.—Twelve thousand persons here today cheered as Menotti Nanni, Chicago inventor of a non-sinkable safe designed for use aboard ships, arose from the bottom of the harbor at the mouth of Jones's Falls after allowing himself to be placed in his invention and thrown overboard. Whistles tooted and the whole waterfront seemed aroused, for to the casual spectator, 200 feet away from the scene of the demonstration, everything had apparently turned out well.

But those aboard the scow from which the inventor was dropped overboard saw a different scene. They saw Nanni go into the steel cylinder smiling, confident and waving his hand to those about him. They saw him kiss his wife goodbye and saw her wait stoically while her husband remained under water. Five minutes later, when Nanni came from the bottom of the harbor, they saw him taken from the cylinder in a state of exhaustion, with nearly two feet of water surrounding him in his temporary prison, and knew that had he remained under water a few moments longer he would have perished.

The descent today was the third he had made, the other two being entirely successful. The safe used was a new one and not that which he had previously used. It was about five feet in diameter and ten feet tall, built in the form of a cylinder which enclosed a smaller cylinder. As it was lowered into the water the small cylinder was released and shot to the surface amid great commotion, caused by a chemical compound used in the safe.

When the safe was taken up, for several minutes after the door had been opened the cylinder was suspended in midair by a derrick and whirled around, to give air to Nanni, who sat in a huddled heap. His wife became hysterical.

FORD OFFERS FREIGHT CUTS

Other Coal Railroads Say Rates Should Be Increased.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 30.—The Interstate Commerce Commission conference, which will open tomorrow and will last a week or longer, will discuss differentials and the question of jurisdiction between the Ohio Public Utility Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The Central Freight Association territory is composed of carriers shipping coal from Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Eastern Tennessee and Kentucky into Indiana, Illinois and Michigan.

The Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railroad, known as Henry Ford's road, has injected a new factor into the coal carrying situation by proposing to reduce rates, which other carriers say should be increased. All the principal coal companies and carriers will be represented at the gathering.

HAIR-CLIPPER STORY UPHELD BY FATHER

HE CONSULTS HIS LAWYERS

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, Oct. 30.—Walter M. Haws of Westwood, who is connected with a brokerage house in Wall Street, Manhattan, is incensed at the statement issued on Saturday by Prosecutor A. C. Hart of Hackensack, in which he characterized the story told by seventeen-year-old Marjorie Haws of her experience with a "Jack-the-Clipper" as "pure bunk."

Mr. Haws has consulted his counsel, Edwards, O'Loughlin & George of 20 Nassau Street, Manhattan.

"I have been made to appear ridiculous in this statement of the prosecutor, and my reputation and that of my daughter have been assailed in a most unbecoming manner," said Mr. Haws today. "I am held in high esteem and am as much respected in my community as Mr. Hart is in his, and I can't allow even a prosecutor to attack me or any member of my family in such a manner.

"In his statement he says things that are not true, and as my daughter insists she is telling the truth I am going to stand by her loyally. If I thought she was telling a fancied story, I would issue a statement to that effect, too.

Never Discussed Bobbed Hair.

"In the first place, she had never said she wanted her hair bobbed and the matter had never been discussed. On the evening this mysterious man gained admission to my house and cut Marjorie's hair she did not send for a young man to come to the house, as the prosecutor's statement sets forth. At 6 o'clock Marjorie sent her younger brother, Bradford to the baker's for a loaf of bread, and, fearful of being left alone too long and having had two visits from this stranger, she told him to have Waldo Lester bring him home in a taxicab, for we often used the Lester taxicab service.

"Waldo is a friend of the family, and he did bring Bradford home. When they reached the house they found Marjorie unconscious on the floor near the front door and her aunt, Miss Sophie Seamon, bathing her head. Miss Seamon came on a visit to us that evening and was expected any moment. She reached there at 6:10, and found Marjorie on the floor.

"Is it reasonable to suppose that had Marjorie planned to cut her own hair, as the prosecutor intimates, she would have told her brother to hurry back in the taxicab?

Doctor Found Her Hysterical.

"Dr. Townsend, when called, found Marjorie hysterical. Her fingers were clinched and were opened with difficulty. I saw marks on her breast and a bruise on the side of her head. I asked her why she did not get up after the man first knocked her down and left her to go into the kitchen, and she said she seemed paralyzed from fear. She thought the man was going for the carving knife that lay on the table, and she could neither scream nor get up.

"The scissors used by the man were hanging on a nail in the kitchen and were easily seen in the light, so there is nothing mysterious in that.

"On the occasion of the second visit of this man to the house he knocked at the back door, threatening to shoot if the door was not opened. Marjorie rushed up stairs and told her mother, and it was then that we decided to have Chief of Police Bird watch the house.

"On last Friday Prosecutor Hart sent for Marjorie, and without my knowledge she was taken to Hackensack and doubtless sweated by the prosecutor and detectives. Had I been home my daughter would not have left the house. She came home crying. She was told that if she would confess the prosecutor's statement would let her down easy, but she insists the story of the attack is true and that she has nothing to confess."

Doctor Fears for Her Health.

Chief Bird said Marjorie's hair was cut straight, something that would seem impossible for the girl to do herself in a hurry.

Dr. Townsend said the girl was so hysterical that it was necessary to give her a hypodermic injection. He feared the effect of the attack on her nerves might be permanent.

"I have engaged counsel because I think my reputation has been assailed, and because I think the statement of Prosecutor Hart is unwarranted and injurious to my whole family," said Mr. Haws. "I don't think even a prosecutor has a right to make such assertions when he has no evidence to back them. I have questioned my daughter many times on this matter, but her reply to me has been always, 'If I should die for it I can't confess to something I never did,' and I believe her."

After he had found his patient dead, the physician, according to the police, went through the house, free access to which even he in his visits had been forbidden. In a bureau drawer in the two rooms of the basement—the only part of the house which Mrs. Easton had used since her husband's death—he found the bankbooks. In another was the cash, and scattered in drawers was the jewelry. All of the trinkets were fashioned years ago—heavy gold mountings, elaborately turned and engraved, with large stones, mostly diamonds.

One of the drawers containing the jewels gave evidence that they had been placed there years ago and never been touched. This drawer was half pulled out and the exposed space was coated with a layer of dust. Upstairs the twelve rooms were mantled in dust. Dust was on the thick carpets—a fine, even layer of gray. Dust was on the upholstery of chairs; it formed a sombre draping on the walls.

Clothing Unworn for Years.

Oil paintings, the value of which neither the police nor the physician could judge, were dulled by it, and on the tops of their frames was more dust. Dust had settled on an old-fashioned square piano in an upper room, and it was on a vase on the piano and on the few flowers that time had withered to hardness.

In wardrobes and closets in the bedrooms, where graying bedspreads and pillows were as smooth as they were when last touched, probably six years or more ago, the police found clothing. There were broadcloths which the husband evidently had worn, and there were old-style dresses fashioned decades ago. None had been worn for years.

After going through the house, the physician turned over to the police the bankbooks, the cash and the jewels, and today they are to be sent in a sealed packet to the Public Administrator's office in Brooklyn to await a claimant.

Pending the finding of relatives the body of Mrs. Easton was in her home last night with a policeman from the Classon Avenue Station on guard.

New Days and Old

As a man grows older he begins to make comparisons of individuals and things. Society was more elegant and refined; the food is not so good as when he was a boy; the plays are not so good; the times are not so good. There was more snow in winter, and the summers were warmer or colder. Even the stars in the firmament were brighter a quarter of a century ago to a man, say, twice that age.

With the drift of years we cling more closely to our old ideas and ideals. Yet it may be true that the new generation must concede something to us in the particular matter, at least, of public services. How many Lincolns, Clevelands, Hays, McKinleys and statesmen of such substance are at the helm of the ship of state to-day? How many Morgans, Hills, Huntingtons and Strathconas are there to guide the financial bark through the whirl of waters? It is not in a note of pessimism that we ask the question, but merely to suggest that here is the opportunity for leadership. Where, however, are the leaders?

If the averages tell the tale, whether of the duration of man's life, the amount of rain-fall, the number of motions in a manufacturing operation, or whatever it may be where results may be figured and translated into facts, the Harriman National Bank inclines to the belief that these men will come again; it must be so.

Times change, and we change with them. The prophecy of to-day becomes the accomplished fact of to-morrow. Probably "the good old days" are now with us, but we are lacking in perception to realize it.

VAN HEUSEN PATENTED
the World's Smartest COLLAR

THERE will be no changing to starched collars this Fall for those who wore the VAN HEUSEN all Summer. The VAN HEUSEN knows no seasons. It has merits possessed by no other collar.

Comfortable to a greater degree than even the mussy soft collars, it rivals any starched collar in smartness and appearance.

It never wilts, wrinkles or sags; it never has "saw edges". Being starchless, it is as easily and economically laundered as a handkerchief, and saves wear on shirts and ties.

For all occasions, summer or winter, the VAN HEUSEN is the perfect collar.

In all styles and heights, quarter sizes from 13½ to 18

HAYS WARNS THIEVES HE HAS A BACKBONE

X-Ray Shows It, Says Postmaster General, Injured While Investigating Mail Robbery.

TO RETURN TO WASHINGTON

No Arrests Yet Made for $1,500,000 Hold-Up—Armed Guards Now Accompany Mail Trucks.

Postmaster General Will H. Hays, who has been recuperating at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria since he was injured in a railroad collision at Manhattan Transfer early last Friday morning, announced last night that he was feeling much better and would return to Washington on the 11 o'clock train this morning.

He has had X-ray pictures taken, and says that, whether the mail robbers believe it or not, the X-ray shows that he has a backbone. Although he was badly bruised and is still stiff and lame, he said the doctors had satisfied themselves—and him—that there were no fractures or other serious effects of his injuries.

At the time of the collision Mr. Hays was returning to Washington after having spent Thursday in New York to liven up the investigation into the $1,500,000 mail robbery on lower Broadway last Monday night. He will leave the investigation in charge of W. Irving Glover, Third Assistant Postmaster General, who came here from Washington on Saturday.

Mr. Glover will try to establish the responsibility for negligence in failing to carry out instructions, issued by Mr. Hays last April, that chauffeurs of mail trucks should be armed and accompanied by armed guards, and that pistols should be distributed.

All mail trucks leaving the City Hall Station yesterday were accompanied by armed motorcycle guards. From now on the Post Office authorities will not run trucks from the various stations to railroad depots on schedule time, but will wait until full trucks are ready. Then three or four armed motorcycle guards will be sent with the trucks as convoys.

Post office inspectors under Chief Inspector Cochrane and police detectives under Inspector Coughlin co-operated yesterday in the hunt for the bandits. Arrests are expected soon. Hundreds of letters have been received with clues and suggestions, and some of the information has been valuable.

The search for the green Cleveland touring car used by the bandits has been narrowed so that the investigators believe they will solve the mystery if they locate one of three automobiles. Frank Haveranck, the chauffeur in charge of the truck that was held up, reported at the post office as usual yesterday to help the detectives.

Postal inspectors and police detectives both denied a report last night that arrests had been made in Schenectady in connection with the mail robbery.

BERLIN HOTELS SUFFER FROM PETTY THIEVES

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—Hotels in this city are suffering from the operations of petty thieves since the strike of hotel and restaurant workers. The majority of local hostelries have posted the following placard in their rooms:

Many hotels have fitted the doors of their rooms with electric bells so that when a patron opens the door a clerk appears and carefully examines his baggage, which has been previously inventoried and checked. Some hotels have closed, and thieves and pickpockets have reaped a harvest by directing strangers to allegedly open hotels down dark streets, or to disreputable houses. The guests usually awake in the morning to find most of their valuables gone, and some have considered themselves fortunate in not losing their wearing apparel.

The inability of hotels to furnish clean linen has forced guests to buy their own linen, which has complicated the task of preventing strangers from carrying off room furnishings.

STORM IN CAPE BRETON.

Three Schooners Are Wrecked and Three Towns Are Damaged.

SYDNEY, N. S., Oct. 30.—Three vessels, including an unidentified three-masted schooner, were ashore on the Cape Breton coast tonight as the result of a terrific gale which started here Friday afternoon and reached its peak late Saturday night.

The wrecked schooner went ashore in Mira Bay. Owing to the fact that wire communication with the Mira district has been cut off, Marine Department officials tonight were unable to ascertain her identity, but it was reported that her crew had been landed safely. Two former Canadian navy drifters broke from their moorings and came ashore at Neigah Beach, above the city.

The gale, which is reported to have been the worst that Cape Breton has experienced since 1873, did considerable damage. Motor boats and other small craft moored along the Sydney water front were carried away or wrecked upon the beach. Telephone lines were blown down and interurban car service was seriously affected.

At Glace Bay, a spire of the Baptist church was blown down and crashed through the roof of the building. The wind also took the roof off the parish hall.

At North Sydney the force of the waves carried away a portion of Queen Street, while the wharf of the Cape Breton Electric Company was badly damaged. Numerous small craft along the water front there sank or were washed ashore.

POLICE ARREST "BAD MAN."

John J. Rogers of 222 East Ninety-fifth Street, known to the police as "Bum" Rogers, an upper east side character, said to have boasted that he would kill the next policeman who tried to lock him up, was arrested yesterday on a charge of felonious assault made by his father-in-law, Patrick O'Brien, with whom he lived.

According to the police, Rogers stabbed O'Brien twice in the hand and then floored his mother-in-law with one swing of a kitchen chair in an early morning fracas in the O'Brien flat. He left, said the father-in-law, threatening to return and kill the family. While Rogers was out O'Brien notified the East Eighty-eighth Street station and Policemen Laura and Smith were in the tenement hall when Rogers came back in a taxicab. Instead of stopping, Rogers went by and made a circuit of the block. On his next trip past the house the policemen dashed out and arrested him. A pistol was said to have been found on him.

HOSPITAL SEEKS AID; FACES FORECLOSURE

OBLIGATIONS OVER $150,000

Hospital Is Indispensable for the Downtown Community, Writes W. G. McAdoo.

A campaign for funds for the Volunteer Hospital has been launched by Ballington Booth, William G. McAdoo, August Belmont and a number of well-known New Yorkers. Governor Miller is serving as Chairman of the Advisory Board and ex-Governors Whitman and Smith have accepted appointments.

A number of friends of Volunteer Hospital, it was said, have been under the impression that this institution was to be benefitted by the drive of the Downtown Hospital Association, and were surprised to learn that the funds raised for that purpose went to the Broad Street Hospital alone. General Ballington Booth, head of the Volunteers of America, made public yesterday the following letter from Mr. McAdoo:

Oct. 27, 1921.

"My Dear General Booth: I was deeply disturbed upon learning of the precarious situation in which the Volunteer Hospital is placed by the pending mortgage foreclosure against it. It seems inconceivable that the generous people of New York will allow this admirable benevolent institution to be closed up by foreclosure, and I believe that they will not, if the facts are made known. I admire the effort which your counsel is making to combat this foreclosure proceeding, but I realize that even if successful you are only postponing for a period the day when this and the other obligations of the hospital must be met.

"With many other citizens, I realize how indispensable is the commendable service this hospital has given to the downtown community, and I am at a loss to understand why its many friends have permitted it to drift into such financial difficulties.

"It is unfortunate that the Volunteer Hospital is not to participate in the campaign now in progress in the lower part of the city. That campaign is for the benefit of the Broad Street Hospital. Of course, this admirable institution should be supported, and we all sympathize with the effort now being made to raise the necessary funds for it, but the Volunteer Hospital is also essential to the community, and it is equally necessary to raise the required funds to relieve its situation. I hope that a movement may be promptly started to accomplish this.

"Aside from the fact that the Volunteer Hospital has rendered highly efficient service to the downtown section of the city for so many years, I feel a personal interest in it because of the splendid work done by it for two victims of the Wall Street explosion, who were members of a family with which my own family is connected.

"I shall be glad to help you in any way possible.

"Very truly yours,

"W. G. McADOO."

Volunteer Hospital is now in serious straits because of threatened foreclosure of a mortgage of $65,000 now being foreclosed, and other obligations totaling more than $150,000. The prompt aid rendered by the hospital ambulances and staff during the Wall Street explosion and in other accidents was emphasized in the appeal made on behalf of the hospital yesterday.

SCOTT NEARING ADMITS LENIN-TROTZKY FAILURE

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—The working class should assume the direction of government and the ownership and administration of industry to conserve its interest and prevent a collapse of civilization, according to Scott Nearing, pacifist, and former Professor of Economics at the University of Pennsylvania, who won the popular verdict in a debate today with Earl Dean Howard, who taught economics at Northwestern University.

The hundreds packed in the Ashland Auditorium were wholly in sympathy with Nearing, who had the affirmative, and cheered him for five minutes when he took the platform.

Professor Howard, who is now manager of the labor department of Hart, Schaffner & Marx, defended the existing system, and was occasionally hissed and interrupted by disagreeing listeners.

"Capital," declared Nearing, "is no more permanent and sacred than were slavery or feudalism. Capital has such defects that it must be scrapped. It cannot be repaired. It is an exact replica of the feudal system. On the one hand you have men owning jobs, on the other, men needing jobs, who must take them at the owners' terms.'

Nearing criticised absentee capitalism, the supporting of a "parasite class" in communities at the expense of the working class, and capital-owned governments. All these phases of existing conditions, he insisted, were reasons why capital should be scrapped and the workers themselves be put in command of industry.

"After all, the present system is not entirely bad," continued Professor Howard. "It might be worse. Most of the population of this country are fairly comfortable. These good things are provided, not by the people who enjoy them, but by the system."

The statement was met by a protesting gale of laughter from all over the auditorium.

Nearing, in rebuttal, spoke of the work of Lenin and Trotzky in Russia. They failed, he acknowledged; but at least they tried. And although men have been shot down in Russia, millions were shot down in France and Belgium during a capitalistic war, he declared.

CARUSO'S BROTHER COMING.

He Sails for America With Attorney to Make Inventory of Estate.

ROME, Oct. 30.—It was learned today that Giovanni Caruso, brother of the late Enrico Caruso, has sailed for America on board the steamer Dante Alighieri.

He was accompanied by an attorney and will undertake the settlement of the singer's will.

Mrs. Caruso, widow of the tenor, said last night at the Hotel St. Regis, where she is stopping, that she knew about the visit of Giovanni Caruso to America and was glad he was coming.

"It is one of my attorneys who accompanies him," said Mrs. Caruso. "The attorney is one Consalasio, assistant to Giovanni Porsio, my chief attorney. He is coming, not to settle the will, but to make an inventory of Mr. Caruso's estate in America, as was done in Italy, which is necessary before a division of the estate can be made. It could have been done in Italy, but I thought it was better for one of my attorneys to come over here to attend to it.

"Giovanni Caruso is coming with him for the trip, perhaps for a relief from the trying time he has been through. I knew about his proposed trip when I arrived the other day, but didn't think of telling about it. In fact, I supposed every one knew they were coming. I understand they left Naples on Oct. 27.

"The situation is unchanged. As I said when I arrived, there is complete agreement among the family."

"It Must Not Be Again!"

WITH these prophetic words, referring to the World War, President Harding acted as spokesman for millions of souls rent by the suffering of war's horrors. "It must not be again!" (All hail! to the courage and wisdom of President Harding.)

Now, at the threshold of the Disarmament Conference, we are about to witness the first steps to be taken to prevent a recurrence of that terrible Disaster which held the world in its grasp for four long years, and from the effects of which we are but now recovering.

But the prevention of future wars will not come merely with the gathering of the delegates of the nations around a conference board. Mountainous obstacles will rear themselves up, and small hearts will quake at the undertaking.

These same fearful ones will say, "There have always been wars, and there always will be wars." But there must not always be wars. We are a nation of leaders; we establish precedent, not follow it. Were we, as a nation, blinded by precedent when in 1917 we entered upon that sublime undertaking—a war to end war?

Precedent must be ignored, national aspirations forgotten, and personalities overlooked, while we bend our energies to the task before us. The warring of nations must end for all time; the salvation of humanity requires it and our duty to the Almighty commands it, for in many tongues and from millions of throats the cry arises the best we could at the things we have in hand.

There are those, still young, who have sat down satisfied with themselves or become "grouchy," saying to themselves and perhaps to others:

"Oh, well, what's the use? We can never get any farther on."

This passes judgment to their employers and to everybody that they have finished learning and will not try any more.

All such are the real old people, whatever be their years. They have lived their lives when they cease to learn or make efforts to learn.

UNTERMYER SEES NO WAY TO WAGE CUT

EXPECTS NATURAL SOLUTION

Finds No Drastic Reform Yet in Council, and Suspects a Plot With Employers' Association.

The Merchants' Association made public yesterday the following letter from Samuel Untermyer, senior counsel to the Lockwood committee, in reply to the association's letter suggesting a wage cut in the building trades:

"Your letter of the 11th instant presents a difficult and most insoluble problem.

"There can be no question about the abstract justice of your position. On the other hand, we must not blink the fact that the members of the Building Trades Council have a written agreement for the maintenance of the wage scale until April, 1922. I think they are unwise in insisting upon it under existing conditions, but it is evident that they will not forego what they regard as their advantage and what seems to me as a disadvantage and the basis for a future day of reckoning.

"If you can point out any concrete thing that the Lockwood committee can do to bring about the consent of the Building Trades Council to the modification of this agreement, I shall be pleased to know what it is. In my judgment, there has been no drastic reform in the council. There are now men on the board whom I regard as upright, but they are in the minority.

"The Building Trades Employers' Association is, in my judgment, a more vicious organization than the council. It encourages the insistence upon these demands, in return for which the constituent associations, I have no doubt, continue to get preferences in the way of union labor, under cover, although the formal agreements assuring such preferences have been rescinded.

"I believe that there is evidence of criminal conspiracy between the council and the association, but it would be a Herculean task to conduct that prosecution. By the time it is over, the present contract with the council will have ended and the law of supply and demand in the labor market will have solved the problem.

"Upon the question of efficiency, if your association will point out the particular rules and practices in the building trades to which you refer, I will put the heads of these unions on the witness stand and attempt to enforce the abrogation of these rules and practices, through the force of public opinion, if it can be done in that way. These rules are not illegal, and there is no other way of bringing the necessary pressure to bear.

"We keenly appreciate the situation and you may rely upon our active cooperation in any practical step that can be suggested for correcting the existing situation.

"The committee is very appreciative of the attitude of your association toward its labors, as evidenced by the resolution passed by your Board of Directors on Dec. 16, 1920, and we hope to continue to deserve your good opinion and good will.

"Our investigation into these labor conditions is still far from completed and I am expecting to take up another phase of that situation when we reconvene in November."

DELAY TRUCK STRIKE FOR A FINAL PARLEY

Men to Go Out Tomorrow Morning Unless Conference Yields Compromise Plan.

The strike of union truckmen against members of the Merchant Truckmen's Bureau, scheduled to go into effect today, has been postponed until tomorrow, Michael Cashal, International Vice President of the Brotherhood of Teamsters, announced last night.

Cashal said that the postponement would give the bureau representatives an opportunity to confer with union officials.

"If this conference fails to bring about a new agreement satisfactory to the workers," said Cashal, "the strike will go into effect Tuesday morning. We have had difficulty to get the men to remain at work pending the conference, as they voted so overwhelmingly for the strike."

Whether the bureau representatives were ready to make a new offer to the teamsters, withdrawing their demand for a wage cut and increase in working hours, could not be learned last night. In the event of a strike, it was said that the bureau had a number of strikebreakers ready to replace the union men affected.

FAT WOMEN HIKE AGAIN.

So Many Want to Reduce That Health Officials Will Supply Hints.

The fifty fat women engaged in training to enter the health exhibition next month were taken on a long hike in Central Park yesterday, and afterward were put through more strenuous exercises than on the first Sunday, at their quarters in Madison Square Garden.

Physicians agreed with their trainer, "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien, that the two weeks' work had strengthened and hardened the contestants so that they could undertake a more severe course of calisthenics and outdoor exercises. As the hardest part of the work is to come in the next two weeks, the present leaders may be displaced by others, although the four women who have made the largest reductions have margins in pounds lost that may enable them to retain their records.

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Commissioner of the Department of Health, said that more than 400 women had applied for permission to join the class. Most of these women, he said, had no interest in prizes, but were anxious to reduce and better their health. In answer to these and hundreds of other applicants by letters, Dr. Copeland said:

"It will not be convenient for the Department of Health to continue any further efforts of this sort of supervision after this health squad finishes its work, but I will be glad to assist any interested groups of women who may desire to take up similar work. We will provide them with the data, together with the rules for indoor and outdoor exercises, and the details for proper dieting, and with this it will be easy for any body of women to proceed intelligently. If they keep at the work faithfully they will find that it is comparatively easy to overcome excess fat, brought on by years of over-eating and lack of exercise."

WADSWORTH'S POSITION.

New York Senator Announced He 'Would' Support Calder Amendment

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—In a Washington dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES published this morning Senator Wadsworth of New York is reported as announcing that he "won't" support an amendment to the tax bill offered by Senator Calder, designed to exempt from the 15 per cent. corporation tax corporations that are organized exclusively for "home ownership."

This was a typographical error, as Mr. Wadsworth was correctly reported in the original dispatch as announcing that he "would" support the Calder amendment.

SEES 'HOCUS-POCUS' IN 1922 BUDGET

WANTS PENSIONS INCLUDED

Says Realty Taxpayers Will Be Assessed $18,000,000 More Than They Should Be.

The Board of Estimate's final consideration of the city budget for 1922, the passage of which in a form containing nearly $2,000,000 in excess of the constitutional tax limit has been blocked by the Republican members of the board, will be made today. The budget must be passed by midnight tonight, after which it goes to the Board of Aldermen, who have twenty days to make additional cuts.

Controller Craig, who has spent several weeks on the figures in an effort to reduce them to the legal amount, will probably present recommendations for further cuts today. The budget is expected to pass, as only a majority vote is needed on the second consideration.

The budget was characterized as "a hocus-pocus budget" yesterday by Stewart Browne, President of the United Real Estate Owners' Association, who has caused a mandamus, returnable today, to be served on the Board of Estimate, to show cause why pension figures totaling more than $8,000,000 should not be included.

"Controller Craig, the world's super juggler, is responsible for it," said Mr. Browne. "To restore $4,500,000 illegally deducted from these pension funds will not increase the budget, but will reduce the realty taxpayers' 1922 tax bill by $4,500,000. To increase the pensions appropriation by $4,500,000 will compel the Board of Estimate to reduce unnecessary and extravagant expenditures. The debt service and tax deficiency items have been manipulated, and $18,000,000 has been illegally deducted from the Board of Estimate budget instead of being credited to the general fund, which treatment allows the Board of Estimate to disburse that amount in extravagant and unnecessary expenditures. The realty taxpayers will pay $18,000,000 more in 1922 than they should pay.

"No one but the Controller has any figures to show the estimated revenues for 1922, and he has refused to furnish this information to the members of the Board of Estimate and has refused to furnish it at the budget public hearings when asked to do so. The members of the Board of Estimate are voting upon a $350,000,000 budget without knowledge of what the estimated revenues are and whether the budget is below or above the constitutional 2 per cent. maximum tax rate."

WOMEN TO OPPOSE TARIFF INCREASES

With a list of articles which it was said would be increased from 25 to 100 per cent. should the American valuation plan of the Fordney Tariff bill be adopted, a consumers' committee of women, non-partisan and non-political, announced its formation yesterday, in an attempt to organize the women of the country against tariff increases.

HELD FOR ROWDYISM IN AN ELEVATED TRAIN

Prisoner Said to Have Been One of Three Who Beat Policeman for Protesting.

Accused of being one of three men who attacked Patrolman John J. Horan after causing a disturbance on a Third Avenue elevated train, Tony Tezzitole, a painter, 20 years old, of 297 East 151st Street, the Bronx, was locked up last night in the East 104th Street Station, on a charge of disorderly conduct. Tezzitole's two companions escaped when several other policemen went to Horan's assistance.

Horan, who is attached to the East 104th Street Station, was off duty and in civilian clothes. While the train was between the 116th and 106th Street stations three men, one of them said to have been Tezzitole, engaged in a scuffle. Tezzitole thrust his arm through a window pane, witnesses said. This and the rowdy conduct caused fear among the passengers. Horan remonstrated with the men, and when he got off at the 106th Street station they followed him.

As Horan was going down the station steps three men attacked him. Mrs. Horan, who had been waiting to meet her husband, saw the attack and tried to aid him. She was struck several times.

Horan may not be able to report for duty for several days because of his injuries.

JUDSON H. COX A SUICIDE.

Brooklyn Publisher, Who Had Been Ill, Shot Himself.

Judson H. Cox, until recently owner and publisher of two Brooklyn weekly papers and well known in the Bay Ridge section, committed suicide yesterday morning in the home of his son-in-law, John K. Reed, 3,671 Broadway. Mr. Reed was awakened by a shot at 7 o'clock, and found Mr. Cox lying in the bathroom, a bullet wound in his forehead and a revolver near his right hand. He died as a physician was being summoned. Members of the family said that he had been in ill-health for many months.

Mr. Cox was born in Flushing in 1865. He was first employed in a bank, and became cashier and financial manager of the old New York Daily News, where he held office for twelve years. In 1901 he bought The Item, a weekly of the Park Slope section of Brooklyn, and The Home News, also a weekly, published in Bay Ridge. He sold both publications a few months ago and retired from business. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Maranita F. Cox; a son Kenneth, and a daughter, Mrs. Mildred C. Reed.

WINTER OVERCOATS

Coats Regularly Priced $50 : $60 : $70 : $75

This store has never before announced a reduction sale of Society Brand overcoats in October. Nor, to our knowledge, has any store in America ever held a similar sale. It is not the acceptable time. Time now to sell overcoats at a profit—not to close them out at drastic price cuts.

But the Birthday Sale knows no seasons. And the usual season-end event comes now at the season's beginning. Only the Birthday Sale's high standard of value-giving could justify the proceeding. And such an event can not happen again till another Birthday Sale rolls 'round, if then.

Crombies : Meltons : O'Briens
Shetlands : Cassimeres : Tweeds
Herringbones : Mostly All Plaid Backs

Reduce Office Expense!

Transfer Your Record Department to PIONEER

MANY organizations are today devoting entirely too much space in costly business offices to files and records. And yet those self-same organizations are seriously wondering how to cut down office expense to meet the changing times.

Out of Danger's Reach!

THINK of the tremendous annoyance, the disastrous financial losses, that a fire in your building might cause. The destruction of important documents can mean losses reckoned in thousands of dollars.

And think not only of the losses involved, but of the delay to business operations while the records are being unearthed from the debris. Businesses affected by fire are usually at a standstill—and experience has many sad cases to prove it.

All this is avoided at Pioneer. Its massive ten story fireproof building stands as a veritable bulwark of safety. Its private record rooms located above the ground floor, dry and well ventilated, are protected night and day by two watchmen-patrol systems. Records kept here are out of danger's reach—away from your regular office building—yet readily accessible any hour of the day or night.

Distinguished Tenants

THE foremost banks, trust companies, stock exchange houses, legal firms, insurance companies and mercantile organizations occupy space at Pioneer in units ranging from 50 to 15,000 square feet. What they are doing for the efficient and economical safekeeping of their business records, every organization, regardless of size, can also do. Our representatives will gladly counsel with you.

DRY AGENT REFUSES BRIBE OF $25,000

100 ATTEMPTS TO DATE

A bribe of $25,000 was offered Howard R. Kiroack, investigator of liqour frauds for the Prohibition Department, late Saturday night if he would consent to drop his investigation into the alleged extensive illegal liquor operations of Abraham Levy, who keeps a theatre ticket agency and photographic studio at 2,102 Seventh Avenue, Kiroack said yesterday. The offer was made over the telephone by a person who did not give his name. Kiroack refused the offer.

Kiroack explained that he did not consent to accept the money and then arrest the person for attempted bribery because the record in the United States District Attorney's office fails to disclose a single conviction for attempted bribery of prohibition agents.

An offer of a bribe has also been made over the telephone to Assistant United States Attorney McCormick, who is prosecuting the case. Attempts to bribe agents operating under Acting Federal Prohibition Agent E. C. Yellowley now total nearly one hundred.

Kiroack declared yesterday that the alleged operations of Abraham Levy included the illegal withdrawal of 50,000 cases of whisky, valued at bootleg prices at more than $5,000,000, on which between $500,000 and $600,000 in graft was paid. Kiroack also learned that Levy had been arrested in connection with the transportation of Bicardi rum under the name of Eugene Smith and other aliases.

At least 7,200 cases of Bicardi rum said to have been let out by the Bicardi Rum Corporation have been accounted for through his investigations, including the delivery of 1,800 cases to William A. Collins, a fictitious name, and 1,800 cases to Albert MacKenzie, dead for two years. Kiroack has checks showing payment by Levy to the Bicardi company of $10,000 at one time and $12,000 at another. An affidavit made by Levy that William A. Collins was an assumed name was obtained from the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, showing that Levy wanted to withdraw $3,530 deposited in the name of Collins. Kiroack said Levy had bank accounts all over the city in different names. Subpoenas are being issued for the banks where such funds are found.

"To show that he had a pull at prohibition headquarters," Kiroack said, "the permit issued in the name of Collins was revoked in February. In May 1,800 cases of rum were withdrawn on approval of the prohibition office at West Twenty-seventh Street."

Kiroack declared that there would be further revelations in the case on Tuesday, involving prominent politicians and others. Investigations so far, he said, had shown that the bootleggers in almost every instance have had confederates in the director's office. Levy boasted so frequently of his "pull" in Washington that Kiroack went to Washington and took the case up personally with Commissioner Haynes, who has sent Attorney Johnson of the legal division in Washington here to assist McCormick.

"Now that things are beginning to be cleaned up in the Federal Prohibition Department," said William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, at Grace Methodist Church, Brooklyn, last night, "We are expecting the mud batteries to open up on Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes very shortly, followed by a poison gas attack."

Representing themselves as thirsty football players, a squad of prohibition agents, headed by Herman Wittenberg and accompanied by two women, called for drinks at Van Cortlandt Inn, in Van Cortlandt Park, Saturday night. They said they got three drinks of whisky for $2.25 and then handed a summons to the owner, Thomas Farrell, and arrested the waiter, Edward Edelweiss.

Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes, speaking yesterday at the Broad Street Theatre, Newark, under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League, gave out a statement declaring his determination to make New Jersey a model of prohibition enforcement. "Constructive methods" proving popular elsewhere will be applied in New Jersey under the personal direction of Commissioner Haynes, the statement said.

CZECHS ARE READY TO INVADE HUNGARY

But German and Labor Opposition to Mobilization Occasions Rioting and Bloodshed.

By CYRIL BROWN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PRAGUE, Oct. 30 (by courier to Berlin).—Czechoslovakia can hurl an offensive against Hungary at a moment's notice. Traveling mostly by slow local trains throughout Slovakia and Bohemia, I have seen the practical completion of the mobilization which began last Monday. At the stations in nearly every town along the main strategic railroad line stood long lines of box cars bearing the significant stencilled Czech equivalent for "forty-six men or six horses and four men." These military box-car trains were ready for the use of the mobilized forces at any time. Food and forage supplies were being taken aboard the waiting transports.

I passed numerous troop trains already steaming to the Hungarian front. One pioneer outfit bound for the Danube front took along brand-new ambulances on flat cars as well as pontoons, rafts and other building material and bundles of brushwood for road use in marshy country. An infantry detachment rolled merrily toward Hungary with its field kitchens smoking on flat cars.

There was no noticeable war fever among the populace. The troops got just the ordinary good-bye as if going on civilian business or a pleasure trip, and the troop trains were not cheered in transit. Official Czechoslovakia is taking its practical war manoeuvers at Hungary's probable expense very seriously. For the officials the mobilization and other war preparations are the real thing. All along the line I noted armed guards with fixed bayonets. In the villages mobilized horses were being inspected for remounts. In Prague today the owners of motor cars were submitting their vehicles to military inspection for military serivce, and the Automobile Club of Czechoslovakia appealed to the patriotism of its members not to fail in their duty of offering their cars in prime condition for a possible "war for liberty and democracy."

For the first three days of mobilization private telegrams were forbidden. Now messages may be sent again, but cipher telegrams are forbidden, and there is a strict censorship on telegrams sent abroad.

A proclamation issued today says that Czecholsvaks living abroad need enter active service only when they receive postal cards calling them to the colors. In Slovakia all Hungarian citizens and all persons whose Czeckslovakian citizenship is doubtful are required to report within twenty-four hours to the police of the fortress of the town of Pressburg.

The Hungarian frontier is closed not only to Hungarians, but to all travelers going both ways. Leaving Budapest by the tri-weekly Orient Express is the sole way of getting out of Hungary. I learned at the frontier that telegraphic orders had been received from the military authorities to allow nobody except holders of diplomatic passports to board or leave the train at Pressburg, the only train stop on Czechslovakian soil.

Stepping from the Orient Express at Pressburg in the early morning hours, I encountered a Czechoslovakian bayonet. When I attempted to climb aboard again the wielder of the bayonet growled something unintelligible but threatening. A Czech officer, awakened by the polyglot argumentation, saw his way to treating a plain American passport as equal to the diplomatic article, and I was able to proceed to Prague, but only after a minute examination of my baggage and papers by a detective, who confiscated half a dozen copies of Hungarian newspapers.

These incidents, which might be multiplied indefinitely, illustrate the unhealthy state of affairs under an expensive and dangerous mobilization. Incidentally Czechoslovakian money has fallen so far below par that a crown is worth less than a cent today. Militarism has no hold on the masses, however. Mobilization and the war game are rather the toys of the political and military clique dominating at Prague. The bulk of the people accept mobilization and war talk with stolidity, as a matter of course—a survival from the days of Austrian militarism—or fatalistically, as an inevitable evil, or, lastly, with passive and even active resistance, entailing civilian bloodshed. In thirty hours of traveling through Czechoslovakia I saw only two national flags hung out, and no sign of even mild war fever or fighting enthusiasm.

Only among the Czechs is there some spark of feeling. The other three principal nationalities composing the Czechoslovak Republic—the Germans, Slovaks and Hungarians—are quite naturally against mobilization and war talk. But so, too, are the Czech workingmen, the Socialists and Communists. Typical of the mass attitude toward militarism is this conversation which I overheard between a Czech and a German railroad employe:

The German—Living is getting more expensive all the time. We can hardly stand it.

The Czech—Yes, if I spend thirty crowns a day I'm a poor man. My pay is only 900 crowns [less than $9] a month. And now we have war! The cost of living will go higher yet.

German—Let us hope it will pass off without actually coming to war.

Czech—I had four years of war—all the war I want.

In Rumburg, an industrial town of Northern Bohemia, mostly German, the labor element countered mobilization with a general strike and a big mass demonstration against mobilization in the town square. A Czech military detachment arriving for remount mustering was at first hooted by the working people and then attacked and put to flight. The mob tore up the military documents, and martial law was proclaimed. In many other industrial places quiet and orderly demonstrations against mobilization and war are taking place.

There has been bloodshed, however, in the industrial town of Graslitz, in Northern Bohemia, where the population surrounded a military detachment of thirty-eight men and two officers and hooted and threw stones. Finally the enraged populace, men and women, attacked the soldiers. The soldiers fired a volley, killing twelve and wounding ten.

Throughout all Slovakia rigorous martial law has had to be proclaimed. Jury trial has been suspended; drumhead military courts will dispense justice, inflict the immediate death penalty for treason, disloyalty, public disorder, killing, theft, arson and crimes against public safety committed against railroads, the telegraph and telephone service and ships, and for the crime of bringing about the flooding of the countryside.

Hungary Is Militarily Impotent.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 29 (By Courier to Berlin)—The effect of the continuation of mobilization in Czechoslovakia is aggravated by rumors of frontier fighting, all of which is fanning Hungarian bitterness, which, not only among the official and upper classes but among the masses of the people, cannot be exaggerated. This feeling is intensified by the knowledge of their own military impotence. The Hungarians are just beginning to realize that they cannot fight anybody, that they cannot even defend themselves, that they are completely at the mercy of the Little Entente at any time the latter may attempt an invasion.

This very belated realization that the Hungarian army has been reduced and disarmed to the point of impotence, which dawned on the proud-spirited Hungarians only as a result of Charles's coup that failed, has been Hungary's bitterest pill of the past week—even more bitter than the stern mandate to declare her de jure King throneless and ship him wherever the Allies may direct.

Czechoslovakia has mobilized 250,000 men. If Czechoslovakia and Jugoslavia should undertake military action, it would not be war, but a walkover, a cheap, triumphal entry into Budapest. For the once redoubtable Hungarian army has not enough left to offer resistance to one-quarter of the forces the Little Entente could put into the field without mobilizing.

Just before the Carlist adventure the Hungarian Army had finally been reduced to 35,000 men, the figure permitted under the Treaty of Trianon. Hungary could easily mobilize 200,000 trained fighting men; but she has equipment, including arms and ammunition, for 50,000 or 70,000 at the maximum. She has not artillery material for even 50,000.

The Hungarian spirit has not been disarmed, however. The Hungarians are highly temperamental, full of race pride and excellent fighters, and under competent leadership there are no better soldiers in Europe. If they were to fight man for man against their neighbors the latter would have no chance. But with no equipment for fighting man to man, the Hungarians have no chance fighting against the Little Entente. They are chained, and they know it.

King Charles categorically refuses to abdicate voluntarily, refuses to leave Hungary voluntarily and has let the Horthy Government known through its emissaries that nothing but the employment of force can remove him from his throne and country. Charles apparently is not worrying about being transported aboard a British monitor at Budapest and shipped down the Danube to the Black Sea, for not in the memory of the ancient mariners have the waters of the Danube been so low, sand bars bringing all but the shallowest draught river traffic to a standstill.

The Horthy Government will keep right on negotiating with Charles and will probably continue the game as long as the Entente will permit. Archbishop Csernoch, Prince Primate of the Hungarian Church, is being sent to Tihany the second time to try to persuade Charles to sacrifice himself for the good of the country and abdicate voluntarily. Csernoch crowned Charles King not quite five years ago.

The Horthy Government still has hopes that Charles may in time be persuaded to sacrifice his personal interests to the welfare of the country. It is forced to adopt a policy of procrastination about Charles because of the large number and great influence of Charles's followers in Hungary. The alternative to Charles's voluntary abdication is to employ force, summon Parliament and try to force a new law through declaring Charles dethroned. Such an emergency law would be a severe blow at the monarchical principle, however, and most Hungarians are monarchists. Hence the Horthy Government hesitates to resort to this last experience.

The Horthy Government has no intrests either in crimping or dimming the traditional aureole about the thousand-year-old crown of St. Stephan in the popular imagination. It is an open secret that Horthy himself covets St. Stephan's crown when the time is ripe. If forced, as a last resort to force a deposition law through Parliament a political crisis probably would result. Charles's followers in Parliament would immediately go over to the opposition and the Horthy Government has been dependent on the support of these followers to resist the radical, land-hungry peasantry.

Eminence

Ide Collars have won eminence—for they have won New York. Critical beyond all other men, the New Yorker demands the quality that's in himself—the fighting quality that wins.

It is no small matter to stand with the winners in the greatest city in the world. New York men have come here out of Mankato, Minnesota, and Searsport, Maine, and London, England. They're here because no other spot on all the map holds such rewards for winners.

It is these successful men who can tell style in the dark. It is these men who are walking into the best stores on the island and insisting that the mark of Ide appear on their collars.

Ask your own New York merchant. He will tell you of the notable increase in Ide sales in the past five years. He will tell you that this increase has come significantly at the very ebb of the business tide generally—at the time when men have scrutinized value.

He will tell you of the Ide Collar's exclusive Linocord Buttonhole—the life line that insures style immortality. He will tell you of the laundry test that gave Ide fabric citations, but no wound stripes, for twenty engagements with the mangle, and recommended it for distinguished service. He will tell you that Ide is thoroughbred in stamina and style.

While he is telling you these things, your eyes will tell quite as plainly the eminence of Ide.

ATLANTA GAMBLING INJURES FOOTBALL

BETTORS PESTER PLAYERS

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 30.—The charge that professional gamblers of Atlanta are casting a shadow over football in Atlanta and that if it is not stopped it may prove injurious, is made in a letter sent to the Sporting Editor of The Atlanta Constitution by William P. Garrison, graduate manager of the Rutgers football team, which was defeated by Georgia Tech on Grant Field here on Oct. 22 by a score of 48 to 14. Speaking of this phase of the football situation in Atlanta, he writes:

"Last year when we were invited by Tech to play we were aware of the break with Centre and Pittsburgh and the attending publicity it attracted. In addition we heard ugly rumors concerning other conditions in Atlanta which made us pause and think the situation over. The game was scheduled on the advice of some of our alumni, who assured us from personal observation that Tech was a desirable opponent. The game was therefore scheduled and prepared for to the best of our ability.

"Our squad had not been in Atlanta an hour last Friday before a number of people interested in gambling on the result of the game sought our coaches, managers and players, for opinions and information. This was a brand-new experience for us. Ugly rumors having to do with gambling activities soon began to go the rounds, and I confess that the atmosphere was so foreign to anything we had ever encountered that it shocked us.

"It seemed to us deplorable that Atlanta should put her worst foot foremost in this fashion. People interested in the gambling made their presence felt up to game time, and even in the grandstand where I sat it appeared to me that every touchdown, every penalty, every move of a player meant something to somebody's pocketbook, to be accompanied by the cheers of the winners and the curses of the losers, as the case might be.

"I know this situation exists in any sport crowd, but seldom to this extent. The press in Atlanta is naturally interested in supporting and upholding the fair name of the city. The greatest favor newspapers can do Atlanta and Tech is to use your powerful sporting page to combat the gambling tendency on the part of certain elements in your population.

"Another thing for Tech they might do is to temper the comments concerning visiting teams with mercy and accuracy. The gambling element everywhere is threatening professional as well as amateur sports. Unless the situation is taken in hand, we will one day find intercollegiate football being played before alumni and students only, if at all."

CORNELL'S CUP OVERFLOWS.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 30.—Bruised, weary, but happy, Cornell's football warriors, who on Saturday demonstrated that there was nothing fluky about their recent tremendous scores and that the Red team is a high-powered football machine and not another flivver, today turned their thoughts to New York and Philadelphia. The squad leaves here Thursday night to battle with Columbia Saturday, and while comparative scores would suggest a comfortable Cornell victory, Cornell's policy and preparation will not be predicated on any such idea.

On the contrary, Coach Dobie, who gave generous praise today to the fine work of the team against Dartmouth, conceding that they had surpassed expectations, pointed out that the inevitable let-down after such a tremendous effort as Cornell made yesterday, plus the physical weariness that follows a strenuous encounter, will make it difficult to bring the team up to top form for Columbia.

"It was a hard game," said Coach Dobie, "and the boys are naturally sore and tired, but we were fortunate in not having suffered any serious injuries."

Munns, right end, and George Lechler, fullback, were the only two men compelled to leave the game because of injuries.

The undergraduates and returning alumni were extravagant beyond words at Cornell's stupendous victory over Dartmouth, but Coach Dobie pointed out that the score is not a fair test of the strength of the Green team. Once on top, momentum carried the Ithacans along, while Dartmouth, straining every nerve, finally broke, he said.

FOUR CONFERENCE ELEVENS UNBEATEN

Wisconsin Has Three Victories, While Ohio State, Iowa and Chicago Have Two.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—The half-way point in the Western Conference football season finds four elevens swinging into the championship-deciding struggles with even chances of gaining first place. Wisconsin, Ohio State, Chicago and Iowa are undefeated, and picking the probable survivor is proving extremely difficult.

Ohio State	2	0	Indiana	0	1
Iowa	2	0	Purdue	0	2
Chicago	2	0	Northwestern	0	3
Michigan	1	1	Illinois	0	3

Saturday's games were rather colorless, Wisconsin's 35-0 victory over Minnesota being perhaps a little more one-sided than predicted and Michigan's 3 to 0 margin over Illinois closer than some had expected. None of the games affected the championship race other than to strengthen the conviction that the fight will prove so close that only the breaks are likely to decide it.

One of the most important games of the season will come next Saturday here at Stagg Field when Ohio State and Chicago will meet in a contest likely to eliminate one from the race. Ohio rested Saturday in preparation for this battle, while Chicago, after its strenuous fight with Princeton the week previous, needed only 25 substitutes to overwhelm Colorado, 35 to 0.

Both teams will be at their full strength, barring scrimmage accidents this week, and backers of neither eleven are willing to give odds on their gridiron representatives.

Iowa remained in the unbeaten ranks by a rather disappointing 13 to 6 victory over Purdue. The Hawkeyes face Minnesota next Saturday at Minneapolis and then Indiana and Northwestern, this schedule being considered almost certain to take them through the season undefeated.

Michigan, through the 3 to 0 victory over Illinois, still is a mathematical championship possibility, but few give [illegible]

Whether Tierney will be put back at centre rush this week and Kunhardt picked for right tackle will be one of the big matters for the coaches to decide in the next few days. The first eleven, so few members of which played against Centre, has been told to "forget" Saturday's defeat.

RANKS OF UNBEATEN ELEVENS DIMINISH

FIRST DEFEAT SINCE 1916

"I'm the happiest man in the world," said "Bo" McMillin, Centre's famous quarterback, after the game last Saturday in which the Danville Colonels had crossed Harvard's goal line and inflicted a 6-0 defeat on the Crimson eleven. And nobody present felt like denying McMillin's right to be happy, for he had carried over the line the touchdown that represented Harvard's first football defeat since 1916.

Three actual playing seasons (there were no formal games played in the war years of 1917 and 1918) Harvard had gone through without a setback until Centre visited Cambridge on Saturday and brought defeat with her. In the final game of the 1916 season Yale's team, the first that Tad Jones coached, triumphed over Harvard by 6 to 3. That was truly a bad season for the Cambridge outfit, for on the previous Saturday Brown had won by three touchdowns, 21 to 0, and earlier in the year Tufts had stunned Harvard and itself by grabbing off a 7-3 triumph.

This, therefore, was a monumental event that took place in the stadium on Saturday. But it was only one of the upsets that marked what had looked beforehand like a quiet day in the football calendar. Equally astounding was the happening at Ithaca, where a Dartmouth team at the hands of Cornell suffered the worst defeat the Green has ever encountered. A great many people refused to believe that the big Red team had beaten the big Green team by such a farcical score as 59 to 7, but such was the true tidings that came down from Cayuga, and we must take Gilmour Dobie's word for it that he has a real football machine this season.

The Polo Grounds Affair.

In the nature of a surprise also was the outcome of that little argument at the Polo Grounds which saw North and South brought together in the teams of Penn State and Georgia Tech. The latter's impressive showing against Rutgers a week before and the general whirlwind nature of the Tech attack had forecast a hard-fought and thrilling engagement. But it was no such thing. Penn State brought with it all the force in attack and speed afoot that had left Harvard groggy and had made Bezdek's eleven feared as the greatest scoring machine in the East. Against this Tech was able to oppose a line that was only second-rate and not any too well drilled in the stratagems and deceptions of modern football. However heavy a forward may be, he is useless and superfluous when he charges in blindly and trustingly to where the ball seems to be only to discover that a fair imitation of a frightened jack-rabbit is scampering through the other side of the line.

In the category of important games on the last Saturday in October the California-Washington State battle out in far-off Portland should not be overlooked. It had been generally agreed that Washington State was the only team capable of stopping the team that beat Ohio State last New Year's Day. And when it was all over and California was returned the winner, one of the contestants in the Tournament of Roses game next Jan. 1 had virtually been decided. To all intents and purposes Coach Andy Smith's lads have established their title to the best team in the Far West, and all they now lack is the name and address of the Eastern or Middle Western opponent which will battle them at Pasadena on the first day of 1922.

and morale, and notable improvement was seen in the work of the backfield, the line and even the ends, who seemed nearly hopeless against the Navy and Chicago.

Pittsburgh, Washington and Jefferson and Lafayette kept up their steady march toward the top, where the mythical Eastern championship awaits. The first-named found no more difficulty with Pennsylvania than most people had anticipated, and each member of Glenn Warner's powerful backfield succeeded in carrying over one touchdown. W. and J., aided by the devout prayers of Coach Neale, knocked down a forward pass, batted it into the hands of one of its own players and a touchdown resulted that proved enough to send luckless Syracuse down with a crash. The score was 17 to 10, and it was another hard blow to the Orange warriors, who the week before had emerged on the slim end of a 35—0 beating at the hands of Pitt.

Lafayette's Fine Showing.

Lafayette did almost as well against Rutgers as Georgia Tech had done the preceding Saturday. The much touted Golden Tornado trounced the New Brunswick team 48 to 14, and Coach Sutherland's Easton youths were victorious by 35 to 0. Lafayette's victory earlier in the season over Pitt will always count heavily when the time comes to analyze the season, and the fact that Lafayette had not faltered since adds backing to the early triumph.

New York University and Fordham had better luck than Columbia but were both held to tie scores, a not very satisfactory ending to a hard afternoon's work. New York University redeemed some of its earlier failings by traveling up to Binghamton and there battling Colgate to a 7-7 deadlock. This looks like one of those "moral victories" that used to be so common at New Haven, for Colgate is not the weakest team in the East by any means and boasts of three victories this year.

Fordham discovered that a certain amount of pugilistic ability was needed against Boston College, which undoubtedly was belligerent because a football team from Detroit had beaten it, by 28 to 0, the week before. Slugging of the most flagrant sort was rampant throughout the contest, but no player was banished from the game, and the ring activities went ahead unchecked. What football there was ended in a scoreless tie, Fordham coming closest to a score when one of its men got over the goal line but had the misfortune to drop the ball where an opponent could recover it.

Tennis Stars Raise $10,000 For the Benefit of France

When the series of tennis matches for the benefit of the American Committee for Devastated France was concluded yesterday afternoon at the Amackassin Club in Yonkers, it was given out on behalf of Miss Anne Morgan, Chairman of the committee, that the handsome sum of approximately $10,000 had been raised to help rebuild Northern France. The series extended over a month, and all the exhibitions were given at clubs within the metropolitan district. The matches were designed to take the place of those in which Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen was to have figured. William T. Tilden, 2d, the champion, was a prime mover in the undertaking, and other players who contributed their services to one or more of the exhibitions were: Vincent Richards, Richard Norris Williams, 2d, Watson M. Washburn, Wallace F. Johnson, Nathaniel W. Niles, Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, Miss Eleanor Goss, Miss Leslie Bancroft and Miss Martha Bayard. The success of the undertaking surpassed the fondest expectations of the committee.

All Cripples in Shape as Harvard Game Approaches.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 30.—Unless some unforeseen accident occurs Princeton will be able to present her entire first-string line-up against Harvard Saturday, when the Orange and Black meets the Crimson here in the first of the Big Three classics of the year. Dick Newby, who dislocated his elbow ten days ago, is the only regular now on the sick list, and with Lourie and Garrity back in the fold, even he would probably have been kept out as a substitute. Gordon, still in the infirmary with a broken leg, might possibly have got in the game, but this is unlikely.

All the men emerged from the Virginia game in perfect condition, due in some measure to the fact that Keene Fitzpatrick used many substitutes as the contest progressed. Hank Garrity, playing for the first time since the opening game with Swarthmore, with the exception of a few minutes in the Chicago battle, was yanked out at the beginning of the second period and thereafter the reserves simply streamed in.

Don Lourie, regular quarterback, was slated to play until the last moment, when Coach Bill Roper decided to make sure of his presence against Harvard and kept him out of the fray. He is in good shape, however, and the measure was merely precautionary. The Tiger star is due for some hard scrimmaging this week, for he has not had any actual work since the Colgate game on Oct. 8.

The whole system of play of the Tigers was vastly superior to anything they have shown this season, and the bruins with the Southerners developed into virtually a practice game. In many ways it would have been better for them to have faced stiffer opposition, but they have had their share of such against the Navy and Chicago. These two games were quite evidently scheduled at the wrong time, and Princeton tried to do too much.

It is difficult to tell just how much of the apparent improvement shown yesterday was due to inferior opposition and just how much to better work. Undoubtedly there was an element of both. The bearing of the Tigers was better, their charge was harder and for the first time this year they showed a system in attack and a well-organized [illegible]

TILDEN WINNER AS NET SEASON ENDS

The tennis season of 1921 on metropolitan courts came to a brilliant conclusion yesterday afternoon at the Amackassin Club at Yonkers, when the last of the series of exhibitions in aid of the American Committee for Devastated France was held before a gallery that taxed the club's seating accommodations and filled every vantage point about the courts. The performers, as at the New Rochelle Tennis Club on the preceding day, included William T. Tilden 2d, world's champion; Vincent Richards, national junior champion; Richard Norris Williams 2d, former national champion, and Nathaniel W. Niles, veteran of the Longwood Club of Boston. Only Wallace F. Johnson was unable to compete.

Yonkers is the home town of Richards, and the eighteen-year-old marvel of the courts was the principal magnet to draw what constituted a record gallery for the Amackassin Club. The crowd filled the street overloooking the courts and fringed the roofs of adjoining houses. It was estimated that the gallery inside the grounds numbered 1,500, with hundreds more watching from outside. The one outstanding interest was as to how "Vinny" would make out against Tilden. It would have made a fitting climax to the most noteworthy season Richards has ever played through—and the most notable, incidentally, that any player of his years ever figured in—had he been able to defeat the champion. That he could not do, however, Tilden winning by scores of 6—4, 6—4.

Richards has played so much tennis since the close of the national championship as to overtax his powers of endurance, and he gave evidence yesterday of being overtrained. His ground strokes lacked the zip he was able to impart to them a few weeks ago. But, when he was able to get to the net, his wonderful volleying ability was as brilliantly in evidence as ever and there were many sparkling short-range exchanges between the two. Tilden was at his best, and apparently able to do what he liked with the ball, both off the ground and at the net. Richards's comparatively soft ground strokes gave Tilden frequent opportunities to display his spectacular overhead shots.

Williams defeated Niles in the other singles match by 6—2, 7—5. Williams, who has played but little tennis since the national championship, astonished Niles and the gallery with the remarkable decisiveness of his hitting. His famous cross-court back-hand drives and volleys were wonderfully executed, being both swift and beautifully angled and placed. Two shots at the ball were all Williams asked as a rule to finish the points on Niles's service. Moreover, his own service was going well and often enabled him to kill Niles's first return. It was only in overdriving the baseline on easy forehand shots that Williams was erratic. Niles said after the match that he never had known Williams to tuck the points away with such rapidity and finality as he did yesterday.

In the doubles, Tilden and Richards, holders of the national championship, defeated Williams and Niles by 9—7, 6—1. The first set was very even and well played, service winning consistently up to the last stages. In the second set Williams and Niles showed the effects of the strenuous pace and slowed up, allowing the champions to profit by many errors. The umpires of the several matches were Edward W. Conlin and S. Wallis Merrihew.

The auctioning off of racquets and autographed balls followed the matches and netted $350. It was estimated that the receipts for the day reached $1,500. Yesterday's part of the fund was augmented by the sale of autographed photographs of the players and by silhouettes of Tilden and Richards in action drawn by Miss Julie Brown. A speech was made by Hampton Ewing on behalf of the Committee for Devastated France, thanking the players for what they had done in saving the occasion after Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen's illness had prevented the carrying out of the original plans for France's benefit.

CAPTURE DOUBLES TITLE.

Dr. King and Robert Stoddart Win Westchester Tennis Crown.

Dr. George King and Robert Stoddart became the doubles champions of Westchester County yesterday afternoon when they defeated Herbert L. Bowman and Henry H. Bassford at the County Tennis Club of Westchester at Hartsdale in four closely contested sets, scoring [illegible]. This was in the final round of the tournament, which was started early in the season and incompleted because of the activities of Vincent Richards in other tournaments. Richards had entered the doubles with Fred Fox as his partner and they were defeated last week in the semi-final round by Bowman and Bassford. In yesterday's match the forceful driving and smashing of Dr. King, backed by the steadiness of Stoddart, gained the day, though only after the stoutest resistance from Bassford and Bowman, who showed good team work and did much skillful blocking at the net.

JOHNSTONE FIRST IN TEN-MILE RUN

PLANT WINS WALKING TITLE

A new National A. A. U. ten-mile run champion was crowned yesterday on the Glen Park Oval at Yonkers. H. Earl Johnstone, a husky sprinter, wearing the colors of the Edgar Thomson Steel A. A. of Pittsburgh, with what seemed unlimited power and speed, easily carried away the honors in the test, after allowing William Ritola, an unattached runner of New York, to set the pace most of the way. Johnstone's time was 53 minutes 20 4-5 seconds. The surprise of the day, however, was the poor showing made by Fred Faller, the titleholder, who, after struggling gamely along for the first half of the race, fell behind and was lapped by four runners, finishing fifth.

The National A. A. U. seven-mile walk, held in conjunction with the ten-mile event, was literally a walk-away for William Plant of the Morningside A. C., who finished in 55 minutes 2 3-5 seconds, crossing the tape more than a minute ahead of W. J. Rolker, New York Athletic Club, his nearest competitor.

The conditions were almost ideal. While the track was heavy, it was firm, and it was just cool enough to suit the athletes without discomforting the spectators. Every seat in the big concrete grandstand was filled, and the overflow crowd stood four lines deep all around the track, and other spectators perched on telegraph poles, nearby roofs and other points of vantage. Fully 3,000 persons had assembled in the arena when Referee Frederick W. Rubien blew his whistle for the seven-mile walk competitors to toe the mark.

Plant Takes Early Lead.

Eleven athletes started. Willie Plant, the favorite, who recently captured the metropolitan championship at this distance, immediately took the lead, with Rolker and Foster close at his heels. For the first three miles this trio furnished a good three-cornered match, hardly a fifth of a second separating them. The remainder of the pack were hopelessly outclassed from the start, three of them dropping out in the first half of the race, while the others contented themselves with fighting it out for fourth and fifth places.

At the end of the fifth mile Plant was nearly a half a lap ahead of Rolker, the second man, and was still going strong. The spectators shifted their attention to the latter, who was putting up a game fight to keep Foster, representing the Detroit Y. M. C. A., from crowding him out of second honors. Putting on a sudden burst of speed in the last half of the last lap, Rolker came in at least five yards ahead of his rival, but still more than three-quarters of a lap behind Plant.

The ten-mile run was not won so easily, however, and it was only by a display of superior generalship coupled with plenty of endurance that the colored Pittsburgh runner was able to down Ritola, his only dangerous opponent. The two men ran shoulder to shoulder most of the distance, first one taking the lead, then the other, but neither seemed to exert himself, and was not fatigued when the race was over.

Steady Pace Wins.

Ritola, on the other hand, did not run a well-judged race, first putting on a burst of speed and taking the lead, then slacking up for a momentary rest. As in so many other instances, it was the steady pace that won, and when Johnstone did open up for a little sprint toward the finish Ritola had nothing left to meet it with, and fell behind rapidly, the Smoky City distance man leading him across the tape by at least forty yards.

Fred Faller, the wiry Bay State runner and the general favorite before the race, was unable to hit his stride after the first two miles. His customary smile was gone, and in its place was what appeared to be an expression of pain, as he manfully struggled to be among the finishers, so far had he fallen behind his usual place among the leaders.

James Henigan, running mate of Faller, who finished third in the field of twelve, was popular with the gallery, which cheered him more lustily when he lapped a man than it did the two leaders themselves. Sprinting in the last two laps, he came up within 200 yards of the first two men. The events were held under the auspices of the Hollywood Inn Club of Yonkers.

Thanks to exceptional work on the part of the visiting goalkeeper, W. Gray of Holyoke, Mass., the Falco Football Club succeeded in escaping defeat at the hands of the New York Football Club in the American Soccer League game at New York Oval yesterday afternoon. The final score was 0 to 0. With New York doing most of the pressing and time and again endangering their opponents' goal, Gray was the man equal to every eventuality and thereby earned the generous plaudits of the large crowd.

The fine defense of the New Englanders impressed the onlookers so forcibly that most of the latter were not displeased when a penalty kick, given against McKechnie for inadvertent fouling in a scrimmage, was shot to one side by Kelly of New York.

Many Champions in List to Compete in International Matches Next Month.

England will be represented by a strong team of fencers in the international matches against America's best blade wielders, which will be held in Washington on Nov. 18 and 19 and in the Hotel Astor on Nov. 21. This is indicated in the list of team members with individual records of the British fencers made public yesterday by the American committee in charge of the international matches.

A team of eleven members has been nominated to engage Uncle Sam's fencers with foil, epee and sabre. Included in the English team are nine present champions or former holders of titles. The one reserve fencer named on the British team also is a former titleholder. A majority of the visiting fencers have experienced the significance of competing in Olympic competition.

According to the official team personnel as announced by the American committee England will be represented by four men each in foils, epee and sabre. But one member of the visiting team will compete with two weapons. Lieut. Col. A. Ridley Martin, O. B. E., has been nominated for both the foil and the sabre competitions.

The entries, as they have been announced, follow:

Foils—Major R. M. P. Willoughby, T. D., team leader; Captain Lloyd Ward Petley, Lieutenant R. E. Cole and Lieut. Col. A. Ridley Martin, O. B. E.

Sabre—Captain W. W. Hammond, team leader; Colonel Ronald Campbell, D. S. O.; Major W. [illegible] Gardiner and Lieut. Col. A. Ridley Martin, O. B. E.

Colonel Campbell, D. S. O., the Gordon Highlanders—Director of physical and recreational training, British Army; army and navy middleweight boxing champion, 1895-8; service sabre champion, 1919; army bayonet fencing champion, 1921; Olympic team, 1920.

Major Huntington, O. B. E.—Superintendent physical training, Eastern command; service middleweight boxing champion, 1912-20; service heavyweight boxing champion, 1921; amateur epee champion, 1921; member of British Olympic team, 1920.

C. M. Burt—Member British Olympic team, 1920.

Lieutenant Cole—Army epee champion, 1921.

Lieutenant C. A. Kershaw, R. N., school of physical training, Portsmouth, is included in the list as a possible member of the team. He held the amateur sabre championship last year, was a member of the British Olympic team, and is an international rugby football player.

TODD SOCCER TEAM WINS.

The Todd Shipyards soccer team gained somewhat on its rivals in the American Soccer League yesterday by defeating Fall River United by 6 goals to 2 at Todd Field, Brooklyn. Although the start was anything but auspicious for the winners of the National Challenge Trophy last year, and the score at half time stood at 2 to 2, the champions made full amends in the second period, during which they piled up an advantage of four goals.

Corrigan of Fall River took the Brooklynites by surprise when he netted the ball in the first minute of play. A misunderstanding between the home backs yielded another point for the visitors two minutes later, Carrick making the shot. The New Englanders held their two-point advantage for fifteen minutes, when McKenna tallied for Todd Shipyards. Ten minutes later McGuire equalized.

Less than a minute after the restart Sweeney placed Todd Shipyards in the lead. McGuire followed quickly with another, and Sweeney repeated about midway. With one minute to go, McKenna shot the winner's sixth goal.

The line-up:

REST FOR MOUNTAINEERS.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 30.—The West Virginia eleven will be given a rest tomorrow for the first time since practice started at the Deer Park training camp nine weeks ago to the day. The gruelling battle with Lehigh left a number of men badly bruised, but, aside from Hawkins's ankle, none is seriously hurt. Hawkins may not be able to play against Washington and Lee Saturday at Charleston.

The great work of Nardacci and Tallman in Saturday's game was the subject of conversation here today. Much to its surprise, the team was met at the train by the Cadet Band and about three hundred cheering students in spite of the fact that it was Sunday.

The great fight at Bethlehem has renewed the confidence of local supporters in the strength of the team.

Flushing Eleven Is Beaten.

DRASTIC ACTION IS TAKEN IN HOCKEY

U. S. A. H. A. Withdraws From International Skating Union at Philadelphia Meeting.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—At a meeting of the United States Amateur Hockey Association held here today the action taken yesterday to withdraw from the International Skating Union and make the U. S. A. H. A. the governing body in hockey was approved. A committee was named, headed by R. L. von Bernuth of New York, to confer with Amateur Athletic Union officials in an effort to gain their approval. Teams were grouped for the season as follows:

Group 1—Boston (two teams), New York and Philadelphia.

Group 3—Eveleth, Houghton, Calumet and Soo.

New teams admitted to the association are: Westminster Hockey Club of Boston, Melrose Club of Melrose, Mass., and Pere Marquette of Michigan. Other clubs approved were: Boston Shoe Trades, Boston A. A., Pittsburgh Hockey Club, Quaker City of Philadelphia, Calumet Hockey Club, Eveleth Hockey Club, Cleveland Hockey Club, Duluth Hockey Club, American Soo, St. Nicholas Hockey Club of New York, St. Paul Hockey Club and Portage Hockey Club.

With sixteen clubs now under the supervision of the United States Hockey Association, the officers so arranged the groupings that twelve teams are taken care of, the remaining four will be held available for any emergency.

President William S. Haddock of Pittsburgh, who was re-elected, and Secretary Roy D. Schooley, also of Pittsburgh, have been empowered to draw up a schedule. The league season will open in January, but exhibition games by league teams will start the latter part of November.

The governing body made the American rules conform with the Canadian code, making it legal to skate a man off side. This is an important decision and will go a long way toward speeding up the game.

Hamilton [illegible] Wills of Toronto has donated an International Cup to be [illegible] in either the United States or Canada that is approved by their National Amateur body will be eligible to compete for it.

Membership of Golf Organization Reaches Total of 529.

During the last year fifty-two clubs have been elected to membership in the United States Golf Association, bringing the total membership of the parent organization of golf in this country up to the 529 mark, according to a report just issued by W. D. Vanderpool, Secretary of the U. S. G. A.

In line with the campaign waged to increase the active membership, twenty clubs have, during the year, transferred from the allied roles to the active group, bringing the total active membership up to 194.

DEADLOCK IN SOCCER.

Soccer teams representing the Harrison Football Club and the J. and P. Coats Football Club of Pawtucket, R. I., battled to a 1 to 1 tie in the American Soccer League fixture at Harrison, N. J., before 3,000 spectators yesterday. Both goals came before ends were changed, the second half being scoreless. Toward the close the teams showed signs of fatigue and the speed slackened perceptibly.

Fifteen minutes from the start Mitchell of Pawtucket found the Harrison net through a clever individual effort. Ford netted the ball for the home team soon after, but was declared off-side. At thirty minutes Ford came through again, and this time equalized from a mix-up.

HARRISON (1).		J. & P. COATS (1).
Tinlin	G.	Whalen
Post	R. B.	Leppin
Butterworth	L. B.	J. Gallagher
Pepper	R. H.	J. Gallagher
Bustard	C. H.	McIntosh

Cyclist Clips 39 Minutes Off Albany-to-New York Record

Starting from the City Hall in Albany at midnight Saturday, Joe Crowley, the champion cyclist of the Acme Wheelmen, arrived at the City Hall here at 9:42 yesterday morning, breaking a record that had withstood assaults since 1909. Crowley, despite the fact that he had two punctures en route and that he encountered two fog banks which slowed his progress somewhat, clipped thirty-nine minutes off the old mark, which was made by Joe Noe. The distance between the two points is 148 miles. The test made was under the auspices of the American Bicycle League of America. At the conclusion of his performance Crowley announced that within a couple of weeks he would make an effort to lower the record between Boston and New York.

WILL DECIDE STATE TITLE IN BILLIARDS

Amateurs to Start Three-Cushion Tourney Tonight—Greenleaf's Great Record.

Nine of the strongest amateur players have entered the tournament for the three-cushion carom billiard championship of New York State, which begins at the National Recreation Academy in Brooklyn tonight. The event will be held under the auspices of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players.

George H. Laubach, who won the title last season, finds it impossible to compete because of business engagements, and therefore a new champion is sure to be crowned. Turk was the runner-up a year ago and he has been playing well in practice for the tournament. Ira Brussell is a brother of Sidney Brussell, the National Class C 18.2 balkline champion.

The tournament will consist of one round robin, the players meeting each other once. Thirty-six games will be played. Tonight's opening matches will be between Louis Servatius and Schuyler Burdett at 3:30, and M. Hanratty and Harold L. Turk at 9.

When Ralph Greenleaf emerged victorious in the annual national pocket billiard championship tournament at Philadelphia on Saturday night, it was the third year in succession that he had annexed the title. In none of his previous triumphs, however, had his work been as impressive as it was this season. He played nine games and won them all. It was not the fact so much as the easy manner in which he scored a majority of his victories that stamped him as one of the greatest pocket billiard players of all time. Only two of his opponents—Arthur Church and James Maturo—were able to score 100 or more points before Greenleaf accumulated the necessary 125 buttons. He scored a total of 1,125 points to a combined total for his nine opponents of 631. A glance at the following scores of his matches shows just how much he outclassed his rivals:

Michael Kovach, 125 to 34; Arthur Church, 125 to 102; Jerome Keogh, 125 to 56; Walter Franklin, 125 to 27; Benny Allen, 125 to 21; William F. Bede, 125 to 31; Thomas Hueston, 125 to 88; James Maturo, 125 to 113, and Arthur Woods, 125 to 71.

A feature of the outstanding features in Greenleaf's work throughout the tournament was his masterful safety play. Hitherto Greenleaf has been known more for his shot-making ability rather than for his defensive work at the table, but he now has perfected his game so that it may truthfully be said he is a master in all departments.

With the arrival of Willie Hoppe in Chicago this week practically all of the seven players who will compete in the world's championship 18.2 balkline billiard tournament, Nov. 14 to 22, inclusive, will be on the scene. Jake Schaefer, George Sutton, Roger Conti, Edouard Horemans and Ora Morningstar are already on the scene, putting in their final practice for a tilt at the title that Willie Hoppe has now held for sixteen seasons. Welker Cochran, the other entrant, is due to arrive in the Windy City late this week or early next.

All of the players have been diligently perfecting their strokes since early in the season, and to many it seems a very open affair. Naturally, Hoppe is the favorite. His long string of successes against the hardest opposition that could be mustered since he ascended the throne in 1906 stamps him as one of the greatest if not the greatest player of all time. But there are others in the array who may cause the champion no little trouble. Schaefer, for instance, had been playing remarkable billiards since the middle of last season. Cochran, too, has shown impressive form, while Horemans has been little short of a sensation. Sutton and Morningstar, the veterans, may be depended upon to play their best, and their best is good enough to make any of the first-flight players hustle to keep in front; in fact, there are some who openly express the belief that Morningstar will prove one of the toughest obstacles for his opponents to overcome.

Conti, the young Parisian, is the dark horse. His performances in France toward the close of last year and early this, when he made averages of 42 and 48 for two matches of 6,000 points each and had high runs of from two to more than five hundred points, furnish concrete foundation for the belief that he can play the game with the best of them. How championship tournament play will affect his game is the question. If he can maintain his best form under such a mental strain he should make an enviable record.

This will be the greatest tournament since 1900, when the balklines were extended to eighteen inches with two shots in, from fourteen inches with two shots in. In the tournament of that year, held in this city, the contestants were: George Slosson, George Sutton, Jake Schaefer, father of the present Jake, Willie Hoppe, Ora Morningstar and Louis Cure of France. Slosson won the championship. He took five games, Sutton and Schaefer finished next with four victories each; Hoppe won three; Cutler and Cure two each, and Morningstar one. Sutton then challenged Slosson and won the title. Hoppe challenged Sutton and won the crown that he has worn ever since.

Newspaper Golfers in Tourney.

The wind-up of the New York Newspaper Golf Club's season will take place on the Van Cortlandt Park links on Nov. 7, when the Gymkana games will be played and officers elected for the ensuing year. The program contains many events, with prizes for each, at club handicaps. Members of the New York Scottish-American and the Gun Hill Golf Clubs have been invited to participate in the contests. The members of the club will hold their last monthly outing today on the links of the Pelham Country Club.

Soccer Victory for St. George.

The Brooklyn St. George soccer eleven defeated the Hebrew Sport Club by 2 goals to 0 in the Metropolitan League championship game at the Ridgewood Baseball Grounds in Brooklyn yesterday. Sigley, centre for St. George's, shot a goal in the first half and Philips added another in the second.

SWIMMING LEAGUE IN ANNUAL MEETING

West Point's Application to Enter Discussed Informally—Title Meet Date Set.

Twelve colleges were represented at the annual Fall meeting of the Intercollegiate Swimming Association at the New York A. C. yesterday. They were Yale, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Columbia, City College of New York, Rutgers, Wesleyan, Brown, Amherst, Massachusetts Tech, Williams and West Point.

The West Point delegate, Captain Pendleton, attended for the purpose of endeavoring to adjust differences between the academy and association over rules of eligibility in order that the Army team might join the league. West Point uses first-year men in all sports, while the collegiate body excludes freshmen from championship events.

Captain Pendleton was not authorized to take action, so the matter was discussed informally, but most of those present expressed the opinion that the Army should be allowed to swim plebes in dual meets only, not in title contests. They pointed out that Annapolis proved willing to comply with the one-year clause in entering the league last year. As a result it appears doubtful that West Point will carry out its plan to join the league.

The intercollegiate championships will be decided in the usual manner this season, the team titles in swimming and water polo through a round robin series of dual meets, the individual championships in a special carnival. Yale, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Columbia and C. C. N. Y. will vie for team honors, starting with an engagement between Pennsylvania and C. C. N. Y. in the Penn natatorium on Dec. 2. The individual titles will be competed for on March 2[illegible].

Williams College was admitted to associate membership and will be eligible to enter candidates for the latter fixture.

An important step taken at yesterday's meeting was to approve the suggested plan for holding annual interscholastic championships under the supervision of the association. In the past there have been no official titles for high school boys in the East, but a number of unauthorized championship meets have been held, so that each school has brought several claimants to every title at stake. It is to standardize the championship meet that the college body is entering the field, and it will encourage the schools to recognize its titles as official in time. The first of these events will be run off by Princeton on March 18.

The graduate officers elected for 1921-1922 are: Andrew Wilson of Yale, President; Joseph Russell of Pennsylvania, Vice President; Goulding K. Wright of Princeton, Secretary-Treasurer.

CYCLING SEASON TO OPEN.

Twenty-Four Hour Race Will Be Inaugural at Garden, Nov. 16-17.

The local cycling season will be officially opened at Madison Square Garden on Nov. 16 and 17, when a twenty-four hour bicycle race will be conducted. Teams composed of American and foreign riders have been invited to participate in the event, which is expected to get under way with at least fifteen teams on the track. The race will be preceded by an hour of sprint events on Nov. 16. The sprint races will begin at 11 o'clock, according to present plans, and enough of them will be conducted to provide an hour of riding competition prior to the start of the round-the-clock grind.

Under the system adopted for the endurance race, point sprints will be held to determine the victorious team. Sprints for points will be held at 2 o'clock in the morning and 5 o'clock in the afternoon of Nov. 17, and the race will close with an hour of sprinting. The event will be the first of a series of twenty-four hour races planned for the Garden this Winter. It will be in the nature of a warm-up for the annual six-day bike race, which is scheduled for the Garden the first week in December.

Manager Johnny Chapman has already started to round up the cyclists for the twenty-four hour race. Invitations to compete have been sent to Reggie McNamara, Walter Rutt, E. Van Kempen, Willy and Arthur Spencer, Joe Coburn, Bobby Walthour, Cecil McBeath and a number of other American and foreign riders.

Tyrconnell Celts Soccer Victors.

The Tyrconnell Celts defeated the Franco-Swiss soccer team by 2 goals to 1 in the Metropolitan League match at St. Brendan's Oval, Brooklyn, yesterday. The goals were made by Woods and Gray for the Celts and Fisher for Franco-Swiss.

MISS HOLLINS STAR OF GOLF FOURSOME

MAKES BRILLIANT FINISH

STONY BROOK, L. I., Oct. 30.—After being all even at the turn, Miss Marion Hollins, the national champion, and Miss Edith Leitch of England defeated Miss Cecil Leitch, the British titleholder, and Miss Rosamond Sherwood by a score of 4 and 2 in a four-ball foursome exhibition golf match played over the links of the St. George's Golf and Country Club here this afternoon.

The victory was due to the phenomenal playing of the national champion, beginning at the tenth hole. From that point on the winner of the recent Hollywood tournament gave an exhibition of playing such as has seldom been seen on an American course. She was 1 under 4s for the seven holes up to the sixteenth, at which the match ended. Her best playing began at the twelfth hole. There, following a short drive, she played her second out of a difficult lie dead to the pin for an easy birdie 3. At the thirteenth she made a par 4, sinking a putt of almost fifty feet from the edge of the green. She followed this with another birdie 2 at the fourteenth, her tee shot just reaching the green, whence she was again successful in holing out another long putt, covering some forty-five feet.

For the first nine holes Miss Cecil Leitch outdrove the American girl consistently, but from there in there was no advantage off the tee, while the national champion overshadowed her famous rival by her spectacular recoveries and her wonderful putting.

Miss Sherwood Off Form.

Miss Sherwood played far below the game of which she is capable and was not a factor at any of the holes, while the champion's sister was also somewhat below her standard, although she won the first for her side and was entitled to a share in the honors at the twelfth.

A gallery of almost one thousand followed the players, and the remarkable shots of both Miss Cecil Leitch and Miss Hollins drew round after round of applause. A rather amusing incident happened at the fifteenth hole, where Miss Hollins's tee shot carried to the [illegible] and her ball rolled under an automobile. The owner of the car was not about and it was necessary to call for recruits to assist in rolling the car away, the national champion herself taking a hand in the labor. Then she made her shot to the green.

The British champion was not in the form she displayed in her match of the preceding day against Jim Barnes, the national open champion, at the Pelham Country Club. She took a total of [illegible]. Miss Hollins was out in 40 and by playing out the bye holes had a 38 coming home for a total of 78, eight over the somewhat difficult par.

All four had a bad start, not one of the drives being on the fairway, but the hole was halved in fives for both Miss Hollins and Miss Cecil Leitch. The second was also halved in one over par, Miss Hollins being behind the mound on her second, while the British champion was over the green. The former, however, had a fine approach, and got the putt down for the half. The English star won the third with a par 4, putting her side 1 up, and all hands [illegible] at the fourth, the national champion missing a chance for a win by failing to sink a short putt. At the fifth Edith Leitch had her only opportunity to win, getting a par 4. Miss Hollins was over the green and was short coming back, while Cecil Leitch missed a short putt which would have given her side the hole. All four had drives that approximated 220 yards at the sixth, and the following three holes were halved in fives, the only feature being a remarkable second by Miss Hollins going to the eighth.

Sinks 50-Foot Putt.

A fine second shot enabled Edith Leitch to halve the tenth with her sister in 4, but at the eleventh Miss Hollins won with a par 3. Here Miss Cecil Leitch was off the course, but had a remarkable recovery through a clump of trees, only to lose the hole by overrunning the cup, and then missing on the way back. Miss Hollins and her partner shared the win on the twelfth, each getting a par [illegible]. Here the British champion was bunkered, while Miss Hollins had a remarkable second which left her within twelve inches from the cup. Miss Hollins put [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] a par 4, Miss Leitch taking a [illegible]. The American star [illegible] the next, again holing out a putt from the edge of the green.

Cecil Leitch's only victory over the last nine came at the fifteenth, where she had a par [illegible]. Miss Hollins, however, ended the match at the next hole. [illegible] teen feet from the cup, and she had a putt for an eagle 2, which she missed by a narrow margin. Her birdie, though, was two strokes better than Miss Leitch. Playing out the bye holes, the seventeenth was halved, but Miss Cecil Leitch took the eighteenth.

MACFARLANE IS GOLF STAR.

Fine golf on the part of Willie MacFarlane, the home professional, enabled him and his partner, Louis Goldman, to win their four-ball exhibition match against Willie Hunter, the British amateur champion, and J. S. Worthington of Siwanoy, Westchester amateur titleholder, by the margin of [illegible] yesterday at the Oak Ridge Golf Club.

MacFarlane had a [illegible] for the round, four over par, beating Hunter, who was second, by four strokes. Worthington finished the day with an 81 and Goldman had an 86.

The Oak Ridge pro won four holes on the first nine and three on the last six played. Hunter won one hole and he and his partner shared one another.

The first two holes were halved, but MacFarlane [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FOOTBALL

Yale, Princeton and Harvard, now on the threshold of their own private football series, have finished what might be called the work of preparation for the historic round robin that will begin next Saturday with the conflict between Harvard and Princeton at the Palmer Stadium. On the whole, it has been an interesting season thus far for the warriors of the Eastern Big Three. Of the trio only Yale has escaped defeat, and the Elis ride on an even keel as their craft approaches the final tests ahead.

But if Yale has been progressing more steadily and smoothly, it has also had the advantage of an easier schedule. Only the Army stands out among such opponents as Bates, Vermont, Williams and North Carolina. Harvard, on the other hand, found only a field goal separating it from Holy Cross and also from the University of Georgia, while Penn State was tied in the final minute [illegible] by a desperate forward pass, and Centre actually defeated the Crimson. Princeton, after two easy games with Swarthmore and Colgate, lost to both Chicago and the Navy and recovered its balance only in the Virginia game on Saturday, just seven days before Harvard is due in the Palmer Stadium.

To analyze the early season work of these three teams is complicated by many things, mainly by the fact that each team, when face to face with its traditional enemies, usually plays far beyond its previous form. Then again the return of injured players must be considered. Princeton is the one team that should show the greatest improvement, for the Tiger has turned October defeats into assets and possesses the valuable knack of profiting considerably by early season disasters.

One tremendous advantage Yale possesses, and it is all the more formidable in these days of open football. The reference is to the ends, who have been uniformly superior to the wing defenders of both Harvard and Princeton. While Yale can look forward with some confidence to its defense against forward passes, the Crimson and the Tiger must face the fact that they have been vulnerable to the aerial attack. And in this connection it is interesting to note that Ted Jones has lifted the pass to a plane of respectability at New Haven. It is not yet as good as Harvard's, which ranks with any in the entire East, but it is probably better than Princeton's. In this department, then, Yale is at least the equal of its rivals offensively and defensively.

All three can put on an excellent kicking game, but Yale has two good punters in Aldrich and O'Hearn. In the line, Harvard is admittedly weak. Centre had the better of the Crimson forwards, and Princeton has been handicapped by injuries, although the Tiger is improving rapidly. Yale's forwards have not really been tested, but the Blue line is unusually good in tackle play and is unusually steady on the left side of the line.

Harvard's backfield play has been puzzling in its inconsistency. There is a veritable wealth of fine material, but the Crimson's usual procedure has been to make a long march down the field and then falter near the goal line, lacking that indeterminate element, game punch. Yale has variety and versatility, uses its weapons nicely and launches its attack with speed and intelligence. Here the Blue is much better than it was last year. Princeton has not been a great scoring machine, but it has Lourie and Garrity in reserve, two aces that may change the complexion of the game at any time.

In general, Harvard will depend on its forward pass and reception game, which will be directed by the best of field generals—Charley Buell. Yale's defense, its sound training in fundamentals and its variety of attack are the chief Blue weapons. And Princeton will remain the great mystery, the unknown X, likely at any time to merge Lourie and Garrity into one of those unfathomable Tiger comebacks.

TURF

Another New York racing season has passed into history, leaving behind it a fairly good record of success, yet it was not a season that produced much to live in memory except the two-year-old colt Morvich, whose rise from a plater to a champion belongs to the strange tales of racing lore.

While the various racing associations did much to provide the very best of sport by increasing purses and adding some new stake events, the crop of horses was not up to the standard of some other years, notably that of 1920. It may be that the brilliant Man o' War contributed so much to the interest in racing that with his retirement the 1921 season seemed dull in comparison with the one in which he was the star. Yet it is true that the horses as a whole did not come up to the standard of 1920. There were fewer truly good horses than in other seasons.

The three-year-olds proved a disappointment from the very start. They beat one another so often that now, at the close of the season, there is no champion among them. Grey Lag would, perhaps, have had the honor if he had not gone wrong in midseason, as he seemed up to then to outclass the others of his age. But he returned to meet defeat and left the division without an outstanding horse.

The only sensational development was in the two-year-old division, in which Morvich has reigned supreme all season. This colt is undoubtedly a fine race horse, but it took him many weeks to impress the majority of racegoers. They kept expecting his defeat with every start, until the son of Runnymede convinced them he was a stake horse by his victories at Saratoga. His season is not yet over, for he is to race in Maryland, but up to the present he is the unquestioned leader of the juveniles.

The only complaint against the conduct of the sport in New York in 1921 was the apparently growing indifference of the Stewards toward racing. Age and business interests have caused some of the members of the governing body to neglect racing, with the result that severe criticism was aroused. In certain instances criticism [illegible] which could have been prevented by stricter vigilance on the part of the officials.

Racing is a sport that has to be carefully guarded at all times. The patrons and every one connected with the turf, except a very small clique of gamblers, want honest and clean racing. The Stewards want it also, but have been unable to give the game the attention it needs. Before another season opens it is to be hoped that competent, paid Stewards will be placed in the stands at the various meetings in New York. Such Stewards would have the confidence of the public and the sport would undoubtedly be less often the object of attack.

YACHTING

Although the city of Gloucester will not house this Winter the Fishermen's Cup, emblematic of the fishing vessel championship of the North Atlantic, probably few in the New England coast town deeply regret the capture of the trophy by the Canadian schooner Bluenose. Of course Gloucester would have been proud of the Elsie had she won, and proud of Captain Welch. But the battle will be all the keener next year because of the Dominion's victory. That the Yankees will not rest until the trophy is once more south of the border goes without saying.

It is to be regretted, however, that the two contenders this Autumn were not more nearly on a rating basis. Granted that seamanship on two competing craft be equally skilful, it is practically axiomatic, if the vessels are built along similar lines, that a good small boat will not be a match for a good large boat. Bluenose had 18 feet more of over all length than Elsie and spread [illegible] square feet of canvas.

[illegible] time allowance and prefer a sporting chance. But, while the Carpentier-Dempsey sequel undoubtedly makes a strong sporting appeal, it may be questioned whether the boat-for-boat [illegible] has not been stressed unduly. [illegible] as the fishermen's contest surely is, there are many who still cling to their opinion that the carefully computed time allowance, equalizing the fine fraction of rating difference, makes of the result a truer criterion of the sailing ability of contending craft. Weights are conceded in horse racing. Why, except for [illegible], make a match race of vessels of unequal capabilities?

The action of the American Power Boat Association in rescinding its amateur rule forbidding entry to association-sanctioned races of those who have sailed for cash prizes [illegible] on the escutcheon [illegible] [illegible] matter of fact [illegible] less important than it seems. Water motoring is more nearly analogous to land motoring than it is to competition in the various activities carried on under the sanction of the Amateur Athletic Union, and no one would think of excluding an automobile driver from a race because he had competed for a cash prize.

Nevertheless, the action of the American Power Boat Association is the shattering of a dream of its founders, and as such it will be regretted by many. The step was undoubtedly dictated by the clearly discernible trend of events in the powerboat world.

BASKETBALL

Basketball enthusiasts found many things of interest in the events of the last week. Chief of all was the annual interpretation meeting of the Joint Rules Committee at Columbia University on Friday evening. This was preceded by the flat statement of Dr. Joseph E. Raycroft of Princeton that he would vote in favor of a new foul penalty rule, and by an equally interesting letter which Ralph Morgan of the University of Pennsylvania, a defender of the present rule, sent to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Nothing happened at the meeting to change the present status, but the statements of Dr. Raycroft and Mr. Morgan, plus a comprehensive answer by another prominent basketball official to the latter's letter, served to revive an agitation that is very old and began with new vigor late last Winter. There has always been a certain amount of dissatisfaction with the present method of meting out punishment for violation of rules—that is, by allowing a player of the offended side the privilege of having a free shot at the basket, one point to be awarded if the shot is successful.

As far as the sentiment in basketball can be gauged, there exists a formidable body of officials, players and coaches who are determined that the present rule must go. Indications are, moreover, that Mr. Morgan and his friends are arguing in a losing cause. The only obstacle, seemingly, is to agree on a suitable substitute for the regulation now in force. Even Mr. Morgan seemed not too enthusiastic about the rule, defending it only because it seemed better to him than any of the other methods suggested.

It is true, of course, that basketball is one of the few games where a team must "win" the advantages that it deserves for an opponent's rule violation—that is, gain the advantage through an exhibition of some kind of skill. Soccer is an exception, and so are polo and water polo. But football, baseball, track, boxing, wrestling, swimming and a dozen other sports provide stated, automatic penalties for infringements of the rules.

Whether or not basketball, by virtue of peculiar conditions attending it, should be the exception to the general rule is a question that the solons of the game will have to decide, and in the near future. It has been claimed that it is necessary to keep an unusually tight check on fouling, else the court game would degenerate into a chaos of deliberately rough play. It has also been argued that dishonest officials, under a rule that allowed them to award or deduct points, might become a menace to the game. But it is difficult to understand why basketball, particularly that of the intercollegiate variety, should not be as free from dishonest officials as any other sport.

SQUASH TENNIS

With the conclusion of the series of matches for the benefit of the American Committee for Devastated France, the greatest outdoor tennis season in the history of the sport came to its end yesterday, and it is now the turn of the racquet-wielders in the indoor court games to come to the front and centre. The squash tennis season will open tomorrow afternoon, when the first team matches in the struggle for the Class B championship of the Metropolitan League will be held.

The race for Class B team honors is always an open one. It is designed to offer competition for the less experienced exponents of the sport, who have never obtained an official ranking from the National Association, and the teams change from year to year with the advance of some of the members into Class A rank as well as with the addition of new material. Moreover, this year's tournament is [illegible] interest and uncertainty through the strengthening of two of the weaker teams of last year and the entrance into the league of an unknown quantity in the shape of the Montclair Athletic Club. One of the most encouraging circumstances in connection with the game is the increasing number of new men of promise who are trying for places on the Class B teams.

The return to five-man teams in the Class A race is expected to prove a valuable move. It means that only players of the highest rank from each of the five clubs will contest, and the result should be a sharper, more spectacular competition. Seven-man teams in Class B, where the design is the building up of new material and the widening of the scope as well as the appeal of the game, are a good thing. In Class A, where only players of proved experience and long experience compete, the race gains [illegible] by restricting the size of the teams. The seven-man Class A teams of last season were unwieldy.

The ending of the outdoor tennis season coincidently with the starting of the indoor games calls renewed attention to the fact of how few men are adept at both. None of the highest ranking lawn tennis men plays squash or court tennis or racquets, nor do the leaders of the indoor games shine in the lawn event. [illegible] of the Columbia Club and Leonard Beekman of the Princeton Club, highly ranked in the outdoor sport, [illegible] devotees of squash, while [illegible] of the Crescent A. C., one of the best squash players in the country, might make a high class lawn tennis player if he took [illegible] seriously enough. Instances of the kind are few. Of course, the games are vastly different. Yet there is no inherent reason why a Tilden should not be able to adapt himself readily and quickly to the indoor games, or why a [illegible] or a Gould should not be highly proficient outdoors. The fact that there is always indoor tennis to be played and that application to one game might throw the player off his stroke in another is undoubtedly the answer.

MISS SHERWOOD TO SEEK BRITISH TITLE

First American Woman Golfer to Announce That She Will Compete Abroad.

Miss Rosamond Sherwood of St. George's Golf Club, Stony Brook, L. I., is the first American woman to announce that she will compete in the British ladies' championship next year. She is soon to start on a tour of the world, going first to San Francisco. She will visit Siam, China, Japan and Australia, arriving in England in time for the championship. [illegible] Miss Marion Hollins of Westbrook, holder of the national women's title, will again compete in the British event, in which she carried Miss Cecil Leitch, the British star, [illegible] this year. Miss Glenna Collett of Providence may also make the trip, but it is not expected that Miss Alexa Stirling will be a competitor.

As a result of her fine showing in tournament play during the season which has just ended, Miss Collett will be tendered a dinner by the Metacomet Club at Providence tonight, when the club members will present her with a diamond ring in recognition of her [illegible]. Many [illegible] who have seen Miss Collett play are convinced that within a short time she will occupy the same place in women's golf [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Jim Barnes, the Pelham star who holds the national championship which he won this year [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] will take on a trip to the [illegible] [illegible] Barnes will be accompanied by Jock Hutchison, the Glen View Scot, winner of the British open championship this year. They will play a number of exhibition matches and also engage some of the leading [illegible] of the coast in four-ball events. There has been a big demand for Long Jim and Jock, the former having begun his career in that section of the golf world. They will time their tour to bring them to the South in time for the North and South open at Pinehurst. From there it is expected that Barnes will make a trip to the other side to again compete in the British events. It is not certain as yet whether or not Jock will defend his title. [illegible] [illegible] be a contender.

After watching Miss Stirling in her match with Miss Leitch at the Pelham Country Club the other day, when the former national women's champion was defeated after apparently having the match won, Jim Barnes expressed the opinion that the Southern girl [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] since she left here for the British championship at the beginning of the year, and at the start of the national event at Hollywood this year she showed evidences of the strain of every-day competition.

HIS BEST DEFENSE.

In a speech at Greenpoint Mayor HYLAN recalled the time when "over in Manhattan they said I was a greenhorn from Greenpoint." He should welcome that description. It is the only possible apology for his nearly four years of maladministration.

Who but a greenhorn would force out of office a capable and upright Police Commissioner on his twenty-third day at his post and turn it over to an old-style Tammany police mandarin under whom crimes against person and property have increased monstrously, and burglars, highway robbers and murderers are about as safe as honest men? Who but a greenhorn would let favoritism, the laxest discipline and graft abound in the Police Department, or its officials to "speculate" securely in Wall Street by means of the thoughtful kindness of a Deputy Commissioner? Who but a greenhorn would tolerate a police administration that keeps criminals on the force, allotting to them no severer penalty than that visited upon the guilty wretch who fails to salaam before the sacred badge of a deputy? If vice and crime are "protected" exactly in the ancient way, who but a greenhorn would have failed to know and stop it?

Who but a greenhorn would have signed letters written by the egregious HETTRICK or have signed that limestone contract, defrauding the city out of some $900,000, which had to be repudiated after the Lockwood committee had made its inconvenient revelations? Who but a greenhorn would have let the Department of Public Markets be run according to the romantic principle of "honey for money"? Who but a greenhorn would have let the steamship companies and the city be robbed by the system of favoritism and subletting of piers in the Dock Department; let commerce be fined and the cost of living increased, while former police officials got rich in the process?

Who but a greenhorn would keep his promise to wipe out waste and extravagance by consenting to swollen and dishonest budgets which did not provide for the indispensable needs of the city and made it borrow money by means of special bond issues? Who but a greenhorn would believe that the people of New York are fools enough to be gulled by so transparent a trick, tried again this year?

Who but a greenhorn, after promising a seat to every child, would have thought the promise kept though the number of pupils on part time grew from 35,000 on Nov. 30, 1917, under MITCHEL, to 122,000 on Sept. 30, 1921, under HYLAN, and though 195,000 school children are now on double session and 600,000 in too large classes? Who but a greenhorn would have thought his seat-for-every-child program fulfilled by the building of the twelve schools planned by the Mitchel Administration and of no others? Who but a greenhorn would sit idly by while some schoolhouses are firetraps, their stairways inadequate in case of fire or smoke, and while charges of violations of the regulations of the Fire Department are on file against 488 of them—488 of 600?

Markets, docks, police, schools, finances are all demoralized. There is undeniable evidence of corruption in some departments, of mismanagement and ineffectiveness in almost all. The whole City Government is at sixes and sevens, uncoordinated, haphazard, futile. If Mr. HYLAN is a greenhorn, the people can't afford four years more of greenhornism, under whose cover the grossest extravagance is accompanied by the genuine old Tammany methods of contempt of the public interest, easy, loose, shambling mismanagement, favoritism and graft. New York City must have better and sufficient and safe schools, a competent, intelligent and upright Market Department, Dock Department, Police Department, a Board of Estimate that will make honest budgets, a Government of capacity, energy, enlightenment and public spirit. It must put out the greenhorn, the incompetents, the crooks, clean house and give itself an Administration that will administer, that will protect the public.

THE NORTH DAKOTA ELECTION.

The Non-Partisan League admits its defeat in the special election of last Friday. Governor FRAZIER is hoist by his own recall. Mr. TOWNLEY announces that he will submit to the findings of the courts and serve his term in jail for the crime of sedition. The whole experiment in State socialism has thus been stopped in North Dakota by the very voters whom it was to dazzle with prosperity and fill with millennial joys.

The signs in the political sky of North Dakota have for some time pointed to the result now established. As the Non-Partisan League was born, so it dies, of popular discontent. Its remedies have been judged by the people of the State to be worse than the disease. There is no getting away from such a verdict of the vicinage. Some dreamy "liberals" at a distance have mourned in advance over the possibility that this "most promising development of democratic government" in North Dakota might be arrested. But if the experiment has been pushed so far as to be demonstrated a flat failure, what more would you have? Must the long-suffering North Dakotans go on offering their farms and banks and elevators and State institutions of all sorts as if they were but so many rabbits for the Non-Partisan laboratory to play tricks with?

The plain truth is that years of broken promises and of floundering experimentation and self-seeking politics attempting to masquerade as philanthropy have worn out the patience of North Dakota. Step by step it has moved against the socialistic dabsters, and now seems bent on getting rid of the lot of them. Friday's was only a local election, but its echoes will be country-wide. Its chief moral is that if you try to ride an American State without regard to fundamental human motives and the settled teachings of experience, you will get thrown off.

THE OPPAU EXPLOSION AND THE CONFERENCE.

At the disarmament conference soon to meet in Washington the use of disabling and deadly gases in warfare will certainly be discussed. If the havoc wrought by these instrumentalities in the great war were not enough to bring up the question of prohibiting them in future, the ghastly explosion at the Badische Anilinfabrik Company's plant at Oppau in September would point to the duty of deliberation by the conference and a declaration of some kind to bind the nations participating. The desolation in Oppau and its neighborhood after the explosion was as appalling as anything seen after a battle at Verdun or in Flanders, observers have said. The plant had been blown up, the village was in ruins. Fifty miles away the shock was felt. In the forty-eight hours following the explosion 500 bodies were recovered, many of them mangled beyond recognition. Two thousand persons were injured, a considerable number fatally, and 300 were missing and unaccounted for. Of the injured a large percentage were found to be totally blind.

It is still a mystery how such a death-dealing and blasting convulsion could have occurred in a plant that was supposed to be manufacturing nitrates chiefly for agricultural uses. Scientists in Berlin speculating about the cause of the catastrophe surmised that "extreme heat, generated by some hitherto unknown gas explosive, must have led to the decomposition and subsequent explosion of a large quantity of ammonia and sulphate of saltpeter which forms the basis of artificial fertilizer." If the cause was a "hitherto unknown gas explosive," it might reasonably be suspected that experimenting of a secret nature was going on at the Oppau factory, which, it will be recalled, manufactured most of the chlorine and phosgene used by the Germans in their gas attacks during the war. The burden of proof should be upon the Badische Company to make out a case of confining its researches and energies to products of peaceful industry. It should rest under no suspicion of permitting experiments that would constitute a breach of Article 171 of the Treaty of Versailles: "The use of asphyxiating, poisonous or other gases and all analogous liquids, materials or devices being prohibited, their manufacture and importation are strictly forbidden in Germany."

When Professor FRITZ HABER, the inventor of the nitrogen processes which were used by the Badische Company, was interviewed after the Oppau disaster, he said that in the extraction of nitrogen from the air there could be no explosion; moreover, that the by-products produced have never been known to explode. He could give no explanation of what had happened at Oppau, but he said that an investigation might reveal new and terrible forces. Professor HABER indulged in reminiscence about the war. "While we were experimenting," he said, "with a liquid commonly called a gas because it became effective when vaporized, I advocated massed gas attacks to break the war's stalemate. If they had followed my advice and made a large-scale attack, instead of the experiment at Ypres, the Germans would have won." One of the last things that Professor HABER said was: "I do not believe that the Harding disarmament conference could exclude gas from future wars."

Nearly three years after the armistice the Oppau plant of odious memory is blown to pieces by some mysterious explosive and 3,000 persons are killed, injured or missing, and the scientists, including Professor HABER, do not know how it happened, can't understand it at all. It may never be explained to the satisfaction of honest scientific men; but when the fact is well known that there is an unrepentant and revengeful military party in Germany that looks to another war to restore her baleful power, and when the world believes that these dangerous reactionaries would welcome the discovery by their chemists of annihilating gases of enormous power, it is not inconceivable that the disaster at Oppau may have been due to covert experimenting by those chemists. Whether what Professor HABER calls the Harding disarmament conference will be able to "exclude gas from future wars" or not, it is to be assumed that the delegates will give the subject their profound consideration. Humanity and civilization could not afford a chemists' war.

THE ART CENTRE.

The Art Centre, at 65 and 67 East Fifty-sixth Street, which is to be formally opened tonight, is an initial effort to bring together several organizations of this city interested in the application of the arts of design to the everyday life of the people. This is its immediate object. But it is more than this. It is a most democratic and homely endeavor, in that, while its concrete purpose is to give exhibition rooms and offices to these organizations, its chief and ultimate object is the beautifying of the homes and work places of the great masses of the people and the stimulating of higher esthetic desires.

The object is to be achieved, of course, through the industries, since most of the utensils, furniture and adornments of the homes and work places come through the machines of industry, taught to follow designs in fabrics or metals, wood or paper, glass or other material. Artistic products can be made to issue from loom and press and lathe and the thousand other machines that minister to modern life as economically as ugly products, if only the designs which these machines are obliged to follow are made by artistic hands. The hand craft is not displaced by the machines, it is only multiplied by them.

What New York needs behind this place of exhibition—and it is a need which the Art Centre will help to meet—is provision for training in the industrial arts. The Chamber of Commerce of this city and the industries themselves, our modern guilds, are from the commercial and industrial side even now reaching out toward the artistic in their common effort to get such places of training started. The Art Centre will, with its artistic interests, extend its hand toward industries, and as a result we shall see before many years a great industrial art centre, of which this is but a precursor—a museum with exhibition halls, around which will be gathered the studios and lecture rooms and laboratories of scores of industries, where they who, in the language of the Son of Sirach, "maintain the fabric of the world," and who find "in the handiwork of their craft their prayer," may minister through their craft, which was once called a "mystery," to the general beautifying of the commonplace.

AUTOCRACY IN INDUSTRY.

When Mr. GOMPERS said that unionism had wrecked "the autocratic concept in industry," he meant that the masters' day was past and that the workers' day had come. The public remarks that the autocracy of the workers is as undesirable as the autocracy of the masters. That is the broadest interpretation of the result of the railway strike. The sanction of the Transportation act lies in the public's support of the assertion of the public interest. Having that, the act which Mr. GOMPERS so freely condemns has more teeth than the severest statute which could be enacted, if it lacked public support.

The act is strongest where Mr. GOMPERS thinks it weakest; that is, in its putting all the parties on their good behavior rather than in taking sides with either interest or putting compulsion on any. There is a total lack of partisanship in giving the balance of power to any one of the three parties which agrees with another. Mr. GOMPERS complains that this puts labor in a minority of three to six. Labor has only to agree either with the railways or the public to give labor a majority of six to three. Labor has only to conduct itself in such a manner as to bring the others to see the justice of its cause to make it unanimous.

Mr. GOMPERS says the Transportation act was passed "ostensibly to adjust but actually to coerce." The toothless law was intended to coerce by moral pressure whenever adjustment by process of reason failed. The time for negotiation between business associates is before they disagree. The weakness of Mr. GOMPERS's plea is illustrated by the strike, in which the brotherhoods sought to negotiate by coercion. The railways, without pressure by anybody, freely offered maintenance of the status quo for ninety days. Labor rejected the offer, and now will take what the law allows. The Labor Board is as much answerable to public opinion as the unions. It can no more submit to terrorism than it can terrorize, and it is under attempt at compulsion now. The remnant of the controversy is over working rules, and on that labor has taken the position of obstruction to what the Labor Board has proposed. The board has advised negotiation of substitutes for the Federal "agreement," which the board has found unjust and unreasonable. Labor's response to the invitation to negotiate is to ask the railways to sign on the dotted line below what it wants to retain of the agreement which the Labor Board has disapproved. Accordingly, the board is proceeding to revise the working rules itself and already has made revisions by which labor may possibly lose more than by the reduction of wages thus far.

On the points already decided labor will strike in vain. On the points not yet decided there is still time for negotiation, or for submission to adjustment under the moral compulsion of public support of the Labor Board. If labor hereafter complains—as it now rejoices—that the Labor Board is overworked, and that its cause cannot be heard, labor can provide a remedy by settling its cases out of court in the manner which the law intends, but which Mr. GOMPERS says it makes impossible. Mr. GOMPERS insists that the law is wrong in principle and that it must be repealed because it cannot be amended. The public thinks the law is right in principle and doubts that it needs amendment.

MAKING CHARITY EFFECTIVE.

Increasing attention is given to the irresponsible soliciting of alms in the streets and subways. It is often personal begging disguised as asking funds for some vague "cause"—crippled soldiers or "the babies." Magistrates have begun to deal severely with cases of this kind, often involving imposture or fraud, brought before them. But there are other evils, or defects, connected with public charities that can be brought into no court except that of enlightened public opinion. THE TIMES referred a few days ago to plans for co-ordinating charities in this city. They are excellent, but it seems also necessary to keep watch over the formation of new charitable organizations. In them, if they are not plainly needed, is to be found a fresh source of duplication and waste.

Humane persons are all the time proposing to found societies to undertake this or that work of charity. There is usually no reason to doubt their sincerity, but there often is to question their intelligence. Thus there was recently a movement, happily checked, to provide a "home" in New York for European orphans arriving here. It had to be pointed out to the promoters of this benevolence that our immigration laws would not permit dependent orphans to land in this country. Other projects are as hastily conceived.

Owing to their experience with such mushroom charitable growths, the directors of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities are proposing a sort of joint board for Greater New York, made up of representatives of the leading charities, to act as a kind of "charity control." Its specific object would be to have in hand such an accurate survey of existing needs and supplies that it could put a moral veto upon any scheme, however meritorious it might seem in itself, which meant only a dispersion of funds without any real gain to the community. The proposal is only one more indication of the growing feeling that every step should be taken to make public charities truly efficient.

WORK, FOOD AND COURAGE.

The three phases of the unemployment problem have been most succinctly set forth by Mr. JOSEPH LEE, President of Community Service. They are: First, the need of work; second, failing this, the need of food, clothes and shelter; and, third, the need of courage, sympathy and morale.

The conference in Washington naturally gave its attention chiefly to the first, the economic. And, of course, this must be kept first. Everything must be done that can be done to find that which will in itself bring the second and the third to most of those now out of work; that is, food, clothing, shelter and courage. But immediate full employment is seemingly not possible for all, whatever the varied reasons may be. So for many the second need becomes the most pressing.

There are institutions and associations whose main effort is to meet this second need when the first cannot be met. And the magnitude of the need in New York emphasizes the importance of bringing all these agencies into co-operation and into fuller service. Even then there will be need of the third, the need of courage on the part of the out-of-work and of the spirit of human kindness on the part of those who have employment.

As Mr. LEE has put it, there is an obligation to let the workers know that, while industry, for economic reasons, has no present need for them as workers, yet the community "does value them as fellow-citizens and human beings." This does not ignore the primary necessity of finding work; it simply means that along with the community effort to find employment there must be community effort to keep up the morale of men, many of whom are for the first time in their lives out of work and have been among the most steady and conscientious workers of the country.

The Community Service made "morale-building" its main object during the war, when it helped the soldiers use their leisure time in a way that would make them more serviceable as soldiers. In peace it has put this same object first, that of helping communities to provide all kinds of opportunities for the constructive use of leisure time. And its program ought to be a very helpful supplement to every Mayor's committee that is trying, first of all, to find jobs for those who have them not.

Mr. HOOVER has welcomed the co-operation of this Community Service organization in its own field of "morale-building and leisure-time work," and it is for every community to help this and other such organizations which are using all their sympathetic imagination and every ingenuity of kindness to give cheer to those who have more leisure than they know how to use to their own good.

MR. TUMULTY'S OWN STORY.

Remarkable public interest was shown in the first instalments of Mr. JOSEPH P. TUMULTY's narrative, published in the Sunday TIMES. Of peculiar interest and timeliness were his disclosure of the reasons why General WOOD and Colonel ROOSEVELT were not sent to France, and his recital of the facts about the relation of Mr. MCCOMBS to President WILSON.

Few newspaper offerings of this kind of contemporary history can have met with so instant and gratifying a response. With today's instalment the reader is taken back to New Jersey politics and the beginnings of Mr. WILSON's public career. The publication will go on daily in regular order, and will include much material both instructive and entertaining. Mr. TUMULTY's writing about events of which he was an observant witness, or in which he was an active participant, is already an assured success.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Another Medical Controversy. It is to the doctors themselves, of course, that the uninitiated outsider must leave the task of deciding whether Dr. JOHN B. DEAVER of Philadelphia was right or wrong when, addressing the eminent members and guests of the American College of Surgeons, he denounced with considerable vehemence the substitution of "full time professors" for practicing physicians as teachers of clinical subjects in medical schools. There can be no objection, however, if the layman, while expressing no opinion on the point at issue, ventures to note the interesting fact that Dr. DEAVER's speech exposed to public view for the first time another of those curiously bitter quarrels in which scientific men, contrary to common impression and frequent assertion, not infrequently indulge.

The savants, too, have their jealousies and their hostilities, much like ordinary mortals, and no more than ordinary mortals do they like changes in their established customs and ways of thinking. That is why the would-be innovators in medicine almost always have had a rough road to travel, and some of those now most honored heard themselves for years called the harshest of names in the vocabulary of their professional brethren.

As Dr. DEAVER admitted, the full time professor has come into vogue of late as a preferable alternative to the man "overloaded with private practice and neglecting his department, his teaching and his scientific work"—the man once familiar in all medical schools and still surviving in some of them. But the swing has been too far, according to Dr. DEAVER, and the teacher who does nothing else tends to lose all contact with the clinical realities and to become a man of theories and assumptions.

Even a layman can see that this is a possibility, and, with ills threatening from both directions, it is evident that the problem is one difficult of solution. But medicine is far from alone in presenting it. In all the arts, professions and industries the same question arises, for in them all it is more or less true that "he who can, does, while he who cannot, teaches."

Showering a Hero With Paper. New York City honored itself, relieved the charges of some of its enemies and relieved the apprehensions of some of its friends when it gave to Marshal FOCH on Friday a welcome so cordial, so appreciative of his quality as a man and of the magnitude of his services to the world.

There are strange people here to whom he, as a man of war, is obnoxious. There are others here who see in his achievements, not the victory of the Allies, but the defeat of Germany, and, of course, the Marshal received no cheers from either of those classes. But the absence of their voices from the general acclaim produced no measurable diminution of its volume, and the streets through which the Marshal passed showed no vacant spaces due to the staying at home of the pacifists and the pro-Germans, and those whose delight it is that ... now it can be told.

What the Marshal thinks about the habit, peculiar to New York, of expressing joy and enthusiasm by showering the street with bits of paper in enormous quantities—that, probably, we never shall know. He must think it a queer one, however, and deep in his heart he must wonder why we materialize our emotions in a way so [illegible], so lacking in taste and relevance, so destitute of ingenuity and beauty, so little worthy of anybody older and wiser than an office boy.

But the chances are that this foolish habit is now so firmly established here that it never can be changed. The office boys have acquired prescriptive rights, and they would revolt against denial of an ancient privilege.

Their Only Merit, Antiquity. If Peking wants what is described as a "modern tramway system," in consistency it should be glad to have its ancient walls torn down and removed. They never were of any value in defenses against weapons much more effective than arrows, and now they simply would supplement the missiles of a besieging foe with flying fragments of their own material. Yet it is reported that both the native and the foreign residents of the Chinese capital are protesting against granting the demand of the tramway company for permission to level the ancient walls.

Why they protest is not stated. Perhaps it is because the request comes from a corporation of this particular kind—a thing which, in spite of the recognized value of its public service, somehow manages to make itself disliked everywhere and usually has its desires, even when seemingly innocent, thwarted if there is any way to do it.

Judging from the pictures in the old geographies, the walls of Peking have no claims to beauty and their gates are little better than holes through them. They cannot help being, nowadays, more of a nuisance than of a utility, and the real estate men, if those gentry exist there, must hate them for restricting traffic and interfering with extensions.

No Argument Could Be Stronger. Down in Montevideo the friends of SACCO and VANZETTI have thrown a clear white light on the quality and extent of their intelligence by declaring a general strike as a protest against the conviction in this country of these two worthies. How they expect the strike to accomplish anything except the infliction of much inconvenience and loss on themselves and all their fellow-residents of the city is quite unimaginable—unimaginable, that is, by anybody not of like mind with the strikers.

Do they think that anybody up here will say, "Oh, well, of course we must let SACCO and VANZETTI go at once if there is to be a general strike in Montevideo until we do"? If they do think so, it is not quite so absurd as the assumption that United States courts can be coerced and the execution of their sentences stopped by sending bombs through the mails to American Ambassadors in foreign capitals, yet the difference is not very great.

But the Communist mind is queer; it doesn't work like other minds. Force and terrorism are the only instruments it knows, and it learns nothing from its innumerable failures in their use.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I notice in this morning's paper a letter from Mrs. John King Van Rensselaer concerning the position of the Dutch in the "Making of America." It seems unfortunate if, owing to a misunderstanding, one of the earliest and strongest influences in the "Making of America" should not be represented in this coming pageant.

There can be no doubt that from the time that Henry Hudson in 1609 took possession of the Great River of the Mountains in the name of the recently formed Dutch nation, that country controlled the land bordered by the Atlantic from Canada to Delaware.

From 1611 on the Dutch New Netherland Company sent traders to purchase furs from the natives and in 1623 came the ship New Netherland, under the command of Captain Cornelis Mey, with the first families of emigrants from the Netherlands.

In 1924 New York should celebrate the coming of its first emigrants—many of them Walloons from the south of the Netherlands. The present writer can lay claim to one of those early emigrants—Philippe du Trieux, who in 1624 took out a certificate from the Walloon church at Leyden for the West Inde—as America was then called.

A few of the influences of the early Dutch in the "Making of America" were:

1. Fair dealing with the Indians, which invited their confidence and usually obtained it.

2. The establishment of religious tolerance. Anne Hutchinson never found religious liberty till she came to New Netherland.

THE REVENANT.

All Hallows, I came back to see
If any one remembered me;
Up the long winding path I crept—
(If souls could weep, I would have wept!)—

Happy to see the home once more,
And, drifting through the great house door,
All seemed unchanged, at first—but when
I reached the living room—oh, then,

Nothing looked as it used to do!
The dear, familiar things I knew
Were gone—my desk, my cushioned chair—
Nothing that spoke of me—was there!

I saw my husband and his bride,
And hovered there close by his side,
Longing to touch his bonny head—
(That means so much, when one is dead)—

Lingering near his chair, until
He shivered—said the night was chill;
Ah, me, He had forgotten quite,
The dead return All Hallows night!

Up to the nursery I fled,
To lean with longing o'er each bed,
And watch my children as they slept—
(If souls could weep, how I had wept!)

They were too tiny to recall
Their mother—no one cared at all!
But, by my picture, just beneath—
Some one had placed a memory wreath!

And, lost in silent, fervent prayer
Old Nurse Marie was kneeling there,
Telling her wooden rosary,
Praying the holy saints for me!

Over her tear-wet face I bent
With love—'twas cockcrow! So I went
In haste across the dew-damp grass—
The old, blind setter heard me pass,

And whined with joy! Calling his name,
Back to the place of graves I came,
And, settling in my long green bed,
Felt strangely blessed and comforted.

Though but a little lonely ghost,
Forgot by him I loved the most,
Two faithful friends remembered me—
My old, blind dog and Nurse Marie!

RADIUM AND CANCER.

The Actual Experience of a Hospital in This City.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We are writing you in reference to alarming and disconcerting statements recently made in a public address by an eminent surgeon to the effect that the treatment of cancer by radium was a failure, and that the old remedy of cutting operations by the knife was still the only method of treatment giving hope of relief or cure in this disease. We have not had the opportunity of reading the full address referred to and have seen only the press reports published in the last few days.

As Directors of a large cancer hospital which uses radium extensively, we feel called upon to dissent from this conclusion.

The particular point at which any unwarranted condemnation of the use of radium in the treatment of cancer affects us and the public is found in the daily conduct of a Cancer Hospital and in our dealings with the sick who apply to us for aid. At the Memorial Hospital we have under treatment several thousand sufferers from cancer, many of whom are being treated with radium. These people read the papers, and when doubt is cast upon the efficacy of the method with which they are being treated they are apt to suffer grave mental disturbance, their proper treatment may be interfered with or even interrupted, and the best efforts of our physicians and surgeons are hampered. The attending staff of the Memorial Hospital, drawn from the faculty of Cornell University Medical College, unanimously disagrees with the conclusions of the above-mentioned surgeon.

The Memorial Hospital for the Treatment of Cancer and Allied Diseases, an institution supported by private contributions, treats thousands of patients yearly. For the past four months our records show treatments in the hospital as follows:

Ward patients	123	90	121	125
Free patients	50	67	47	75
Total adm. to hospital	236	197	229	243
Observation department:
Visits for examination and advice	1638	1641	1350	1632
Radium treatments given to ambulatory patients	135	176	135	182
Visits for examination and advice (not treated)	227	188	180	230
Patients radiographed	174	185	176	201

The hospital has in its charge $400,000 worth of radium—the largest quantity of radium, we understand, in any public hospital in the world—and the entire emanation from this is used every day in the year. We need double the quantity of radium now on hand. Our research laboratory is in the hands of eminent scientists who not only study the causes of cancer and investigate methods for its prevention and cure, but devise and constantly study means for the application of radium to cancerous growths. Mme. Curie recently spent an entire afternoon in this laboratory, and we have sent drawings showing the installation of our radium apparatus at the hospital to Mme. Curie in Paris, for her use in the installation of radium in her laboratory.

The Memorial Hospital treats cases of cancer in several ways—either by surgery only, by surgery and the application of radium or X-ray or both, by the application of radium or X-ray alone, or by the application of both radium and X-ray.

We are finding treatment by radium most effective in hundreds of cases, and while our medical staff cannot announce any cures until more time has elapsed it is significant that great numbers of cases, after several years, show no recurrence of the disease.

Our staff holds that each cancer case should be treated as a separate problem, separately studied not only by the physician but by the surgeon. In many cases, whether early or late, surgery seems to offer the only remedy; in other cases, other methods seem certainly more effective.

As representing an institution using in its treatment of cancer more radium than any other public institution in the world, we deprecate broad, general statements that from time to time appear in the public press to the effect that the use of radium is either unprofessional, improper, wholly ineffective, unwise or dangerous as a therapeutic agent.

The claim of our hospital is that in many cases radium offers the best probable relief in cancer; that in other cases its use is either ineffective or unwise; that by the proper use of radium under highly trained and expert medical advice only, either separately or in conjunction with other methods, the field for the relief for cancer sufferers is broadened and the outlook for the final conquest of the disease is brighter.

It is most unfortunate and ill advised to state that nothing can be looked for from radium in the future to be of any advantage in the treatment of cancer. The facts show too much already accomplished to warrant any such statement.

Radium in the hands of the untrained is one of the most dangerous forces in the world. It should be administered or handled only by experts especially trained in its use. That this subtle element, with its all potent strength and force and inexhaustible energies, may be finally controlled and used most effectively by scientists in the cure of cancer is the aim and hope of our hospital.

Sweeping and general denunciations, based on data not thoroughly investigated, are misleading to the public and serve no good purpose.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The editorial article referring to the Brooklyn Public Library is a well merited recognition of this great educational system which is being so carefully and wisely developed to supply the needs and to contribute to the happiness of the residents of the Borough of Brooklyn. This library development represents in a great measure the continued and intensive devotion of the best years of the lifetime of David A. Boody, President of the Brooklyn Public Library, and the consistently applied knowledge over a long term of years of the eminent chief librarian, Dr. Frank P. Hill, joined to which and undoubtedly making the success possible has been the unanimous co-operation of the members of the Board of Trustees. We feel that the neglect by the Boards of Estimate to provide properly the funds for the erection of the Central Building is, in fact, nothing less than [illegible] the people of the Borough of Brooklyn [illegible] matters vitally incidental to our welfare.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Where, oh where, were your argus-eyed reporters yesterday that they failed to see the most beautiful and auspicious tribute of welcome to the great soldier Foch?

At the moment he started up Broadway a magnificent rainbow (arc de ciel) broke out over his path, spanning Broadway from east to west. High up over the blizzard of confetti and flickering fountains of ticker tape nature built a dazzling triumphal arch for the passage of the great Marshal [illegible] after those long years of strife and terror.

SAYS RECORD SHOWS LINCOLN A BAPTIST

HIS SISTER BURIED THERE

LINCOLN CITY, Ind., Oct. 30.—Rolling back the mists of a century and offering the deerskin-bound records of Little Pigeon Baptist Church, near here, as the missing link of Abraham Lincoln's religion, Thomas D. McGregor, Assistant Attorney General of the State of Kentucky, has given to America substantial evidence that Abraham Lincoln was reared in the simple faith of the "hard-shelled" Baptist church.

Much of the mystery of Lincoln's religion and that of his parents, for over a half century a mooted question, has been evaporated by the findings of Mr. McGregor in the little old deerskin book of Little Pigeon Church.

There is no record of Abraham Lincoln's affiliation with any church denomination, but Mr. McGregor's story of Thomas Lincoln, moderator and pillar of the little Baptist church, proves conclusively, Mr. McGregor says, that the Lincoln family were Baptists.

"Parents of Abraham Lincoln deserve a fairer estimate than has been allotted them by most of the biographers of Lincoln," said Mr. McGregor, "and the story, as told by the records that are still to be found in the archives of Little Pigeon Church, near Lincoln City, Spencer County, Ind., of the devotion paid by the parents of Lincoln to Him who guided the lad of Pigeon Creek in the hour of the nation's travail, goes far to give to them their true estimate. In fact, they were well-to-do pioneers of their day, of sturdy ancestral stock; owned a farm, domestic animals, tools and a family Bible; neighborly, sacrificing and active church-going members.

Church Founded in 1816.

"Pigeon Creek Church was founded on June 8, 1816, the year that Thomas Lincoln and his family moved from Kentucky and settled on Little Pigeon Creek in what was then Warrick County, Indiana Territory. [illegible] the chief church in that territory, the meeting house [illegible] selected about [illegible] Lincoln's home, the church building to-day occupying practically the same place. When Lincoln's mother died she was buried between their home and the church, the burying ground [illegible] at that time started at the church; but when Lincoln's sister, Sarah, died, she [illegible] was buried in the church burying ground, where her grave is yet to be seen, marked by a rough stone.

"This church, with its continuous existence since 1816, the only two books containing its records and minutes [illegible] first covering the period from 1816 to 1840, [illegible] Abraham Lincoln's father, stepmother and sister were active members [illegible] Little Pigeon Creek, and this book, with its deerskin cover, the only [illegible], reveals in its crude historic way the religion of Lincoln's parents and their religious views.

"Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks were married by a Methodist minister of the name of Jesse Head, but soon afterward they were united with one of the churches of the Baptist Licking-Locust Association of Regular Baptist Churches in Kentucky, and when Nancy Lincoln died in Indiana, Abraham, by his own efforts, had their Kentucky pastor, Elder David Elkins, come to the wilderness home and preach his mother's funeral sermon.

"After Thomas Lincoln had married Sally Bush Johnston he went back to his Kentucky church and obtained a letter of fellowship, and as the minutes of June [illegible] show, joined by letter the Pigeon Creek church by letter [illegible] from that date until they moved to Illinois in 1830, their names appear frequently in the minutes and the church proceedings, Thomas being one of the pillars of the church, acting as moderator, on committees to investigate the conduct of brethren and sisters and as messenger to associations, bearing the letter of Pigeon Creek to her sister churches.

Record of Affiliation.

"June the 7, 1823.

"1st. Inquired for fellowship.

"5th. Received Brother John Wire by Relation and Sister Linkon and Thomas Carter by experience."

"Thomas Lincoln was not in such poor circumstances but that he always donated to the church, [illegible] Mr. McGregor [illegible] copy of an agreement [illegible] chimney [illegible] meeting house:

"We, [illegible] with another [illegible] next delivery [illegible] of December [illegible] corn [illegible] county [illegible] work [illegible] William Barkers in good merchantable produce."

"Signed with other names is: [illegible] Thomas Lincoln, white corn, manufactured, pound [illegible]." Mr. McGregor [illegible] Abraham Lincoln's [illegible] Sarah [illegible] in later years, never [illegible] faith, which, in after years, [illegible] Thomas Lincoln [illegible] church [illegible] church after they moved to Illinois in 1830."

MANY LAY CLAIM TO FINDING AMERICA

SCOTS CELEBRATE TONIGHT

The exposition of "America's Making" at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory has served to revive one of the oldest questions known to the United States: Who discovered America? So far there are seven nationalities that claim the honor, and new entries are expected every day.

The dispute on occasions has become rather lively, particularly as the Icelanders and the Norwegians claimed Leif Ericson. The Italians, of course, claim the distinction because of Columbus, as does Spain, because Columbus was backed by Ferdinand and Isabella. A discoverer not so well known is fastened on by the Welsh to prove that they are entitled to having first shown the way to the New World. He was known to tradition as Madoc Ap Owen Gwynedd.

Now come the Irish, who say that it was an Irish saint, St. Brendon, who found America 1,000 years before Columbus stood the egg on end. St. Brendon's Isle is one of the mythical islands about which legends grew in the early days, and it was shown on some of the maps which Columbus probably had with him on his voyage. The island was supposed to be somewhere near the West Indies, but it has been known a long time that no such island exists. But the Irish claim at their booth in the exposition that St. Brendon, who was a marine-monk, born in County Kerry in 484, set forth in a little craft and made his way to the New World. St. Brendon's Fairy Isle is one of the places where Kingsley's water babies played when they were good.

The Irish also say that an Irishman, William Eyres, of Galway, was a member of Columbus's crew, and was the first man to step ashore at San Salvador. The Poles also lay claim to America. The threshing out of these interesting points is arousing interest in the exposition.

Last night was given up to folk singing by groups of Ukranians, Carpatho-Russians, Swiss, Esthonians and members of the Hispanic group. All joined at first in singing "Hail Columbia." At the end, after each group had sung its folk songs, all sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Before the concert, the hundreds who visited the hall spent their time in examining the articles in the booths, many of which were rich treasures of art brought from abroad. The booths were designed by notable artists. R. G. Dunsmore, the English artist, was in charge of the decorations of the English booth; W. T. Benda, originator of the Benda masks, designed the Polish booth; Thomas Bull, who decorated the library of J. P. Morgan, and the State House of Rhode Island, planned the Norwegian booth; J. H. Freedlander, the architect who recently won the prize for a design for the new police booths in Fifth Avenue, designed the French booth.

Each racial group will have a night to itself. The Italians, on their night, will have the whole Metropolitan Orchestra and chorus to give operatic selections. The Carpatho-Russians will have a chorus of 300 miners, who will sing miners' songs. The French are arranging six tableaux. Pavlova will dance on Polish night. A ballet led by Louis Chalif will be given on Russian night. The Czechoslovaks will give a gymnastic drill.

Tonight is given over to the Scotch, and Harry Lauder's favorite piper, Angus Fraser, will be heard at the celebration. He has a band of twenty-two pipers, and a huge drum major, John Charles, whose shako is eight feet from the floor. Fraser will play some of the numbers which made him famous when he was touring with Sir Harry. Eight little girls, his pupils, will dance in Highland costume, and the United Scottish Select Choir will sing some of the old Scotch songs.

The Americans of English lineage will have their pageant tomorrow night.

DENBY COMMENDS SIX FOR HEROISM IN NAVY

He Honors Men Who Risked Their Own Lives to Rescue Comrades From Death.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Out of many cases of heroism recently reported to Secretary Denby from naval ships and stations all over the world he has selected six men for special commendation.

To Chief Machinist's Mate Jesse Edgar Melton of Edgewood, Texas, who risked his life in saving two shipmates, Secretary Denby has recommended award of the Gold Life-Saving Medal of the Treasury Department. Last May, while the destroyer Tarbell was in the Philippines, her motor sailing launch with eleven men on board was swamped in a choppy sea. Finding that two of them could not swim, Melton kept them afloat until picked up.

While the naval store ship Bridge was lying in Lynnhaven Roads last month one of her boats carried away its davits and threw three men into the water. Four men dived after them and were successful in rescuing their shipmates. For their heroism Secretary Denby has sent letters of commendation to Boatswain's Mate Coleman J. Griffin of South Boston, Fireman Francis A. Zeppernick of Salem, Ohio, and Seamen John D. O'Donnell of Wilmington, Del., and William A. Walker of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Philip Vance Voyles of Murphy, N. C., a seaman on the submarine K-2, has been commended for his rescue of Seaman Everett T. Harman, who fell overboard between two naval vessels tied alongside each other at Gloucester, Mass. Due to the closeness of the two vessels, Voyles's act was at the risk of his own life.

DENIES FAGNANI CHARGE.

Dr. Hall Asserts He Had Nothing to Do With Expulsion From Germany.

When the Rev. Dr. Charles P. Fagnani, professor in Union Theological Seminary here, was expelled from Germany, last month, he attributed the action of the German authorities to the activities of Dr. Thomas Hall, who was dropped from the Faculty of the seminary because of alleged pro-German utterances. Dr. Hall, who took up his residence in Germany in 1915, has written a letter to Secretary of State Hughes from Gottingen, disclaiming all connection with the action of the German Government. He writes:

"Newspaper clippings have been sent me showing that a former friend and colleague of mine, Dr. Fagnani, connects me with his unfortunate expulsion from Germany. Let me say in the most emphatic way I can that I have no personal acquaintance with any of the present authorities in Berlin and that the first news I had of the action taken was from an American newspaper correspondent. I was not consulted about the step and had no knowledge of Dr. Fagnani's movements and no connection with the expulsion.

"I have no connection with the Bavarian Government of any kind, and had I been asked where Dr. Fagnani was I would not have been able to answer. It seems to me to be a matter of regret that Dr. Fagnani should in his haste do me a grave injustice, and in the public prints to which I have no access expose me to unjust suspicion."

SOCIAL NOTES

New York.

Miss Abby Morrison is to give a Hallowe'en party this evening at her residence, 20 East Forty-ninth Street, for Mrs. DeLancey Nicoll.

Herbert Bayard Swope is to give a dinner tomorrow evening for the English novelist and author, H. G. Wells, at his home, 448 Riverside Drive.

Mrs. Francis Burrall Hoffman will give a tea at the Plaza tomorrow afternoon under the auspices of the Woman's National Foundation. Mrs. Oscar D. Munn, whose stage name is Margaret Lawrence, and Rafaelo Diaz of the Metropolitan Opera Company are among those who will attend it.

Mr. and Mrs. Jean St. Cyr, who had been at the Grand Canyon, Ariz., are now at the Ritz-Carlton, Atlantic City, and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Drexel Biddle have arrived at the Brighton.

Mr. and Mrs. John Richard Thorndike (Miss Caroline L. Wyeth) are occupying their new home, 8 Greenough Street, Brookline, Mass. Mrs. Thorndike is a daughter of Mrs. Stephen W. Williams and her marriage took place a few months ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Ledyard Stevens have returned from the North Woods and are occupying their new apartment at 29 East Eighty-third Street.

SAYS FOCH PRAYED DAILY.

Dr. Reisner Tells Hearers War Never Stopped Marshal's Devotions.

"Marshal Foch was never too busy to spend one full hour every day during the war in prayer, and he did not think the time wasted," said the Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner in his sermon last evening in Chelsea Methodist Church, 178th Street and Fort Washington Avenue.

"During the dark days of the war an American fighting with the Canadian troops wandered into a cathedral to sight-see and remained to worship," continued Dr. Reisner. "He noticed a distinguished military man enter, seek a secluded spot and kneel in prayer. With American curiosity our soldier watched the officer and saw that he remained on his knees for one hour. The American followed him out to find that it was Marshal Foch. The lad wrote this fact to his mother in Iowa.

"It was reported that when the days were darkest, Clemenceau, the Premier, who avowed no faith in God and cultivated no religious life, grew almost hopeless in an interview with Foch. The latter rose before Clemenceau with calm dignity and said, 'God lives and the enemy shall not prevail.' And in this spirit he went out to continue his campaign when the brain unlighted by the faith of God saw no hope ahead.

"Men like Foch, Beatty and Haig are not raised without religion, and no nation can endure without it. It will be well for the conference at Washington to remember that the Versailles Conference refused to recognize God by a public religious service of prayer such as Congress and every other public body observes. Without belief in such a God hope of disarmament will be futile."

AWAIT MINGO INJUNCTION.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 30.—The issuance tomorrow of Judge Anderson's injunction, directed toward stopping efforts of the United Mine Workers to organize the Williamson coal field in West Virginia was awaited today by union chiefs, coal operators and lawyers with anxiety and uncertainty.

A conference tonight of defense lawyers ended without announcement of their plans. Judge Anderson, who was considering the text of his order, was understood to contemplate, as a part of it, a statement that he regarded himself compelled to issue the order because of the refusal of President Lewis of the Miners' Union to stop efforts toward unionizing the West Virginia field.

The anxiety and uncertainty seemed due to Judge Anderson's expressed views of the evidence given at the hearing for a temporary injunction and his announced willingness to delay any orders if efforts toward unionizing the West Virginia field were stopped. The evidence was regarded by the Judge as establishing a conspiracy in violation of the Sherman Anti-trust act, and also as showing unlawful use of the "check off" system, by which operators deduct union dues from miners' wages.

AMERICAN ART TO BE SHOWN

Mrs. Harry P. Whitney Will Exhibit Her Collection of Paintings.

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney's studio will be open from Wednesday, Nov. 2, to Nov. 15, from 3 until 6 o'clock in the afternoon, so that Americans here can see the overseas exhibition of American paintings that she took abroad. This collection was first shown in the International Exhibition at Venice from May until November, 1920. During April of this year it was shown in London at the Grafton Galleries, and later was taken to the Georges Petit Galleries, Paris, where it remained till the end of July, and in August it was reshipped to America.

The exhibition was in no sense official, but expressed Mrs. Whitney's personal belief in American art and artists and her conviction that they should be better known abroad, and, realizing that a certain amount of pioneer work was necessary to that end, she planned and carried out the display of our art in Europe.

PREACHES IN OLD PULPIT.

Dr. Oakley Heard in Middletown Church He Built in 1871.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Oct. 30.—The Rev. Dr. John Greenleaf Oakley of Tuckahoe, for over fifty-eight years in the active ministry, delivered the sermon at St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church here today in the building which was erected under his direction in 1871. In that year he laid the first brick and the last one, and subscribed the first dollar toward the erection and the last one.

Twelve of the original members of the church were present in the large congregation which listened to Dr. Oakley today. All the Bishops of the Methodist Church in office at the time of his pastorate here have died, and not a President or ruler of any country in the world then in office is living today.

TO AID JEWISH YOUNG FOLK.

An organization known as the Young People's League of the United Synagogue of America was formed yesterday after an all-day convention in the Jewish Theological Seminary. Delegates from all parts of the country were present. The purpose of the league is to stimulate religious activities among the Jewish youth.

Addresses were made by the Rev. Dr. Eugene Kohn, Dr. Cyrus Adler, President of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America; the Rev. Dr. Elias L. Solomon, President of the United Synagogue of America, and Mrs. Charles I. Hoffman, head of the Women's League of the United Synagogue. Rabbi Israel Goldstein was elected President of the new organization, J. Priest of Providence, R. I., vice president, and Selma Hurewitz, treasurer.

HOOPER ADVOCATES TEETH IN RAIL LAW

CITES CHANGE IN WORDING

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—An amendment which would put teeth in the Transportation act sharp enough to prevent railroad strikes was advocated by Ben W. Hooper, Vice Chairman of the Railroad Labor Board, in a speech today before the men's class of the Morgan Park Baptist Church.

"In my judgment," he said, "Congress should not have perpetrated the irony of pulling the board's teeth and then telling it to go forth and bite those who interrupt traffic and strangle commerce. The Transportation act needs legislative dentistry.

"The Transportation act uses the word 'shall' up to a certain point, and there its mandatory provisions cease. It says that the carriers and employes 'shall' confer and negotiate for the settlement of their disputes, that if they do not agree they 'shall' take the matter before the Railroad Labor Board and that the board 'shall' decide the dispute.

"Here the law ceases to be imperative. The board may make its decision, but public opinion is the only force which can be applied toward enforcing it. There is no other court, tribunal or agency of the Government that does not possess the power to inflict a penalty for the violation of its decisions."

The Labor Board tomorrow will take up the matter of formulating new working rules and settling the 1,400 cases now pending on its docket.

Hearings in the majority of the cases affecting working conditions already have been held and all the board has to do now is to assemble the facts and give decisions.

The new grain and hay freight rates, granted a week ago by the Interstate Commerce Commission, will be put into effect on Tuesday. They provide for a cut in rates which, according to an estimate made by Clifford Thorne, transportation expert and general counsel for the American Farm Products Bureau, will save farmers approximately $40,000,000 annually.

The rate cuts amount to about one-half of the 35 per cent. increase allowed the roads in August, 1920. The reduction on rough grains, such as corn and oats, is 10 per cent. below the level fixed for wheat.

A member of the Labor Board estimated today that this new decrease in freight rates, taken together with the other decreases made either voluntarily by the roads or by the Interstate Commerce Commission, would mean a saving annually to shippers of approximately $80,000,000. By the July wage cut the railroads were given a saving in wages paid to employes of $400,000,000.

MARTINELLI IS WELCOMED.

Giovanni Martinelli, tenor of the Metropolitan, returning from opera in Buenos Aires, was warmly greeted at the Hippodrome yesterday in a matinee with Nina Morgan, soprano, and Vasa Prihoda, violin. He sang in spirited and manly style the airs from "L'Africaine," "La Gioconda" and "Aida."

John McCormack for the second time in two weeks sang to a capacity house of 6,000 at the Hippodrome last night, presenting a new program of songs and airs by Handel, Vaughn Williams, J. F. Larchet, Edwin Schneider and H. O. Osgood.

Solomon Golub, whose poems as well as songs have won wide hearing, sang at the Town Hall last evening his remarkable settings of both Jewish classics and his own texts, assisted by a chorus known as The Harp of the Bronx.

SEEKS AID FOR EXHIBITION.

French Envoy Here to Build Up American Section of War Museum.

Maurice Bourgeois, Chief of the British and American Section of the Bibliotheque et Musée de la Guerre, announced yesterday that he officially represented the French Minister of Public Instruction in an effort to interest the American Government and people in the American Section of the National French Library and Museum of the War.

"It is the intention of the Director to make the American section an appropriate and comprehensive memorial to America's decisive participation in the great war," he said. "I appeal to all Americans who fought, as well as to all American families personally associated with the war, to do their utmost to make the section a success."

DAMROSCH PLAYS WAGNER.

Haltovitch and Kerekjarto, Violinists, Also Heard.

Walter Damrosch spoke and played for two hours to a crowded Aeolian matinee on "The Valkyrie," to be revived at the Metropolitan this season. Long as the lecture was, his hearers' attention was as unflagging as his own.

Abraham Haltovitch, the blind Russian violinist, gave a matinee in the Town Hall yesterday, playing with rapt and appealing beauty the D minor sonata of Brahms, Paganini's concerto in D major and the "Hebrew Melody" of Achron.

Duci de Kerekjarto, the Hungarian violinist, appeared last evening at the Lexington, with L. J. B. Gluzek, 'cello, and Gaspar Szanto, tenor, in a program ranging from Paganini to "Pagliacci."

HUNT FRED STONE'S DOG.

More than a hundred friends and neighbors of Fred Stone, the actor, took part in a hunt yesterday in Forest Hills, hoping to get some trace of "Jack," the Airedale dog belonging to Dorothy Stone, his daughter. No trace of the animal could be found. It had been missing from the Stone home since last Wednesday.

The comedian is in Chicago, and has wired that no expense be spared to recover the dog, which is 12 years old and has been his daughter's companion all that time. Mrs. Stone has offered a reward for "Jack's" return.

GET MOUSE AS BIG AS BEE.

WOODLAKE, Neb., Oct. 30.—Members of the Field Museum of Natural History expedition of Chicago, who have been working in the lake region south of Woodlake, have captured a specimen of the smallest mammal living on the Western Hemisphere and the second smallest mammal known to exist in the world.

The little fellow, known as the shrew, is of the mouse family and is about as large as a bumble bee. The expedition has completed its work and is returning to Chicago with a complete collection of the rodents of the great plains, as well as many specimens of snakes, hawks, owls and birds.

MUSIC

Efrem Zimbalist's Violin Recital.

The high esteem in which Mr. Efrem Zimbalist is held by New York lovers of violin playing was shown yesterday, as it has so often been shown before, by the crowded house that greeted him at his recital in Carnegie Hall. The hall was filled and there was much appreciation of his playing and much enthusiasm for it, eminently deserved. Mr. Zimbalist played with all the beauty and vibrant warmth of tone, the breadth of style, repose and unobtrusive, matter-of-course command of the transcendent technical difficulties of his instrument that are remembered as characteristic of his playing.

The principal number on his program was Ernest Schelling's violin concerto, an interesting contribution to the literature of American music, worthy of a rehearing. It was first played in New York in January, 1917, by Fritz Kreisler, to whom it is dedicated. He played it with the Philadelphia Orchestra, and it was a pity that the orchestral accompaniment had to be represented yesterday by a piano transcription, for the orchestral color is quite as important in this as it is in most concertos. It is the latest product of a talent for composition that has often been admired for its freshness and originality. It was written for Mr. Kreisler, who offered the composer such advice as to some of the technical construction as great violinists have before offered to composers who were writing concertos, as David to Mendelssohn, Joachim to Brahms and Bruch.

The three movements show a spontaneous inventiveness, a true originality, which, while it may not sound great depths and does not undertake to, is manifested in a certain joyousness and elasticity that do not often find a place for great seriousness. The themes are clear in outline, rhythmically incisive, imaginatively treated in development. The first movement is riotously brilliant; the second has poetic beauty, an intimate fervor; in the last there is the suggestion of a dance tune in the first theme, of a Spanish rhapsody in the second. The whole pulses with vitality and movement and there is a true sense of climax. The solo player is kept almost incessantly at work, and great demands are made upon his technical resources and his brilliancy of style.

Mr. Zimbalist played the concerto with immense verve and gusto, quite in the spirit it demands, with a glittering sweep and power. And the accompaniment, which presents extraordinary difficulties in the piano transcription, was superbly played by Mr. Harry Kaufman. The piece and Mr. Zimbalist's performance of it were received with great enthusiasm, and he was several times recalled.

The program began with Christian Sinding's suite in A minor, the composer of which is now in this country; a suite whose three movements are obviously intended to suggest the style of the Old Régime in music, and which do so successfully, not without an admixture of modern spirit. Mr. Zimbalist did much for its interest in the breadth and dignity of his playing of the last two movements and the persevering volubility of the first "perpetuum mobile." Saint-Saëns's "Havanaise" is a worthy piece, but never quite so interesting as it is expected to be. The "Caprice," arranged by Ysaye, is elaborately difficult, hardly so effective as to justify its difficulties. Mr. Zimbalist closed with his own fantasie on "Le Coq d'Or," in which clever use is made of the most outstanding melodic material of the fascinating work.

Mme. Gadski's Wagner Concert.

After an enforced retirement of nearly five years, Mme. Johanna Gadski reappeared on the concert stage last evening in Carnegie Hall, in a concert of her own, in which she had the assistance of the Philharmonic Orchestra under Mr. Stransky's direction. The hall was filled with a very large audience of her admirers primed with enthusiasm, which they let loose on every occasion in salvos of applause and shouts of welcome before she had sung, on her appearance, and after every number.

The program was made up entirely of Wagnerian selections, some of which, by no train of reasoning could be made to seem appropriate as detached numbers in a concert hall, as the passage sung by Sieglinde as the last half of the duet with Siegmund in the first act of "The Valkyrie," or the segment from Isolde's part in the first act of "Tristan," called on the program "Isolde's Narrative." With these were other fragments that have often been made to stand by themselves, as Elisabeth's air, "Dich theure Halle," from "Tannhäuser," and the final scene from "Tristan," joined to the prelude. The orchestra played the prelude to "The Mastersingers," the "Good Friday Spell" from "Parsifal" and the introduction to the third act of "Tristan," with the shepherd's melody on the English horn that immediately follows it.

Mme. Gadski appeared in about as good vocal condition as she had recently been before her retirement. There was much voice still serviceable and capable of powerful effects, in high tones especially, and often of acceptable quality when they were not forced; though this quality was hardly maintained throughout the concert to the end. Tones in both the higher and lower ranges, that require mezzo voce or piano were noticeably less effective and less at the singer's command. Occasionally in some of her higher tones there was a little difficulty with the pitch. And there was the shortness of breath that necessitated the frequent breaking of the phrase—particularly noticeable in the sustained air of Elsa's narrative of her dream, from "Lohengrin," where the singer is required to sing, often softly, and not to declaim.

Mme. Gadski's more judicious listeners may well have been, on the whole, pleasurably surprised at the results she was able to offer at this concert, and convinced of the good that a five years' rest, even an enforced one, may do to a singer's voice, in preventing inroads that might have come from constant use.

The audience confidently expected something after the last number on the program and were rewarded for a very short wait, when Mme. Gadski came out and found the orchestra and Mr. Stransky all ready to play the accompaniment to a few "Ho-jo-to-hos," which she accordingly delivered; and then she returned and delivered a few more. This, perhaps, marks the acme of the bad taste that can be committed in a "Wagner concert." It should be said to Mme. Gadski's credit that she did not originate it, but only followed a bad example set by Mme. Nordica.

Then, after more minutes of applause, the audience retired.

GERMAN SINGERS HEARD.

Ten singers from the Stuttgart Opera, here on a pioneer tour under the name of the Schwaebischen Liedergruppe and the leadership of Karl Kromer, gave their first concert before a full house of their former countrymen at the Lexington Theatre yesterday afternoon. A big American flag was unfurled over the stage while "The Star Spangled Banner" was first played by an assisting orchestra, followed by choruses in German by 150 men of the United Singers of New York.

Theodore W. Henninger, President of the local body, made an address of welcome to the visitors in their own tongue, praising the Suabian songs and closing with the sentiment, "Gott erhalte Deutschland." The guests gave a number of German part-songs, chiefly by one composer, Silcher, and Mr. Kromer directed two airs of his own. The party was announced to reappear next Sunday with the Mozart Verein at Yorkville Casino.

Married Sixty Years.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Mason of 1,107 Forest Avenue, Bronx, celebrated their diamond wedding anniversary yesterday at the Hotel Astor with a reception to some 250 relatives and friends. Nine children and nine grandchildren were present. Mr. Mason is 79, his wife 77.

IDLE WOMEN INCREASING.

Y. W. C. A. Reports 10 Per Cent. More Than at This Time in 1920.

According to a report of three employment bureaus operated by the Young Women's Christian Association, unemployment among women in New York is increasing, the report showing that about 10 per cent. more women are out of work than were unemployed at this time last year.

"The condition is serious," said Miss Dorothy P. Wells, director of the employment department of the Central Branch, Y. W. C. A., yesterday, where 8,000 girls applied last month for work. "There has been a great increase in our social service cases. Last Winter and Spring we were surprised that there were not more calls from girls in distress from poverty. They must have had some resources to carry them over the crisis. Now unemployment is beginning to be seriously felt. Unless conditions change there will be many cases of actual want this Winter."

Mrs. Albert Hutchinson of 158 West Fifty-ninth Street is at the head of a committee which will make special efforts to find work for women.

Candidate Says Wall Street Will Control Police Power Through Burns.

Three municipal candidates of the Farmer-Labor Party, Jerome T. De Hunt for Mayor, Ben Howe for Controller, and Abraham Lefkowitz for Aldermanic President, addressed the weekly forum of the Community Church, Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, last evening. Mr. Howe said:

"Harding takes John Pierpont Morgan's private detective force, Burns, and makes him head of the Secret Service, so now property will control the police power from Wall Street."

Mr. De Hunt, who is President of the New York District Council of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers and Station Employes, declared that the railway workers were "heartbroken" because the sixteen national leaders were afraid to follow Debs to Atlanta, referring to the outcome of the threatened railroad strike.

TEXAS STRIKERS STILL OUT.

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 30.—Outwardly the strike situation on the International & Great Northern Railroad remained unchanged tonight. The 600 trainmen who went on strike on Saturday, Oct. 22, still were out and no adjustment leading to their return to work had been made.

Their strike was authorized some time previous to, and put into effect after, the recent permission for a national strike by the Big Five Brotherhoods. The I. & G. N. strike was unaffected by recall of the general strike order.

Tomorrow several union officials will confer here and the strikers are understood to regard as probable a quick adjustment restoring all their former rights.

E. G. Goforth, general manager of the railroad, refused to discuss the conference tomorrow and said the railroad now is taking all the freight offered.

SEARCH FOR TRAIN WRECKER

LAPEER, Mich., Oct. 30.—Railroad and county authorities today continued their efforts to connect the wrecking of a Grand Trunk passenger train near here Friday night, with similar attempts at Battle Creek, Pontiac and Port Huron recently.

Henry Gates, 59 years old, of Huntington, Ky., was still detained for examination. An effort is being made to identify him as a man seen loitering near the scene of the wreck just before a rail was removed derailing the Grand Trunk train and injuring three persons. Clyde Smith, Russell Allen and Harry Dendo, who also had been held for examination, were released.

ST. PAUL'S ANNIVERSARY.

Parishoners and old friends of St. Paul's Episcopal Chapel, Trinity Parish, participated yesterday morning in the 155th anniversary services of the chapel, which is the oldest public building in this city, built in 1766 and practically unimpaired. In the chancel with the Rev. Dr. Joseph P. McComas, the vicar, was the Rev. Dr. William Montague Geer, vicar-emeritus and the active vicar for more than thirty years.

The chapel was reopened a few weeks ago after having been closed all Summer for repairs on the interior, the longest interval the chapel had been closed in twenty-five years. The chapel's newest venture is a 15-cent luncheon for office boys, bootblacks, "newsies" and other boys working in the financial district.

HENRY B. M. WATSON DIES.

Author of "Princess Xenia" and Other Novels Passes Away in London

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Henry Brereton Morriott Watson, the author, died today. He was born in Melbourne, Australia, in 1863.

Since 1885 Marriott Watson had been a Londoner. In 1887 he entered journalism and was at different times an assistant editor of Black and White, of The Pall Mall Gazette, and of The National Observer during the editorship of W. E. Henley. He was a most prolific author of novels, more than a score bearing his name on the title page. Among them may be noted "The Princess Xenia," "The Affair on the Island" and "The King's Highway." With Sir James M. Barrie he wrote the play "Richard Savage."

William Gormley, Sing Sing Keeper.

OSSINING, N. Y., Oct. 30.—William Gormley, keeper at Sing Sing Prison for twenty-seven years, died at his home here today. Gormley was nearly killed eight years ago while attempting to frustrate a wholesale jail delivery, headed by "Big Bill" Green. He was on duty at the dock when the gang bore down on him. Before he could use his gun they wrenched it from him and beat him into insensibility with it. Gormley's action, however, had delayed the getaway of the convicts and they were all recaptured. He was 67 years of age.

Warren H. Loss Funeral.

Funeral services for Warren H. Loss, prominent Rochester contractor, who died Saturday in St. Mary's Hospital, Passaic, N. J., will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Grace Protestant Episcopal Church in Rutherford, N. J. Burial will be in Ridgelawn Cemetery, Passaic. The death of Mr. Loss, who was the father of Lewis M. Loss of 25 Ascension Street, Passaic Park, N. J., followed a major operation performed at the hospital on Friday, Oct. 4. Mr. Loss was 66 years old.

To Bury Ex-King Ludwig in Munich

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—The body of former King Ludwig of Bavaria, who died at Sarvar Castle, Hungary, is being moved to Munich, wheer the burial will be held in the Church of Our Lady at noon on Saturday, Nov. 5. Funeral services for the former Queen of Bavaria will be held at the same time.

Obituary Notes.

PHILIP WISSIG, Democratic member of the Assembly from 1888 to 1892, died Friday night in Lincoln Hospital, aged 73. He was at one time influential in east side politics. Recently he had lived at 770 Home Street, the Bronx.

UTICA, N. Y., Oct. 30.—John V. Bacot, organizer of the Consolidated Water Company of Utica, of the West Canada Water Company, and developer of the East Jersey Water Company, which supplies about forty cities and villages in Northern Jersey, died suddenly at High Woods in Whitestown, where his Summer home is situated, late this afternoon.

Mr. Bacot was out walking with Mrs. Bacot and was stricken with heart disease while laughing and talking. He was born in Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 31, 1857, and for a long time was in the law firm of Bacot & Record of New York City. He was associated with Garret A. Hobart, late Vice President of the United States. Mr. Bacot is survived by his wife, a son, John V. Bacot Jr., and a daughter, Mrs. Howard A. Darrin of New York.

BOSTON, Oct. 30.—Hermann A. Wagner, who was relieved as Assistant District Attorney of Middlesex County less than four weeks ago after the removal of Nathan A. Tufts as District Attorney on charges of improper conduct of his office, died at a local hospital last night of Bright's disease.

Mr. Tufts said today that although Mr. Wagner had been in poor health since last Summer he believed his end had been hastened by the ordeal of the trial before the Supreme Court, which resulted in Tufts's removal.

Mr. Wagner was born in Washington, D. C., forty-one years ago. He had been Assistant District Attorney of Middlesex County since 1913.

Christopher C. Shriver.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 30.—Christopher C. Shriver, veteran financier and President of the Metropolitan Savings Bank, died today, aged 81 years. He had been connected with the Metropolitan bank since its foundation in 1867, and had been its head since 1888. He was one of the first bank officers to introduce certified public accountancy. Mr. Shriver enlisted in the Confederate Army in 1861, and served during the entire war. The late Cardinal Gibbons was a close friend of the family.

Every hour saved in turnover adds power to your capital

How a great commercial Bank is being used by its depositors to eliminate costly delays in business transactions

A MERCHANT is in urgent need of a carload of produce, five days overdue. Routine methods have failed to bring relief. Then the Bill-of-Lading Department of his bank sets in motion an expert service which locates his merchandise in a few hours and safeguards his margin of profit.

An exporter is hesitating to accept an order where the amount involved is large and the element of time important. The Foreign Department of his bank cables its special representative in a European capital and removes all cause for hesitation or delay by securing a foreign government's supervision of the contract.

A western bank selects as its New York correspondent a bank through the highly organized services of which eighteen hours can be saved in the handling of its securities and in the release of its capital.

Incidents like these are becoming more and more frequent. They point to the fact that business men everywhere are awakening to the importance of a more rapid turnover of capital.

The Irving has built up a special Bill-of-Lading Department. This Department is organized to trace railroad shipments, to locate freight cars on arrival at terminals, to eliminate every sort of delay in releasing capital

Every morning 40 messengers leave the Main Office of the Irving in the Woolworth Building—covering in person every important center in Greater New York.

By direct private wires to important cities and through well established connections with banks in all parts of the country, the Irving secures for its depositors maximum speed in handling all banking transactions.

Through correspondents in more than 5000 foreign cities, and through its special representatives in leading foreign markets, the Irving has built up a specialized service in collections and transfer of funds, and in obtaining credit information abroad. Direct cable connections are maintained with every trade center of the world.

All the special services of the Irving as well as every other banking service—business and personal—can be tapped at each of the Irving's nine District Offices in the chief business centers of New York. (See complete list below).

A visit to the nearest Office and a talk with the Officers in charge will suggest how these facilities can serve you in your business and personal affairs.

FRANCE AT PEACE WITH KEMAL PASHA

FRENCH REAP ADVANTAGES

WON'T ASK ALLIED SANCTION

Foreign Office Holds That the Agreement Concerns Only France and Turkey.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 30.—An important step in the liquidation of Asia Minor affairs was marked today when the French Government announced its ratification of the agreement with the Turkish Nationalist Government at Angora, declaring peace between the two governments and providing for economic co-operation.

By the terms of the agreement France withdraws from Cilicia, the boundary between Turkey and Syria, held by France, is drawn, and France receives various economic advantages, notable among which is a concession for the operation of the Bagdad railroad from the Mediterranean to the Tigres River and a ninety-nine year lease on the iron, chrome and silver mines of the district of the valley of Harchite, lying in the northern part of Anatolia, near the shores of the Black Sea. The mining concession is not referred to in the body of the official agreement, but in a separate letter.

This agreement, the French Government points out, does not need the approval of the allied powers, since it concerns only affairs between Turkey and France.

It is not difficult to see the political importance of the agreement. Not only is France now on good terms with Mustapha Kemal, and will not help the Greeks in their war on him, but it is very likely that the weight of French diplomatic influence will be cast against the Greeks. It also implies that Frnce recognizes the Angora Government as the ruling power in Turkey, and not the Constantinople Government, which is still treated by England as officially representing that country.

The agreement was negotiated for the French by Henry Franklin-Bouillon, who conferred at Angora with Youssouf Kemal Bey, Foreign Minister for Mustapha Kemal. It was ratified by the National Assembly at Angora before M. Franklin-Bouillon prought it to Paris, a few days ago. Formal approval of it was the last official act of Premier Briand before his sailing for America.

The covering letter from Kemal Pasha to the French Government says that the Angora Government hopes the agreement will mean a lasting peace between the two nations. Then comes this interesting paragraph:

"The Government and great Assembly, being desirous of furthering the development of material interests between the two countries, instructs me to declare that it is disposed to accord concessions of mines of iron, chrome and silver in the valley of Harchite for ninety-nine years to a French group which must proceed within five years to the exploitation of this concession by a company formed according to the Turkish laws and with the participation of Turkish capital up to 50 per cent. In addition, the Turkish Government is ready to examine with the greatest good will other requests which may be made by French groups relative to concessions in mines, railroads, ports and rivers on condition that such requests conform to the interests of both France and Turkey."

The letter also expresses a desire to have French specialists in the Turkish technical schools.

Article I. says: "The high contracting parties declare that from the signing of this agreement the state of war shall cease between them. The armies, civil authorities and populations shall be immediately notified."

Article II. provides for the exchange of prisoners.

Article III. provides that within two months Turkish troops shall withdraw to the north and the French troops to the south of the line fixed by Article VIII.

Article V. declares that amnesty shall be granted by the authorities of both Governments to political offenders.

Article VI. provides that Turkey shall sign an agreement for the protection of minorities along the same lines as those laid down in the European treaties.

Article VIII. fixes the line between Turkey and Syria. It runs from a point on the Bay of Alexandretta, near Bayas, to the railroad station of Meidan, thence southeast, leaving the region of Marsova in Syria and Killis in Turkey. The line rejoins the railroad at Tcheban Bey, and follows the railroad to Nisibin, and thence northeast to Jezireh on the Tigris. The railroad right of way remains legally Turkish.

Article IX. says that the tomb of Suleiman Chah, the grandfather of the Sultan, Othman, the founder of the Ottoman dynasty, located at Djaberkalessi, shall remain Turkish.

Article X. says:

"The Government and Great Assembly of Turkey accepts the transfer of the concession of the section of the Bagdad Railroad between Bozabti and Nisibin, as well as the branch lines in the province of Adana, to the French group designated by the French Government, with all the rights, privileges and advantages attached to such concessions, in particular as concerns the exploitation of traffic."

The article then goes on to say that each party shall have the right to use the railroad for the transportation of troops and adds: "On this section of the railroad no differential tariff may be established in principle. However, the two Governments reserve the right to study such derogation of this rule as may become necessary."

Article XII. provides a water supply for the City of Aleppo.

It will be recalled that France holds a mandate over Syria under the League of Nations. The boundaries between Turkey and Syria were laid down in the Treaty of Sévres, which is now in the discard. The French have occupied Cilicia since the end of the war, claiming it as a zone of influence. There has been off-and-on fightings between the French and Turks ever since, and several months ago France decided that Cilicia was not worth the price she was paying for it. The evacuation of his territory will liberate about 15,000 French troops.

It may be forecast that this agreement will receive some criticism in British quarters. On the assumption that the allied interests in Turkey were pooled, this would be logical; but perhaps the French have decided that England has not lived up to all the rules of the pooled interests, especially in Constantinople, which the French now call a British city. Anyhow, the French say their treaty needs no allied approval to be valid.

It is interesting to note that the French hold on the Bagdad railroad from the Tigris to the Mediterranean means the control of the outlet for the northern part of the Kingdom of Irak, ruled by Emir Feisal, who is regarded by the French as the tool of the British Foreign Office.

9 Killed Hunting in State In First Month of Season

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 30.—Nine persons have been killed and nine wounded as the result of hunting accidents in the State, although the hunting season is less than a month old, the Conservation Commission made known tonight.

Most of the accidents were said to have been due to carelessness, eight being the result of guns accidentally discharged. One hunter was killed while at target practice upon his return from an unsuccessful deer hunt.

Two hunters were shot by being mistaken for partridges, and another when being taken for a deer.

RISEN ON WAR RUINS, FRENCH TOWN IS GAY

PARIS, Oct. 30.—With mass in the morning in their new church, with a banquet for every man, woman and child in their new hall, with a procession through every street and past every house and, lastly, with dancing and merrymaking, the 552 inhabitants of Ancerviller le Neuf today celebrated the complete restoration of their village.

Ancerviller le Neuf lies in the Department of Meurthe et Moselle, not far from Nancy, and before the war it used to be known simply as Ancerviller. But today was added le Neuf—the new—to perpetuate the memory of the fact that the village has arisen Phoenix-like from the ashes.

On Armistice Day there certainly wasn't much of Ancerviller left. Some house ends and some solitary chimneys were all that had survived the shelling and bombing. Five hundred and twenty-eight inhabitants there had been in 1914, but not one was left in a residence. Some had been evacuated by the Germans, others had taken refuge behind the French lines, all the men were in the army and the village was literally scattered far and wide across Europe.

But in their exile the love of their village remained with these people. They dreamed of the days to come, while their homes were being knocked into brickbats and sawdust by the shells of both armies.

When the armistice came they began to come home. For none of them was there anything like home to go to, but in the middle of Winter they formed their plans and by February, 1919, under the leadership of Abbé Fiel, their parish priest, they formed themselves into a co-operative society for the rebuilding of their homes.

Slowly at first and in a rough way they began to secure for themselves places to live in. Later, with stone, brick and timber more solid and comfortable houses were built. As far as possible each householder sought to rebuild on the lines of the old home, but all also tried to improve their property.

Except for overnment grants to which they were entitled, they asked no aid, and as they worked at the rebuilding they recultivated their farms and began retrieving their ruined fortunes.

Last week saw the end of their efforts. Every house is rebuilt and furnished, the streets are remade and Ancerviller le Neuf is twice as trim as the Ancerviller of old.

It is the first village along the old front line that has rebuilt itself house for house by its own efforts, and it was with a feeling of just pride and merit at its celebration today that it accepted the decoration of the Croix de Guerre.

LANDRU MURDER TRIAL WILL BEGIN ON NOV. 7

Effort to Delay It by Illness Complaint Results in Better Prison Fare for Him.

PARIS, Oct. 30.—Landru, the "bluebeard" of Gambais Villa, will be tried in the Versailles Assizes on Nov. 7 on the accusation of the murder of eleven fiancées.

The charge sheet of accusation, comprising 50,000 pages, was communicated to Landru recently for his perusal, according to the law, which reads that the accused may examine all evidence against himself before trial.

Landru, who is a wizard in all legal tricks, immediately pounced on the opportunity to delay matters a little longer and have his trial adjourned. He complained that his eyesight was so weak and his general health so bad that he could not possibly study the vast number of documents in time for the trial, and therefore he suggested a delay.

The magistrate, however, had him examined by prison doctors, who ordered that he should be supplied with a pair of stronger spectacles and be given beef, chicken and porterhouse steaks instead of the usual prison fare of boiled beef and soup.

Another derogation of the usual prison rules was made for this prisoner. He is now being supplied with a special lamp, enabling him to study the documents in the evening.

It is stated that Landru's counsel has received several offers for his client to appear in vaudeville at a huge salary in the event of his acquittal.

TWENTY DROWN IN SCHELDT

ANTWERP, Oct. 30.—Twenty persons were drowned by the capsizing of the steamer August in the Scheldt yesterday. Owing to the shifting of the cargo when the wheel jammed hard aport, the vessel took on a heavy list, went over quickly and sank within a minute or two.

The passengers and crew below had no time to reach the deck. All the passengers and crew above decks were saved. The ship was only about fifty yards from shore when the accident happened.

It is reported that the Captain reached shore and disappeared.

Martial Law in Petrograd.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 30.—Local authorities have placed the port of Petrograd under military control in an effort to prevent pilfering, smuggling of liquors and intoxication. Offenders will be punished by a court-martial. This step was made necessary by workmen concealing quantities of grain, flour and other products in their clothing when they left work.

WILSON'S ENTRY INTO POLITICS

Second Instalment of Joseph P. Tumulty's Intimate Story—The Early Days in New Jersey, When Col. Harvey Was the Democratic Candidate's Chief Backer.

In the first three chapters of Joseph P. Tumulty's story of eleven years' intimate association with Woodrow Wilson, the writer furnishes a background for his authorship, reviewing concisely the steps by which he advanced in New Jersey politics until he became Mr. Wilson's secretary. These three introductory chapters may be summarised as follows:

CHAPTER I.—THE POLITICAL LABORATORY: Mr. Tumulty recalls his early memories of politics in a Jersey City ward, where he listened to the men talk in his father's grocery store. He says that when he grew up he "found in politics that the great policies of a nation are simply the policies and passions of the ward extended."

CHAPTER II.—DOING THE POLITICAL CHORES: The author's official entry into politics began with the financial secretaryship of the Fifth Ward Democratic Club. He chronicles his first campaign speech, for Bryan in 1896, and relates amusingly a story of days and nights spent in preparing his address nominating a bricklayer for a commissionership in the ward convention. His candidate lost, but later he learned that he himself had attracted the favorable attention of the local Democratic machine.

CHAPTER III.—MY FIRST MEETING WITH THE POLITICAL BOSS: Robert Davis, late Democratic leader of Jersey City, caused the election of Mr. Tumulty to the Legislature, where the young man actively opposed the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for United States Senator, after he had heard that the "interests" planned to name Mr. Wilson first for the Senate, then the Governorship, and finally the Presidency. For that opposition he expresses deep regret. In after years Mr. Wilson made it the subject of frequent jesting. The Senatorial nomination went to Edwin E. Stevens, and the speech proposing him was made by Tumulty. The author remarks, in closing the chapter, that "Colonel Harvey, disgruntled but not discouraged, packed up his kit and left on the next train for New York."

Mr. Tumulty was appointed Secretary to the Governor by Governor-elect Wilson in 1910. He went to Washington as Secretary to the President in 1913 and held the post until the end of Mr. Wilson's second term, March 4, 1921.

CHAPTER IV.

COLONEL HARVEY ON THE SCENE.

ALTHOUGH the intrepid Colonel Harvey was defeated in the first skirmish to advance the cause of Woodrow Wilson, he continued to pursue his purpose to force his personal choice upon the New Jersey Democracy. The approaching gubernatorial election of 1910 gave the Colonel his opportunity and he took full advantage of it.

Rumors began to circulate that the machine run by Davis, Smith and Ross, the great Democratic triumvirate of the State, were determined to nominate the Princeton President at any cost. Young men like Mark Sullivan, John Treacy and myself, all of Hudson County, representing the liberal wing of our party, were bitterly opposed to this effort. We suspected the "Old Gang" was up to its old trick of foisting upon the Democrats of the State a tool which they could use for their own advantage, who under the name of the Democratic Party would do the bidding of the corporate interests which had, under both the "regular" organizations, Democratic and Republican, found in New Jersey their most nutritious pastures. At a meeting held at the Lawyers' Club in New York, younger Democrats, like Judge Silzer of Middlesex and myself, "plighted our political troth" and pledged our undying opposition to the candidacy of the Princeton President. As a result of our conferences, we set in motion the progressive machinery of the State in an intensive effort to force the nomination of Judge Silzer in opposition to that of Woodrow Wilson.

As soon as the Democratic boss of Hudson County, Bob Davis, one of the leaders in the Wilson movement in North Jersey, was apprised of the proposed action on our part, he set about to head it off, and as part of his plan of opposition he sent for me in an effort to wean me away from the Silzer candidacy. I refused to yield. Upon being interrogated by me as to his interest in Woodrow Wilson, Boss Davis stated that if we nominated Woodrow Wilson there would be a big campaign fund put up for him by Moses Taylor Pyne, a Trustee of Princeton University. Never before was the ignorance of a boss made more manifest. As a matter of fact, at that very time, there was no more implacable foe of Woodrow Wilson in the State of New Jersey than Moses Taylor Pyne, a leading Trustee of Princeton University, who headed the opposition to Mr. Wilson in the Princeton fight.

Boss Davis's Philosophy.

Years after this incident the President and I often laughed at what must have been the surprise and discomfiture of Boss Davis when he finally learned the facts as to Moses Taylor Pyne's real feelings toward Woodrow Wilson. Previous to the Gubernatorial campaign I asked Boss Davis if he thought Woodrow Wilson would make a good Governor. His reply was characteristic of the point of view of the boss in dealing with these matters of moment to the people of the State. "How the hell do I know whether he'll make a good Governor?" he replied. "He will make a good candidate and that is the only thing that interests me."

Shortly after, those of us who banded together to oppose the bosses in their efforts to force Dr. Wilson upon us, began to feel the pressure of the organization's influence. Many of our friends left us in despair and in fear of the power of the machine. The movement toward Woodrow Wilson in the State was soon in full swing. The Davis-Smith-Nugent-Ross machine was in fine working order on the day and the night of the convention.

I was not even a delegate to the convention, but I was present and kept in close touch by contact with my friends with every phase of the convention fight. Colonel Harvey was again on the scene as the generalissimo of the Wilson forces, quietly and stealthily moving about, lining up his forces, for the memorable battle of the morrow. There was bitter but unorganized opposition to the favorite son of the State machine, Woodrow Wilson. The convention itself presented an unusual situation, and demonstrated more than anything I ever saw the power of the "old gang" to do the thing its masters had in mind. As I look back upon the great event of this convention, the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for the Governorship of New Jersey, I feel that destiny was inscrutably engaged there, working in mysterious ways its wonders to perform, working perhaps through strange, incongruous instrumentalities to bring the man of destiny into action, led by those who were opposed to everything Woodrow Wilson stood for, opposed by those who were yearning for and striving for just the dawn of political liberalism that his advent in politics heralded. The conflict of the Trenton convention about to be enacted was an illustration of the poet's line, "Where ignorant armies clash by night."

The Old Guard's Mistake.

The successful side of the convention was fighting for what they least wanted; the defeated against what they most wanted. Here in this convention, in truth, were present in aggressive action the incongruities of politics, and in full display were witnessed the sardonic contrasts between the visible and the invisible situations in politics—all the Old Guard moving with Prussian precision to the nomination of the man who was to destroy for a time the machine rule in New Jersey and inaugurate a new national era in political liberalism, while all the liberal elements of the State, including fine old Judge Wescott of Camden and young men like myself, were sullen, helpless. Every progressive Democrat in the convention was opposed to the nomination of the Princetonian, and every standpatter and Old Guardsman was in favor of Woodrow Wilson. On the convention floor, dominating the whole affair, stood ex-Senator James Smith Jr. of New Jersey, the spokesman of the "highbrow" candidate for Governor, controlling the delegates from South and West Jersey. Handsome, cool, dignified, he rose from the floor of the convention hall, and in rich, low tones, seconded the nomination of the man "he had never met," the man he would not "presume" to claim acquaintance with, the man whose life had lain in other fields than his. Very close to him, "taking his orders," and acting upon every suggestion that came to him, sat Jim Nugent, grim, big-jawed, the giant fullback of Smith's invincible team, the rising star of machine politics in New Jersey. Down the aisle sat the "Little Napoleon" of Hudson County, Bob Davis, wearing a sardonic smile on his usually placid face, with his big eyes riveted upon those in the convention who were fighting desperately and against great odds the effort of the State machine to nominate President Wilson. Across the aisle from me sat "Plank-Shad" Thompson of Gloucester, big and debonair, a thoroughly fine fellow socially, but always ready to act upon and carry out every tip that came to him from the master minds in the convention—Davis and Smith.

These were the leading actors in this political drama. Behind the lines, in the "offing," was the Insurgent Group, young men like Mark Sullivan and John Treacy of Hudson, stout defenders of the liberal wing in the convention, feeling sullen, beaten and hopelessly impotent against the mass attack of the machine forces. What a political medley was present in this convention—plebeian and patrician, machine man and political idealist—all gathered together and fighting as leading characters and supernumeraries in the political drama about to be enacted.

Not three men outside of the leading actors in this great political drama had ever seen the Princeton professor, although many had doubtless read his speeches. I watched every move from the side lines. The bosses, with consummate precision, moved to the doing of the job in hand, working their spell of threats and coercion upon a beaten, sullen, spiritless body of delegates. One could easily discern that there was no heart in the delegates for the job at hand. To them the active forces in the convention, the Princeton President was indeed a man of mystery. Who could solve the riddle of this political Sphinx? Who was this man Wilson? What were his purposes? What his ideals? These questions were troubling and perplexing the delegates. Colonel Harvey, the commander-in-chief of the Wilson forces, when interrogated by us, refused to answer. How masterfully the Old Guard staged every act of the drama, and thus brought about the nomination of the Princeton President.

Introduced to the Convention.

The convention is at an end. Wilson has been nominated by a narrow margin; the delegates, bitter and resentful, are about to withdraw; the curtain is about to roll down on the last scene. The Chairman, John R. Hardin, the distinguished lawyer of Essex, is about to announce the final vote, when the clerk of the convention, in a tone of voice that reached every part of the hall, announces in a most dramatic fashion: "We have just received word that President Wilson, the candidate for the Governorship, and the next President of the United States, has received word of his nomination; has left Princeton, and is now on his way to the convention." Excellent stage work. The voice of the secretary making this dramatic statement is the voice of Jacob, but the deft hand behind this clever move is that of Colonel Harvey. The announcement literally sets the convention on fire. Bedlam breaks loose. The only sullen and indifferent ones in the hall are those of us who met defeat a few hours before. For us, at least, the mystery is about to be solved. The Princeton professor has left the shades of the university to enter the Elysian fields of politics.

At the time the secretary's announcement was made I was in the rear of the convention hall, trying to become reconciled to our defeat. I then wended my weary way to the stage and stood close to the band, which was busy entertaining the crowd until the arrival of Dr. Wilson. I wanted to obtain what newspaper men call a "close-up" of this man of mystery.

What were my own feelings as I saw the candidate quietly walk to the speaker's stand? I was now to see almost face to face for the first time the man I had openly and bitterly denounced only a few hours before. What reaction of regret, of pleasure, did I experience as I beheld the vigorous, clean-cut, plainly-garbed man, who now stood before me, cool and smiling?

The Speech That Won Them Over.

My first reaction of regret came when he uttered these words:

"I feel the responsibility of the occasion. Responsibility is proportionate to opportunity. It is a great opportunty to serve the State and nation. I did not seek this nomination, I have made no pledge and have given no promises. If elected, I am left absolutely free to serve you with all singleness of purpose. It is a new era when these things can be said, and in connection with this I feel that the dominant idea of the moment is the responsibility of deserving. I will have to serve the State very well in order to deserve the honor of being at its head. • • •

"Did you ever experience the elation of a great hope, that you desire to do right because it is right, and without thought of doing it for your own interest? At that period your hopes are unselfish.

"This in particular is a day of unselfish purpose for democracy. The country has been universally misled and the people have begun to believe that there is something radically wrong. And now we should make this era of hope one of realization through the Democratic Party."

I had another reaction of regret when he said:

"Government is not a warfare of interests. We shall not gain our ends by heat and bitterness." How simple the man, how modest, how cultured! Attempting none of the cheap "plays" of the old campaign orator, he impressively proceeded with his thrilling speech, carrying his audience with him under the spell of his eloquent words. How tense the moment! His words, spoken in tones so soft, so fine, in voice so well modulated, so heart-stirring. Only a few sentences are uttered and our souls are stirred to their very depths. It was not so much what he said, as the simple heart-stirring way in which he said it. The great climax came when he uttered these moving words: "The future is not for parties 'playing politics' but for measures conceived in the largest spirit, pushed by parties whose leaders are statesmen, not demagogues, who love, not their offices, but their duty and their opportunity for service. We are witnessing a renaissance of public spirit, a reawakening of sober public opinion, a revival of the power of the people, the beginning of an age of thoughtful reconstruction that makes our thoughts hark back to the age in which democracy was set up in America. With the new age we shall show a new spirit. We shall serve justice and candor and all things that make for the right. Is not our own party disciplined and made ready for this great task? Shall we not forget ourselves in making it the instrument of righteousness for the State and for the nation?"

Enthusiasm for New Leader.

After this climax there was a short pause. "Go on, go on," eagerly cried the crowd. The personal magnetism of the man, his winning smile, so frank and so sincere, the light of his gray eyes, the fine poise of his well-shaped head, the beautiful rythm of his vigorous sentences held the men in the convention breathless under their mystic spell. Men all about me cried in a frenzy, "Thank God, a leader has come at last!"

Then the great ending. Turning to the flag that hung over the speaker's stand, he said in words so impressive as to bring almost a sob from his hearers:

"When I think of the flag which our ships carry, the only touch of color about them, the only thing that moves as if it had a settled spirit in it in their solid structure—it seems to me I see alternate strips of parchment upon which are written the rights of liberty and justice and strips of blood spilled to vindicate those rights, and then—in the corner—a prediction of the blue serene into which every nation may swim which stands for these great things."

The speech is over. Around me there is a swirling mass of men, whose hearts have been touched by the great speech which is just at an end. Men stood about me with tears streaming from their eyes. Realizing that they had just stood in the presence of greatness, it seemed as if they had been lifted out of the selfish miasma of politics, and, in the spirit of the Crusaders, were ready to dedicate themselves to the cause of liberating their State from the bondage of special interests.

As I turned to leave the convention hall there stood at my side old John Crandall of Atlantic City, like myself a bitter, implacable foe of Woodrow Wilson in the convention. I watched him intently to see what effect the speech had had upon him. For a minute he was silent, as if in a dream, and then drawing himself up to his full height, with a cynical smile on his face, waving his hat and cane in the air, and at the same time shaking his head in a self-accusing way, he yelled at the top of his voice, "Sixty-five years old and still a damn fool!"

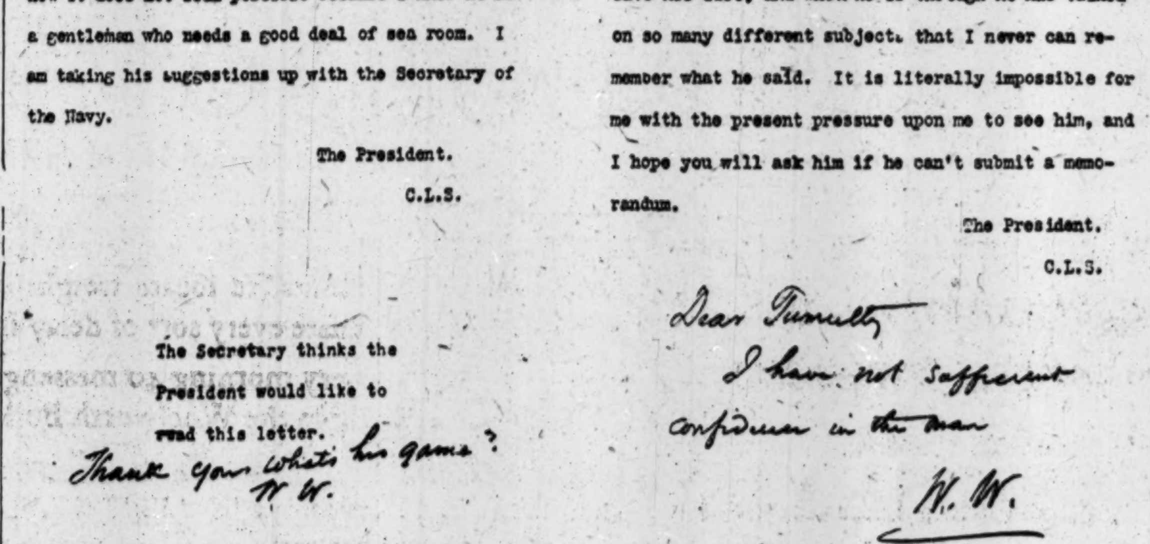
TYPICAL CONFIDENTIAL MEMORANDA FROM WILSON.



Dear Tumulty:

I should like to see Mr. [redacted] but just now it does not seem possible because I know he is a gentleman who needs a good deal of sea room. I am taking his suggestions up with the Secretary of the Navy.

The President.

C.L.S.

Thank you. What's his game?
W. W.

Mr Tumulty:

[redacted] can't talk less than half an hour to save his life, and when he is through he has talked on so many different subjects that I never can remember what he said. It is literally impossible for me with the present pressure upon me to see him, and I hope you will ask him if he can't submit a memorandum.

The President.

C.L.S.

Dear Tumulty
I have not sufficient confidence in the man
W. W.

In Later Instalments of the Tumulty Story, the Intimate Relations of President and Secretary are Illustrated by Many Anecdotes

HISTORY THAT HAS NOT BEEN WRITTEN BEFORE.

Mr. Tumulty's story of Wilson began yesterday in THE NEW YORK TIMES. It will continue every weekday and Sunday until the early part of December.

Woodrow Wilson became the subject of partisan argument all over the country when he stepped from the Democratic leadership of New Jersey into the White House at Washington. From that time his every public act was debated throughout the land, his every decision assailed or praised. Rumors as to his motives or plans were as various as the opinions of his friends and foes. During the early years of the European war and after our own entrance into the struggle, crisis after crisis arose in which the public was not kept informed of what went on behind the scenes. The War President, maintaining necessary secrecy in many vital moves, was surrounded by more and more mystery as the months passed.

Slowly the history of the Wilson epoch is being unfolded. And no writer has thrown such light upon the dominant figure in the White House as does Mr. Tumulty, the secretary who was for eleven years Mr. Wilson's intimate associate.

The Tumulty story is an inside record of stirring events which were only half disclosed to the public. In subsequent chapters the author will tell, among other things, what happened at the White House on the day of the Lusitania tragedy. He will explain why Elihu Root was not taken to the Peace Conference; he will quote the opinions of the War President on many subjects about which diplomatic necessity demanded silence at the time.

Almeida Agrees to Remain As President of Portugal

LISBON, Oct. 30.—President Almeida, speaking from a window in the palace today to a great throng which had congregated for the purpose of urging him not to resign his office, declared that he would retain the post of Chief Executive of the nation. He exhorted everybody to stand by him and aid in upholding Portugal. The President's speech was hailed with great enthusiasm.

The procession which traversed the streets of the city on the way to the palace included several thousand naval, military and civilian representatives, and persons from all of the municipal councils and parishes of the country.

BRITISH EXCHANGE NOTES WITH IRISH

DEBATE IN COMMONS TODAY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—No meeting of the Irish conference is expected before Tuesday, but it is reported that memoranda have been exchanged between the British and Irish delegates defining their position and that on these some questions arose. It is believed that the Sinn Fein delegates are in further communication with the Dail Eireann.

Premier Lloyd George will go to the Commons tomorrow to down the revolt of the "die-hard" Unionists.

LONDON, Oct. 30 (Associated Press).—Efforts have been made during the week-end to prevent a breakdown in the Irish peace conference, but a continuance of the negotiations now seems to depend almost entirely on the willingness of the Ulster authorities to assist in coming into line with the Sinn Fein.

Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, who has professed a desire to work amicably with Southern Ireland in an all-Ireland Council, will, it is said, be offered greatly extended powers for the Northern Parliament, accompanied by a strengthening of the position of the Central Council connecting the two Irish Parliaments, and it is declared to be the belief that he may accept this.

But, it is asserted, Sir James will oppose any curtailment of the area of the Northern Parliament and that he will especially resist any cutting off of the representation of Northeast Ulster in the Imperial Parliament, which he regards as the greatest safeguard for Ulster.

The prevailing belief seems to be in various quarters here that even should there be a breakdown in the present conference the truce in Ireland should continue.

The Observer today urges that there be a definite continuance of the truce for three months, during which time, it declares, Premier Lloyd George might go to Washington and discussions at home might bring about a settlement of the Irish situation. The newspaper adds that the Sinn Fein most unlikely would not object to this expedient, "as the truce so far has strengthened their position, and its only opponents would be the rebellious Unionist Commoners the Premier expects to defeat overwhelmingly in Monday's decision in the House of Commons."

IRISH MOVE TO WASHINGTON.

Transfer Headquarters There to Concentrate on Legislative Program.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—National headquarters of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic will be moved from Chicago to Washington tomorrow, so that the organization may concentrate on its legislative program and be near the centre of such activities, it was announced here today.

One purpose, officers said, was to watch the activities of the conference on the limitation of armaments and take such action as "may seem proper to safeguard the common interests of America and Ireland."

Since the national convention here last April, according to Thomas W. Lyons, National Secretary, the membership has grown to more than 1,000,000 and State organizations have been perfected in forty-five States.

NEW YORK WOMAN HELD IN BALTIMORE

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 30.—Mrs. Josephine Alterio, wife of Frederick Alterio, a rich confectioner of New York, who came to Baltimore with Harry Prucha, a boarder, was located this evening at a hotel here. With them was Mrs. Alterio's daughter, Marguerite, whom the woman had taken from a convent school at White Plains, N. Y. The couple, who had registered as Mr. and Mrs. McKenna, were arrested, the man being charged with violating the Mann white slave law, while the woman was held as a witness.

Mrs. Alterio charges that her husband had neglected her for the last ten years. Some time ago, she said, he went to Europe for a short business trip, but remained away five months. After his return, she said, letters came to the house from women in Italy which contained abundant evidence for divorce. She refrained from suing, she declared, because her husband threatened to take her daughter from her.

Prucha says he is an ironworker and served in France in the World War.

Mrs. Alterio disappeared from her home, 200 East 102d Street, New York, one week ago, and is alleged to have taken jewelry valued at $3,000 and $1,000 in cash. She is 29 years old and her daughter is 10. The husband came to Baltimore last night with Lieutenant Gisselbrecht of the New York Missing Person Bureau.

OPPOSES AMENDMENT.

Ex-Secretary of War Stinson Says Preference Threatens Injustice.

Henry L. Stimson, formerly Secretary of War, who commanded the 305th Artillery Regiment in the Seventy-seventh Division, has written a letter to the Committee Against Veteran Preference opposing the blanket preference for war veterans in the State civil service proposed in Constitutional Amendment 1.

"I am a veteran myself," Mr. Stimson wrote, "and I have keen sympathy with the situation in which many of my comrades found themselves on their return from the war. But the men who will take advantage of the privilege given by this amendment, if it becomes law, will not be merely the men who need help.

"Furthermore, it will utterly tear down the standards of merit in the Civil Service and constitute a serious act of injustice to citizens not in the veteran class, particularly women."

BUILDING RECORDS AT HIGHEST POINT

NEW YORK DISTRICT LEADS

MILLIONS FOR PUBLIC WORK

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Announcement was made by the National Conference on Unemployment tonight that more contracts for building were awarded in the twenty-seven States comprising the northeastern quarter of the United States in September, than in any other month this year, or in any September of which there is a record. This was considered a most encouraging situation. The amount in September was 11.5 per cent. greater than in August.

Secretary Hoover, chairman of the conference, and Colonel Arthur Woods, chairman of the Committee on Community, Civic and Emergency Measures, are keeping in touch with mayors' committees throughout the country, to see in what measure the construction of buildings and improvements to public works and public utilities may help to give immediate work to men who need it. The Public Works Committee is coordinating this information and making it available for any community that desires to call upon it.

These construction statistics include business buildings, educational buildings, hospitals and institutions, industrial buildings, military and naval buildings, public buildings, public works and public utilities, religious and memorial buildings, residential buildings, social and recreational buildings and miscellaneous.

The New York district shows for September the largest contract awards for any month on the records of the F. W. Dodge Company's building statistics. Pittsburgh also shows a substantial increase over August. Chicago's decrease is much less than the normal seasonal decline, whereas Philadelphia's is about equal to the normal decline. Residential building leads all others, but the increase in business buildings is also of great significance, the report states. These figures cover the small towns and rural districts, as well as the large cities.

More Than 10,400 Projects.

Contemplated projects for September in the twenty-seven Northeastern States amounted to 10,455, with a valuation of $318,030,600. Actual building contracts awarded in this month were 8,144, with a valuation of $246,185,800.

From Jan. 1 to Oct. 1 of this year, 57,056 contracts were awarded, valued at $1,740,759,300. Of this amount $599,182,100 was for residential buildings, $369,813,700 for public works and public utilities, $254,237,300 for business buildings, $186,374,700 for educational buildings, and $122,658,900 for industrial buildings. The lowest figure was $5,780,300 for military and naval buildings.

The actual number of residences contracted for in September was 8,185, and in the period from January to October 53,548.

The valuation of this year's contracts, to the first of the present month, was greater than in any previous year within a decade, except 1919 and 1920. Contracts awarded in 1920 amounted to $2,145,353,000; in 1919 to $1,824,990,000; in 1918 to $1,335,526,000; in 1914 to $579,042,000, and in 1910 to $633,001,000.

Boston District (New England States)—Contemplated projects, 1,404, value $22,357,500; contracts awarded, 1,202, value $16,026,000.

New York District (New York State and Northern New Jersey)—Contemplated, 2,550, value $73,255,200; contracts, 1,966, value $69,986,900.

Philadelphia District (Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia, Virginia, North and South Carolina) — Contemplated, 1,739, value $58,293,400; contracts, 1,333, value $34,118,000.

Pittsburgh District (Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee) — Contemplated, 1,264, value $44,005,800; contracts 1,120, value $40,885,100.

Chicago District (Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Missouri, and parts of Eastern Kansas and Nebraska) — Contemplated, 2,757, value $106,484,800; contracts, 2,022, value $58,153,400.

Minneapolis District (Minnesota and North and South Dakota)—Contemplated, 741, value $13,634,100; contracts, 501; value $7,015,500.

One-Half of Projects Not Contracted.

Approximately half of the building projects contemplated for 1920 in twenty-five northeastern States were not contracted.

In educational buildings, hospitals and institutions, public buildings and public works and utilities, there were 13,700 projects contemplated, at a cost of $1,676,843,798, and only 9,556 of these enterprises, costing $812,834,130, were contracted.

"If some of the projects that were planned for last year could be rushed at this time," says the report, "it would help materially in providing jobs for the nation's 4,000,000 men who are out of work, the conference members believe."

To Make Work Permanent.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Efforts of the Administration to solve the nation's unemployment problem, interrupted by the threatened railroad strike, are being redoubled, officials declared tonight. Secretary Hoover, officials said, is expected to call a meeting next week of the standing committee of the National Conference on Unemployment to begin the study of the seasonal and cyclical phases of the question, in line with the perfection of permanent measures for insuring work for the wage-earners.

Studies carried on by this committee, officials asserted, would be designed to prevent sharp variations in the country's employment curve over a period of years by suggesting methods for spreading work opportunity equally over the lean and the fat years.

REVOLUTION IN PARAGUAY.

Buenos Aires Hears That President Gondra Has Resigned.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 30.—A dispatch to La Nación from Asuncion says that President Gondra of Paraguay has handed his resignation to Dr. Felix Paiva, the Vice President, owing to a revolutionary movement by the followers of ex-President Schaerer.

The revolutionaries are reported to have the support of all the troops and police in the capital and country districts. Notwithstanding the apparent turnover of the Government, quiet prevails.

The revolutionary movement was due to the failure of Minister of Interior Guggiari to resign at the demand of the followers of ex-President Schaerer, who insisted upon certain Cabinet changes and also the resignation of President Gondra.

The uprising occurred Saturday evening, and President Gondra announced his resignation early this morning. There has been no fighting.

Through the work of seven seasons, the Neighborhood Playhouse has become that rarity in America, a theatre that commands respect. It is now entering upon its eighth year with a satisfying production of a civilized English play that has waited twelve years for a hearing in New York. On Saturday night Grand Street witnessed the first New York performance of "The Madras House" by Harley Granville Barker.

"The Madras House" has been sitting on our bookshelves long before the author himself drifted over to America in 1914 to do some rather condescending work here as a producer. It slowly became known as the supreme example of a play fashioned only from talk. It acquired through the seasons a legendary reputation for being all well enough in the library but a tedious and undramatic thing in the theatre.

That legend was based on the quick extinction of the piece in the lamentable repertory experiment which the late Charles Frohman tried at his Duke of York's Theatre in London in 1910. Then its genuinely dramatic quality does not, as the French say, leap to the eyes of the average reader, who must try to conjure up for himself the interplay of its too crowded stage. Even the publisher of a 1920 edition of "The Madras House" proudly adorned its jacket with a Chicagoan's description of it as "a little book that calls itself a play." Well, this play that has been obliged for so many seasons to call itself a little book, is now where it belongs—on the stage. There it is so alive and entertaining that it handsomely rewards the Broadwayite who is not afraid to trek as far as 466 Grand Street.

More thoroughly than any other piece that comes to mind, "The Madras House" is a dramatization not of a human being but of a human problem. Its characters drift on and off its scene most casually, but the protagonist that marches through its four abundant acts is not a person. It is a question. How are the brains of the world to be cleared and the work of the world to be done, when that world is necessarily peopled with mutually exciting creatures and its energy so largely devoted to fomenting that excitability? How are adults to live productive, tranquil, ascendant, spacious lives in such a world? Isn't it about time for humanity, by walking out of the barnyard, to show signs of coming of age? Some such variants of the woman question in a man-made world are provoked by every scene of "The Madras House," from the one which presents the six pallid unmarried daughters in a respectable suburban home to the one where the Mohammedan declaims his horror of the great draper's establishment, which herds a very army of unused, cheated womanhood for the making and selling of aphrodisiac gowns to their richer and freer sisters. The play, of course, trails off into nothing, with all its questions unanswered. That is because it is one man's contribution to a discussion that has no end.

"God of Vengeance," by Sholom Ash, will be played in Yiddish at the Irving Place Theatre on Thursday night, with Rudolph Schildkraut as its star.

"We Girls," a new comedy by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, with Mary Young and Juliette Day in the leading roles, is to open Nov. 9 at the Forty-eighth Street Theatre.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 30.—Demand upon the mills for finished steel products has shown no important change in the last week or two. There has been a further slight increase in demand for tubular goods, particular standard pipe and oil country goods, and also a little improvement in structural shapes, while in some lines demand seems to have fallen off a trifle. Sufficient business seems to be reaching the mills to insure a continuance of the present rate of steel production, which, measured in ingots, is at nearer 40 per cent. than 35 per cent. of capacity.

Except for the reduction in rails, there has been no quotable change in prices of the regular finished steel products in the last week. In some lines a slight sagging tendency is to be observed, chiefly by way of Pittsburgh basing being more freely disregard by mills in the East and in the Buffalo district. Structural shapes, however, are reported as being distinctly firmer than a week or two ago. As for the advance of $5 a ton in sheets, undertaken by the majority of independent mills a fortnight ago, that seems to have fallen flat.

The rail reduction is from $45 per gross ton for Bessemer rails and $47 for open-hearth to a price of $40 for either description. The reduction is simply in keeping with declines in other steel products from the Industrial Board's $45 and $47 schedule. The pre-war price of open-hearth rails was $30. It has been recognized for some time past that rails would be reduced for the year 1922, and this expectation was probably one factor in causing railroads to refrain from calling for rails. About 1,500,000 tons was put under contract by the railroads for 1921, and about 1,000,000 tons has been taken out. It is understood that no bargain was struck in advance of the reduction. A consideration in making the reduction at this time was probably the sentimental influence it would have upon the railroad wage matter.

The United States Steel Corporation's earnings statement for the September quarter shows that the steel industry is in decidedly better position than had been assumed; it shows that it is possible to make money in steel in present circumstances. If losses are encountered by some producers, they must be due to special conditions of a temporary character. The corporation's earnings, after payment of interest on subsidiary company bonds, were: July, $5,157,395; August, $6,502,976; September, $7,257,687; total, $18,918,058. These earnings took care of sinking funds, depreciation, Steel Corporation bond interest and nine-tenths of the preferred dividend, the remainder of the preferred dividend as well as all of the common dividend being paid out of surplus.

The earnings were not large in the aggregate, but per ton they were entirely satisfactory. There was a progressive improvement in operations, July showing shipments at about 25 per cent. of capacity, August at about 30 per cent., and September at about 34 per cent. The increases, assisted by the wage reduction of Aug. 29, more than made up for the declining prices, though it should be noted that there was very little decline in prices for September.

There was also a development of economies in operation of various sorts. As September showed the same wage rates and practically the same prices as now prevail, it is typical for comparison. The earnings per tons were fully $15, and this rate would provide very good

Dallas County (Texas) Road District 1 includes the City of Dallas. The total acreage of the county is 540,760. These bonds are direct obligations of the district and sufficient taxes to pay principal and interest are levied in the same manner and at the same time as county and State taxes on all the taxable property in the district, including Dallas.

A syndicate headed by Estabrook & Co., which includes Remick, Hodges & Co.; Halsey, Stuart & Co.; Stacy & Braun, Blodget & Co., Blyth, Witter & Co. and Hannahs, Ballin & Lee are offering at 100 and interest the unsold balance of an issue of State of West Virginia 5 per cent. highway gold bonds, maturities ranging from 1927 to 1939, inclusive.

COMMERCE CALLING FOR MORE BUILDINGS

MONEY COST HAMPERS IT

Chief Menace Now Is Lowered Building Material Supply Against Growing Demand.

Marking off the menace of another transportation tie-up from the list of factors contributing to the retardation of the building industry in the Middle Atlantic States, The Dow Service Daily Building Reports finds only three important barriers still standing on the road to general building prosperity.

These barriers are: Cost of money, cost of labor and another excessive high price era in building materials.

Building investors complain that it costs them too much money to obtain the necessary funds with which to proceed with their building projects, especially in Manhattan. Shrewd investors have been turning their attention toward commercial investments, fearing that if the tax exemption ordinance is given longer life the housing program may be overdrawn. The lending companies say that the need of the hour is still habitation buildings, not office structures, lofts, factories, theatres or institutional buildings.

Investors are taking note, however, of the gradual change for the better in both commerce and industry. They look with satisfaction upon the effort to stimulate business in general by lowering the cost of commercial money. Also they are impressed with the fact that the New York State Department of Labor shows that manufacturing activity during September increased in the State 8½ per cent. The leading industries thus reporting increased employment are food and kindred products, textiles, iron and steel, lumber, stone, clay and glass products, metals and metal products other than iron and steel, chemical and allied products; also railroad repair shops.

The building analyst notes that in these industries there is reflected the increased activity in the purchasing by the public of staples as reported to the mercantile agencies by merchants all through the Middle Atlantic belt. It is interpreted as the definite sign of the passing buyers' strike, so called.

The prospective building investor, seeking building loan accommodation, begins to sense the fact that when the holiday buying season passes, merchants' stocks will require liberal replenishing, industry will then become active and as the Spring renting season approaches there will be a pressure on existing commercial space in Manhattan that will turn many from habitation building investment with its distasteful economic, social and political roorbacks, to more attractive commercial investment undertakings.

Just now this certain turn in construction activity cannot be anticipated, first, because investors complain of the high cost of money; second, the high cost of labor, and third, the danger another era of excessive costs of building materials.

The wage question is to be worked out to full completion within the forthcoming two months under existing arbitration arrangements between the men and their employers, but the building material price situation presents an angle that was not expected to have to be encountered.

One year ago at this time the building material market was passing through the throes of price reduction. It was a harried bid for business at any price.

It was met by a construction reaction reaching almost to the stage of complete estoppage. Today, with materials prices in certain departments either standing still at the lowest level they reached during the late decline or actually advancing, building construction activity has grown to almost record-breaking proportions in Bronx, Brooklyn and Queens for habitational buildings, and in the last two weeks it has even begun to encroach upon the upper west side of Manhattan.

The danger lies in some unexpected influence arising to bring about an inflated demand for materials beyond the capacity of mills to supply them between now and next Spring. The threatened railroad strike might have done it. A fuel strike would bring about the same situation. Severe Winter weather could have such an influence by retarding the haulage of raw materials or fuel to manufacturing plants or by holding back rail or water shipments to the building job.

On the other hand, an open, mild Winter would have the effect of depleting available stocks of seasonable materials like brick, glass, &c. A money stringency would be apt to bring about a situation where supply would be arrested sufficiently long to put a premium upon existing stocks.

These are factors at which experienced building investors are looking as they gauge the building situation of the immediate future. They note with more than passing interest the rising prices of lumber and they are made aware of the tendency of metals to move up.

They know about the difficulty of getting adequate supplies of skilled building labor now, and they know that the economic situation in the United States has a sounder tendeny than it has had since the pre-war days. That trend, if followed, will surely lead, first to commercial construction activity, and then, ultimately, to industrial.

COMMODITY PRICES.

All Foodstuffs Higher, Metals Lower—Advances Outnumber Declines in Week's Review.

For the first time in any of the recent weekly comparisons of the movements of the cash staples in the local wholesale markets, at least as affecting those listed in subjoined table, price advances predominated. Of the eighteen articles listed below ten of these registered advances on the week, four showed declines and four were unchanged. The advances were confined principally to the foodstuffs—grains, groceries, dairy products and lard in the provisions, and spot cotton, while the recessions were in the metals, where lead, copper and tin, straits, sagged. The most striking of the advances was a gain of ⅜ of a cent per pound in coffee, to the year's highest, while both lard and flour moved up from levels approximating year's lowest. Those unchanged included beef, pork, sugar and steel billets.

Following are the cash prices for the principal commodities in the wholesale market at the close of business Saturday, a week before and a year ago:

GENERAL BAKING COMPANY

Notice of Special Meeting of Stockholders

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a special meeting of the stockholders of General Baking Company has been called by the Board of Directors, to be held at the office of the Company, No. 45 East 17th Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 21st day of November, 1921, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of voting upon the following proposals:

First. That all of the shares of stock of the Company (which have a par value of $100 per share), including any authorized but unissued shares, be changed, under the authority conferred by Section 24 of the Stock Corporation Law of New York, into shares of no nominal or par value;

Second. That (in lieu of the shares with a par value of $100 per share which it is now authorized to issue) the number of shares with no nominal or par value that may henceforth be issued by the Company shall be 250,000 shares, of which 100,000 shares with no nominal or par value shall be preferred stock and 150,000 shares with no nominal or par value shall be common stock;

Third. That the preferred stock shall be entitled in preference to the common stock to dividends cumulative from January 1st, 1922 or, if issued thereafter, then from the date of issue, at the rate of $8 per share per annum when and as declared by the Board of Directors. In any distribution of assets other than by dividend from surplus or profits the preferred stock shall also have preference over the common stock until $100 per share and $8 per share per annum from the time of issue shall have been paid thereon by dividends or distribution. The preferred stock shall not receive any dividend in excess of $8 per share per annum nor any such distributions in excess of $100 per share and the amount of accumulated dividends unpaid thereon, but the common stock alone shall receive any further dividends and shares in distribution;

Fourth. That the terms upon which the new shares without nominal or par value shall be issued in place of the outstanding shares of stock shall be as follows:

One share of preferred stock without nominal or par value and one share of common stock without nominal or par value to be issued in place of each share of preferred stock with a par value of $100 outstanding;

Two shares of common stock without nominal or par value to be issued in place of each share of common stock with a par value of $100 outstanding;

Fifth. That the Company, having begun business with a capital of $500, shall carry on business with a stated capital which shall not be less than the aggregate amount of the preference to which all issued and outstanding stock having a preference as to principal is entitled and, in addition thereto, the amount of $5 in respect to every share of stock issued and outstanding other than stock having a preference as to principal and such additional amount as from time to time may by resolution of the Board of Directors of the corporation be transferred thereto;

Sixth. That any authorized shares without nominal or par value, which are not issued in place of the outstanding shares with a par value of $100 per share, may be issued and sold by the Board of Directors for such consideration as from time to time may be fixed by said Board;

Seventh. That the certificate of incorporation of the Company be amended so as to permit the issuance of shares without par value; so as to state the number of shares without par value that may henceforth be issued by the Company, the distinguishing preferences, rights, privileges and restrictions of each class of stock, the terms upon which the new shares without nominal or par value shall be issued in place of the outstanding shares of stock, and the stated capital with which the Company will carry on business; and so as to authorize the Board of Directors to issue shares which are not issued in exchange for outstanding shares; all as above provided;

Eighth. That the President or a Vice-President and the Secretary or Treasurer of the Company be authorized and directed to execute and file the certificate required by said Section 24 of the Stock Corporation Law of New York and designated therein "Certificate of Amendment pursuant to Section 24 of the Stock Corporation Law," which certificate shall recite (among other things) the several amendments to the certificate of incorporation above set forth; and for the transaction of any and all business in connection with said proposals, including any and all modifications or changes thereof that may be necessary or appropriate to accomplish the purpose, and any other business that may properly come before the meeting.

The books for the transfer of the stock of the Company will be closed at the close of business on the 1st day of November, 1921, and will be reopened at the opening of business on the 22nd day of November, 1921.

By order of the Board of Directors.
G. E. FAWCETT,
Secretary.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.—In Bankruptcy.—In the matter of THOMAS F. PLUNKETT, JOHN F. ROBERTSON and JOHN H. DENT, individually and as copartners trading as PLUNKETT, ROBERTSON & CO., alleged bankrupts.

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to an order of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, the undersigned, JOSEPH R. TRUESDALE, receiver in bankruptcy of the above-named bankrupts, offers for sale the property, assets, and effects of the said bankrupts as hereinafter set forth.

1. The stock brokerage office, including fixtures, furniture and other equipment usual in such an office, and consisting of office furniture, chairs, tables, desks, typewriter desks, typewriters, one electric typewriting machine, one electric addressing machine, one adding machine, partitions, bookkeepers' desks, safe, filing cabinets, card index cabinets and stock board, and all other fittings appurtenant thereto. All contained in the premises, 22 Beaver Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

2. Branch stock brokerage office consisting of office furniture and fixtures, table, desk, typewriter desk, chairs, rug, stock board, card cabinets and all other appurtenance thereto, contained in the former office of the bankrupts, 51 East 42d Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

3. The receiver will sell all his right, title and interest in and to the leases, for the above offices at 22 Beaver Street and 51 East 42d Street, respectively.

The above-described property may be inspected on the premises, 22 Beaver Street, from October 26th to October 29th, between the hours of 9 A. M. and 5 P. M.

Bids for the respective offices, together with the leases therefor, and furniture therein contained, may be submitted to the receiver at his office at 149 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City, at or before 12 o'clock noon of October 31st, 1921, at which time and place the bids will be opened by him and creditors may attend and express themselves thereto.

Each bid must be accompanied by a certified check or cash of at least ten per cent. (10%) of the amount of the bid. The receiver reserves the right to reject any and all bids, in which event the said property will be sold at public auction on the premises of 22 Beaver Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York City, by Charles Shongood, auctioneer, on November 2, 1921, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon, and at 51 East 42d Street, on November 2, 1921, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

JOSEPH R. TRUESDALE, Receiver,
149 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.
ABRAHAM ARONSTEIN, Attorney for Receiver, 90 Maiden Lane, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

THE RIDGEWOOD NATIONAL BANK located at Cypress and Myrtle Avenues, in the Borough of Queens, City and State of New York, is closing its affairs. All note holders and other creditors of the Association are, therefore, hereby notified to present the notes and other claims for payment.

Dated, September 1st, 1921.
HENRY A. BOHLEN, Cashier.

The above notice in regard to The Ridgewood National Bank is the legal notice required by law for every national bank going into liquidation or consolidating with another company. We are pleased to advise that The Ridgewood National Bank is now a branch of the MANUFACTURERS TRUST COMPANY, which has resources of approximately $50,000,000, and capital and surplus of $5,000,000. The MANUFACTURERS TRUST COMPANY has two other offices in Brooklyn and two in Manhattan and is in a splendid position to serve its customers to the fullest extent.

NATHAN S. JONAS, President.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Pressure continued low Sunday over the great central valleys and the Gulf States, and there have been rains within the last twenty-four hours in the southern Lake Region, the great central valleys, the Southern Plains States, the east Gulf States and the Atlantic States south of Pennsylvania. Pressure was relatively high and the weather was fair Sunday over practically all other sections.

Indications are for unsettled weather and probably rain almost generally in the States east of the Mississippi River Monday, except in Northern New England and Northern Michigan, and rain will probably continue Tuesday in the Northeastern States. Temperature changes will not be important.

GRAVEYARD MURDER VEILED IN MYSTERY

THREE GIRLS HEAR SHOTS

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH RIVER, N. J., Oct. 30.—The mysterious murder of a man, apparently a Russian, on a lonely wooded road near a small Russian cemetery on the edge of this town, may lead, the authorities think, to some of the Russian radicals who from Paterson south are thick in the clay pits, iron mines and other industries of the State. The man had been shot from behind through the neck, and his body dragged to a bank just off the road.

There was nothing to identify the man tonight, but enough clues were found to warrant the assumption that his identity would soon be learned. A description of the body was sent to the New York police, as marks on the clothing indicated the man came from that city. He was well dressed, his hands indicating that he was not accustomed to hard labor, and his head showed a considerable brain development.

Three little girls were playing near the road this afternoon when they heard three shots from the direction of the cemetery. They waited awhile and then walked up the road along one side of the Russian burial ground. It is a road seldom used. They had not gone far when they saw a pool of blood in a wheel rut, and signs that something had been dragged across the road. Climbing up the bank they saw the body and fled crying down the road to where some men and women were walking.

Three Wounds in Neck and Head.

County Detective Fred David reached the road less than half an hour after the body had been found. The man was lying flat on his back, his coat pulled up under him, showing that he had been dragged out of the road by the legs. His hat was lying near by, and in the road David found three blank shells from an automatic pistol.

There were three wounds in the man's head and neck. The first had evidently been fired from close behind, and had gone through his collar into his neck. Another had gone through his throat from the side, and a third had shattered is jaw. He must have dropped with the first shot, David thought, so that two of the shots were fired while he was lying on the ground.

There was a suggestion of robbery in the fact that something which had been pinned in an inner coat pocket had been torn out, leaving the pin, but the county authorities believed that something more than robbery had been the motive. In one pocket was $1.09 in change and a few keys. There were also a few Russian cigarettes in a leather slip case, and a pair of eyeglasses in a case which bore the name of Dr. U. W. Dandeburgh, 17 West Saratoga Street, Baltimore. There was also a torn slip of paper, with the partial address, "'s Point, Baltimore," which is thought to be Sparrows Point, the big shipbuilding section.

Description of the Body.

The man was about 5 feet 7 inches tall and about 40 years old. His face was round and smooth shaven, with black hair and a high forehead. He was slightly bald. The mustache was a sandy red. He was dressed in a dark suit with a green stripe, wore a brown velour hat, tan shoes and white stockings. He had on a shirt with green and yellow stripes, a blue crocheted necktie, in which was a moonstone.

On the right index finger was a broad plain gold band ring in which were the initials "J. to T. T." On the left hand was a large signet ring with the initials "T. T." David drew from this the conclusion that the man's initials were "T. T." and thought the rings would help to speedily prove his identity. The hat had been purchased at Golden's hat store, Third Avenue and 105th Stret, New York City, and the suit at May's clothing store, in Third Avenue. On the collar and shirt was the laundry mark "D."

Although a number of persons were near the scene of the shooting and arrived at the place within a few minutes after the shots were heard, nobody was seen running away. Three men had been in the vicinity a short time before, but no good description of them was obtained.

Clue Sought Among Russians.

A large number of Russians are employed in industries in this city, in the handkerchief factories, clay pits and brick works. Among them a hunt is being made for some one who may have known the dead man.

There has been no trouble among the Russians here that the local authorities know of, but from time to time little flareups due to political activities have caused trouble in the past. It is felt that possibly the dead man may have incurred the displeasure of some of his compatriots through his political activities, or that he may have been allied with one of the communist organizations which are known to exist in some parts of New Jersey, notably in and near Paterson.

Some of the industrial sections of the State where Russians are employed are known to have been hotbeds of radicalism.

NO CLUES TO LOSEY'S DEATH

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 30.—After three days of investigation the police admitted tonight that they had no clues in the mysterious death of Kenneth R. Losey of Northport, L. I., third year student at Wesleyan University, whose body was found in the Niagara River Thursday night.

Although the medical examiner has issued an official certificate of death by homicide, detectives working on the case have not abandoned their theory that the young man might have committed suicide or might have drowned accidentally. They believe that the wound which the medical examiner says was a stab wound and caused death might have been caused by the grappling hook with which the body was dragged ashore. The medical examiner and his deputy, however, say that the condition of the lungs and other organs proves that Losey was dead before his body entered the water.

Losey's father, who is Superintendent of Schools at Northport, L. I., took the boy's body home today.

MASONS JAM CATHEDRAL.

Grand Lodge Has Annual Services at St. John the Divine.

Hundreds of men and women were unable to get into the Cathedral of St. John the Divine yesterday afternoon for the annual services of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of New York. Every seat was occupied and hundreds had to stand.

Bishop William T. Manning was to have delivered the address of welcome, but was unable to be present, so the Rev. Dr. Howard C. Robbins spoke in his stead. Dr. Robbins characterized masonry as a builder of character. Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, chaplain of the Grand Lodge and pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, also made an address.

A prayer was offered for the members of the lodge who gave their lives in the service of their country.

SALES OF SUGAR TAKE A BIG SPURT

The sugar market was more active last week than in any week since the middle of July. Sales of raw sugar by the Cuban Sugar Commission were estimated at 100,000 tons, while the demand for refined product from consumers and the distributing trade was of such volume that refiners were unable to fill orders promptly and are practically all in an oversold condition, according to reports from the trade.

"For the last several months the usual trade stocks have been practically non-existent," says the current issue of Facts About Sugar, "dealers buying only sufficient sugar to carry them along from day to day. This policy of hand-to-mouth buying has been encouraged by repeated price cuts by refiners in the struggle to capture such business as had to be placed. Under these conditions the refiners had allowed their own stocks, both of raws and of refined, to fall far below their normal extent, and when the increase in demand, which first made its appearance in the Middle West some ten days ago, spread over the country it was found that there was not enough sugar at hand to meet it.

"At the beginning of last week the refiners promptly acquired all raw sugars in nearby positions, and their anxiety to obtain supplies caused an advance of one-sixteenth in the price of Porto Rican and Philippine raws, bringing these to 4.0625 cents a pound.

"The available supply of these sugars was very small, however, and large orders were placed with the Cuban commission for shipment as promptly as possible.

"It was estimated by trade authorities this week that stocks of sugar at the present time are actually lower than a year ago. At that time visible stocks in Cuba were 350,000 tons, against 1,150,000 tons a week ago, but invisible supplies in the United States at the end of October, 1920, were computed at over a million tons, while such stocks this year, as demonstrated by the developments of the past week, are practically exhausted."

PLENTY OF TURKEYS AT LOWER PRICES

So Many for Thanksgiving Day That They Are Selling Below Cost to Raise.

New Yorkers will be gratified to learn that Thanksgiving turkeys this year probably will be from 15 to 20 cents a pound cheaper than last year, retailing in most sections at from 42 to 45 cents a pound. Because of the large number of turkeys this year they are said to be selling for less than it cost to raise them.

Besides the large number of turkeys now ready for market there was on Oct. 1 a total of 2,437,000 pounds of turkey in cold storage, which is about 1,000,000 pounds more than a year ago. In other years considerable fresh turkey has been used, but this year the cold storage supply is still being drawn from. This means that the turkeys will have more time in which to fatten and will be in good condition for the holiday trade.

BODY FOUND NEAR BATTERY

Clothing Picked Up on Shore Belongs to Another Missing Man.

The body of an unidentified man about 45 years old with a rope tied tightly around the neck was discovered floating down the East River off South Ferry last night at 9:20 o'clock by Andrew Kimble, an employe on a Government dredge. The police believe that the man was the victim of foul play and that the body had been in the water for about two months.

Earlier in the day the police reported that some boys playing on the bank of the East River at Hunts Point Avenue found a bundle of clothing, which apparently did not belong to the man found at South Ferry.

Letters found on the clothing bore the name and address, Angelo Scaferetto, 2,454 Belmont Avenue. Also in a pocket was a discharge from the 245th Field Artillery, bearing the same name and dated May, 1919.

The police said last night that Scaferetto had lived with his brother, Genaro Scaferetto, at 2,454 Belmont Avenue, the Bronx. Genaro said that his brother had been in poor health and had left yesterday morning and had not returned. He identified the clothing as that worn by Angelo.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 30.—Practically the whole city of Lewiston, Me., swears by 3-year-old Charlotte Lariver, the child healer, as she is called. They insist that the child drives away pain and cures wounds by simply touching her fingers to the afflicted spot and lisping a short prayer. They say that by the mere laying on of her hand and murmuring "Sainte Anne, cure you," she can cure and has cured toothaches, headaches, rheumatism, colds, coughs, sore throats and other afflictions, and that in the same way she has healed burns, scalds, bruises, scratches and injuries of every description.

They cite the case of Grandma Thibault, who had been doubled up with rheumatism for twenty years and today is as straight as any woman of her years, all because of the child's laying on of hands.

3,023 MILES BY AUTO 'LIFTS'

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 30.—J. K. Christian, a Chicago real estate dealer, has earned a membership in the Adventurers' Club and incidentally has won a bet by begging his way in automobiles 3,023 miles in twenty-seven days, it was announced by club members today.

The wager, that he could travel 100 miles a day for thirty days by asking "lifts" from passing autoists, was made in the Adventurers' Club with Captain F. J. Franklin.

Christian reported his progress daily by post cards. The final post card, showing more than 3,000 miles, covered in twenty-seven days, was dated Lake Charles.

Help to 340,887 persons in the families of disabled war veterans, including the disabled men themselves, was given by the American Red Cross in this State during the last year, according to the annual report made public yesterday at Atlantic Division Headquarters, 44 East Twenty-third Street. The actual financial aid was $566,817 in this State. Throughout the nation the Red Cross is spending about $10,000,000 on service to the disabled men.

Second only to its work with the ex-soldiers the statement places its nursing activities in this. Forty-eight health nurses are now on duty here, an increase of thirty-five during the year.

Other work during the year was the making of garments from discarded clothing for the destitute children of Europe and the organization of Red Cross Disaster Relief Committees in preparation for any emergency.

The fabrics exclusive and of quality,—
The workmanship expert and thorough,—
